> Allegations of physical perpetration of a criminal act by an accused must appear in an indictment. On the other hand, "less detail may be acceptable if the 'sheer scale of the alleged crimes makes it impracticable to require a high degree of specificity in such matters as the identity of the victims and the dates for the commission of the crimes'". Many acts attributed to an accused fall on the spectrum between these two extremes. Individual actions of an accused which contribute to crimes will require more specific notice than proof of the crimes themselves, where they are physically committed by others. The specificity of the notice required is proportional to the extent of the Accused's direct involvement.[68]

Accordingly, the Appeals Chamber is not satisfied that the Trial Chamber understated the requirement that personal actions of the accused be clearly and specifically pleaded in the indictment. The above passage from the Impugned Decision clearly shows that the Trial Chamber was aware of the applicable legal principles.

(c) Sixth Error Alleged

34. The Trial Chamber found that notice of a material fact not included in the indictment could be given through a Prosecution motion for the addition of a witness

> "which was subsequently granted by the Chamber, and which stated the material facts on which the witness would testify."[69]

The Appellant contends that this is an error because the addition of a witness cannot "alter the charges against the Accused as already judicially ratified by the reviewing Judge";[70] if the Prosecution wishes to add new material facts in the charges, it must seek to amend the indictment.[71]

35. The Appeals Chamber reiterates that, while the addition of a charge must necessarily be done through an amendment to the indictment, the omission of material facts from the indictment can in certain circumstances be cured without having to amend the indictment.[72] As to whether notice of a new material fact could be conveyed through a Prosecution motion to add a witness, the Appeals Chamber recalls that, as a general rule:

> Whether the Prosecution cured a defect in the indictment depends, of course, on the nature of the information that the Prosecution provides to the Defence and on whether the information compensates for the indictment's failure to give notice of the charges asserted against the accused. Kupreškić considered that adequate notice of material facts might be communicated to the Defence in the Prosecution's pre-trial brief, during disclosure of evidence, or through proceedings at trial. The timing of such communications, the importance of the information to the ability of the accused to prepare his defence, and the impact of the newly-disclosed material facts on the Prosecution's case are relevant in determining whether subsequent communications make up for the defect in the indictment. As has been previously noted, "mere service of witness statements by the [P]rosecution pursuant to the disclosure requirements" of the Rules does not suffice to inform the Defence of material facts that the Prosecution intends to prove at trial.[73]

In determining whether a defective indictment was cured by timely, clear and consistent information, the Appeals Chamber has looked to the Prosecution pre-trial brief (together with its annexes and chart of witnesses)[74] or the Prosecution's opening statement.[75] However, the Appeals Chamber never suggested that defects in the indictment could only be cured through the Prosecution pre-trial brief or its opening statement. The Appeals Chamber cannot exclude the possibility that a defect in the indictment could be cured through a Prosecution motion for addition of a witness, provided any possible prejudice to the Defence was alleviated by, for example, an adjournment to allow the Defence time to prepare for cross-examination of the witness. Accordingly, the Appeals Chamber is not convinced that the Trial Chamber erred in stating that although disclosure of witness statements or potential exhibits are generally insufficient to put an accused on reasonable notice, a defect in the indictment could be cured by the information conveyed in a Prosecution motion to add a witness, which clearly states the material facts on which the witness would testify.

(d) Seventh Error Alleged

36. The Trial Chamber found that when a new material fact is discovered at trial, the fairness of the proceedings against the accused may be preserved by granting a lengthy adjournment for the express purpose of allowing the Defence to meet the newly discovered material fact.[76] The Appellant submits that this is in error because simply granting an adjournment does not permit the Defence to know what use will be made of the newly discovered evidence; it is only once the Prosecution seeks an amendment of the indictment that the Defence will have the opportunity to respond and argue the issue.[77]

37. In Kupreškić, the Appeals Chamber emphasized that > the Prosecution is expected to know its case before it goes to trial. It is not acceptable for the Prosecution to omit the material aspects of its main allegations in the indictment with the aim of moulding the case against the accused in the course of the trial depending on how the evidence unfolds. There are, of course, instances in criminal trials where the evidence turns out differently than expected. Such a situation may require the indictment to be amended, an adjournment to be granted, or certain evidence to be excluded as not being within the scope of the indictment.[78]

Thus, when a new material fact is discovered at trial, the Trial Chamber should determine which measure(s) are required in the circumstances of the case to preserve the fairness of the proceedings. If the Trial Chamber decides that an adjournment is warranted, it could also order the Prosecution to amend the indictment for greater clarity, but this might not be required in every case. Accordingly, the Appeals Chamber does not find that the Trial Chamber erred in stating at paragraph 10 of the Impugned Decision that the accused was put on reasonable notice of material facts omitted from the indictment where

> "a lengthy adjournment was ordered by the Chamber for the express purpose of allowing the Defence to meet newly discovered material facts."

IV. Timeliness of objections to evidence for lack of notice (Paragraph 7 of the Impugned decision)

38. In paragraph 7 of the Impugned Decision, the Trial Chamber held that, when evidence is adduced that purportedly goes beyond the allegations in the indictment, the Defence must raise an objection "contemporaneously with the introduction of the evidence"; if the Defence raises its objection later during trial, it bears the burden of proving that its ability to prepare its case was materially impaired.[79] The Appellant submits that this is erroneous.

39. At the outset, the Appeals Chamber notes that the Parties made several arguments relating not to the statements made in paragraph 7 of the Impugned Decision but rather to their concrete application.[80] This goes beyond the scope of the certification, and these arguments will not be considered.

A. Submissions of the Parties

40. In the Appellant's view, the Trial Chamber considered, erroneously, that > "nothing less than a contemporaneous objection, at or very near the time the impugned evidence is offered is a sufficiently timely form of objection."[81]

The Appellant submits that the recent jurisprudence of the Appeals Chamber shows that pre-trial objections, objections in Rule 98 bis proceedings, and even objections in closing arguments, when taken together, are sufficient to maintain the burden of proof on the Prosecutor to show lack of prejudice to the Defence.[82] In fact, argues the Appellant, it may not always be possible to object to the evidence at the time it is adduced since the purpose in adducing the evidence may become clear only later (for instance, through a motion to amend the indictment or in the Prosecution's closing brief).[83]

41. The Prosecution responds that the statements made in paragraph 7 of the Impugned Decision are consistent with the principles set out in the Niyitegeka Appeal Judgement, according to which the Defence must interpose a specific objection at the time the evidence is introduced.[84] The Prosecution submits that blanket objections or generalized claims of lack of notice and prejudice cannot be considered as sufficient and specific.[85] The Prosecution also contends that the determination of whether a timely and appropriate objection has been made is a case-specific exercise, and that the Appellant's reliance on the Appeals Chamber's pronouncements in other cases is thus unhelpful.[86]

B. ANALYSIS

42. In support of its findings at paragraph 7 of the Impugned Decision, the Trial Chamber cited parts of paragraphs 199 and 200 of the Niyitegeka Appeal Judgement. It is useful to reproduce the entire discussion in Niyitegeka :

> In considering whether a defect in the indictment has been cured by subsequent disclosure, the question arises as to which party has the burden of proof on the matter. Although the Judgement in Kupreškić did not address this issue expressly, the Appeals Chamber's discussion indicates that the burden in that case rested with the Prosecution. Kupreškić stated that, in the circumstances of that case, a breach of "the substantial safeguards that an indictment is intended to furnish to the accused" raised the presumption "that such a fundamental defect in the … Indictment did indeed cause injustice." The defect could only have been deemed harmless through a demonstration "that [the Accused's] ability to prepare their defence was not materially impaired." Kupreškić clearly imposed the duty to make that showing on the Prosecution, since the absence of such a showing led the Appeals Chamber to "uph[o]ld the objections" of the accused.
> It is noteworthy, however, that Kupreškić specifically mentioned the fact that the accused in that case had made a timely objection before the Trial Chamber to the admission of evidence of the material fact in question. In general, "a party should not be permitted to refrain from making an objection to a matter which was apparent during the course of the trial, and to raise it only in the event of an adverse finding against that party." Failure to object in the Trial Chamber will usually result in the Appeals Chamber disregarding the argument on grounds of waiver. In the case of objections based on lack of notice, the Defence must challenge the admissibility of evidence of material facts not pleaded in the indictment by interposing a specific objection at the time the evidence is introduced. The Defence may also choose to file a timely motion to strike the evidence or to seek an adjournment to conduct further investigations in order to respond to the unpleaded allegation.
> The importance of the accused's right to be informed of the charges against him under Article 20 (4) (a) of the Statute and the possibility of serious prejudice to the accused if material facts crucial to the Prosecution are communicated for the first time at trial suggest that the waiver doctrine should not entirely foreclose an accused from raising an indictment defect for the first time on appeal. Where, in such circumstances, there is a resulting defect in the indictment, an accused person who fails to object at trial has the burden of proving on appeal that his ability to prepare his case was materially impaired. Where, however, the accused person objected at trial, the burden is on the Prosecution to prove on appeal that the accused's ability to prepare his defence was not materially impaired. All of this is of course subject to the inherent jurisdiction of the Appeals Chamber to do justice in the case.[87]

[86] Response, paras 19-20.
[87] Niyitegeka Appeal Judgement, paras 198-200 (footnotes omitted).

43. As the above illustrates, the Niyitegeka Appeal Judgement outlined a carefully balanced approach taking into account, on the one hand, the principle that > "a party should not be permitted to refrain from making an objection to a matter which was apparent during the course of trial, and to raise it only in the event of an adverse finding against that party"[88] and, on the other hand,

> "the importance of the accused's right to be informed of the charges against him under Article 20 (4) (a) of the Statute and the possibility of serious prejudice to the accused if material facts crucial to the Prosecution are communicated for the first time at trial."[89]

44. In Niyitegeka, the Appeals Chamber was concerned with the situation of an appellant who had failed to object to the lack of notice at trial, and had raised the issue for the first time on appeal.[90] The present appeal contemplates a different situation: the objection is not raised at the time the evidence is presented, but it is nonetheless raised at the trial stage. This is a crucial difference: the objection is not as late as if it had been raised only on appeal, and there might be more elements militating against a conclusion that the objection was not timely raised. For instance, the objection might not have been raised at the time the evidence was adduced because the purpose for adducing the evidence might have become clear only later.

45. Accordingly, when an objection based on lack of notice is raised at trial (albeit later than at the time the evidence was adduced), the Trial Chamber should determine whether the objection was so untimely as to consider that the burden of proof has shifted from the Prosecution to the Defence in demonstrating whether the accused's ability to defend himself has been materially impaired. In doing so, the Trial Chamber should take into account factors such as whether the Defence has provided a reasonable explanation for its failure to raise its objection at the time the evidence was introduced and whether the Defence has shown that the objection was raised as soon as possible thereafter.

46. In summary, objections based on lack of notice should be specific and timely. The Appeals Chamber agrees with the Prosecution that blanket objections that "the entire indictment is defective" are insufficiently specific.[91] As to timeliness, the objection should be raised at the pre-trial stage (for instance in a motion challenging the indictment) or at the time the evidence of a new material fact is introduced. However, an objection raised later at trial will not automatically lead to a shift in the burden of proof: the Trial Chamber must consider relevant factors, such as whether the Defence provided a reasonable explanation for its failure to raise the objection earlier in the trial.

47. The Appeals Chamber finds that the statements made by the Trial Chamber at paragraph 7 of the Impugned Decision must be corrected to the extent explained above. As a consequence, the Trial Chamber should reconsider the Impugned Decision on this basis. This reconsideration will be limited to the instances where the Trial Chamber found that the objection had not been raised at the time the evidence was introduced and therefore concluded that the burden of proof had shifted to the Defence.

V. Conclusion

48. The Appeals Chamber finds that even if a Trial Chamber finds that the defects in the indictment have been cured by post-indictment submissions, it should consider whether the extent of the defects in the indictment materially prejudices the accused's right to a fair trial by hindering the preparation of a proper defence. The Appeals Chamber instructs the Trial Chamber to reconsider the Impugned Decision on this basis. In all other respects, the Appeals Chamber is of the view that the Trial Chamber did not err in its articulation of the principles at paragraph 10 of the Impugned Decision. As to paragraph 7 of the Impugned Decision, the Appeals Chamber has outlined the approach that should be taken in deciding whether an objection for lack of notice has been timely raised, and, consequently, who bears the burden of proof on this question. The Appeals Chamber instructs the Trial Chamber to reconsider the Impugned Decision to the extent described above.

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED of the "Requête … sollicitant une ordonnance de transfert", etc., filed by the Bagosora Defence on 14 September 2006;

CONSIDERING the Prosecution Response, filed on 15 September 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

1. The Bagosora Defence requests an order for the temporary transfer of one of its witnesses, Jean Kambanda, to the Detention Unit of the Tribunal in Arusha for the purpose of testifying before the Chamber. Mr. Kambanda is serving a life sentence of this Tribunal in the Republic of Mali.[1] He testified before the Chamber on 11, 12 and 13 July 2006, before the balance of his testimony was postponed pending resolution of a motion for the exclusion of parts of his testimony or for severance.[2] The Bagosora Defence requests that he be available in Arusha for the continuation of his testimony as of 2 October 2006, to be completed before the end of the present trial session on 13 October 2006. The Prosecution does not oppose the request, but asks that the testimony be heard as soon as practicable and that the order should continue in effect until the completion of the witness's testimony, whenever that may be.

2. Rule 90 bis (B) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence sets two conditions for such an order: first, that and second, that the "[t]ransfer … does not extend the period of his detention as foreseen by the requested State". Furthermore, Article 4 of the agreement between the United Nations and the Republic of Mali specifically provides for the temporary transfer of a detained person for the purpose of giving testimony, provided that the detainee is not required for criminal proceedings in Mali.[3]

> "the detained witness is not required for any criminal proceedings in progress in the territory of the requested State during the period the witness is required by the Tribunal";

3. The Chamber has been advised by the Registry that Mr. Kambanda is not required for criminal proceedings in Mali during the proposed period of transfer. The first condition, therefore, is satisfied. As Mr. Kambanda is serving a life sentence, there is no scope for the application of the second condition. The precise timing of the witness's testimony is a different matter. The Chamber will, however, take into account the view of the Bagosora Defence that the witness should not continue his testimony until the return of Lead Counsel to Arusha, on or about 2 October 2006.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

ORDERS, conditional upon the agreement of the Government of Mali, that Jean Kambanda shall be temporarily transferred to the Detention Unit as soon as possible and returned no later than 30 October 2006, pursuant to Rule 90 bis of the Rules;

REQUESTS the Government of Mali to facilitate the transfer in cooperation with the Registrar and the Government of Tanzania;

INSTRUCTS the Registrar to:

(A) transmit this decision to the Governments of Mali and Tanzania;

(B) ensure the proper conduct of the transfer, including the supervision of the witnesses in the Tribunal's detention facilities;

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the "Ntabakuze Motion Requesting an Order for a Subpoena", filed on 14 September 2006;

CONSIDERING the Prosecution Response and the Defence "Submissions", both filed on 18 September 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

Introduction

1. The Ntabakuze Defence requests a subpoena for the appearance of a serving colonel in the French military to give testimony before this Chamber. This request follows the receipt of a letter from the Government of France indicating that the colonel is available to testify, but only under certain conditions. After being advised that the procedure proposed by the French Government had been substantially followed during the testimony of a French officer before the International Criminal Tribunal for Yugoslavia, the Defence declared that it was > "prepared to accept any measures that the Chamber may deem in its discretion, to be reasonable and warranted, under the circumstances".[1]

2. Aside from insisting that the witness's appearance cannot be used to postpone the deadline for the end of the Defence case, the Prosecution took "no other position on the merits of the Motion".[2]

Deliberations

3. The French Government proposes five conditions for the appearance of the colonel: (i) that the testimony be heard in closed session; (ii) non-disclosure of the witness's identity; (iii) limiting the scope of examination to matters already covered during a previous interview of the witness, and the same limitation on cross-examination; (iv) the presence of a representative of the Government of France in the proceedings who is authorized to assert a national security privilege; and (v) non-disclosure of the witness's testimony to any party to another proceeding.[3] The letter from the Government of France invokes national security as the basis for these requests.

4. No party to these proceedings has opposed the requests. The Defence has pointed out certain factual differences between the present case and the precedent before the ICTY, but accepts that the general statements of law are applicable to the present case. It has also emphasized that any limitation on cross-examination should not adversely affect the Chamber's ability to assess the witness's credibility. Ultimately, however, the Defence:

> wishes to emphasize that it is prepared to accept any measures that the Chamber may deem, in its discretion, to be reasonable and warranted, under the circumstances. Our main concern is to have the witness testify in a timely manner to the contents of the questionnaire which he has already answered in the presence of the French authorities, in accordance with the usual French procedure, with which the Ntabakuze Defence has scrupulously complied.[4]

5. In the absence of any objection, the Chamber considers the proposed requests to be acceptable in the circumstances, and finds them permissible under the Rules of Procedure and Evidence. Both parties have, in effect, declared that they have no objection to the limitations on the scope of the examination and cross-examination proposed by the French Government. Furthermore, as this is a Defence witness, such limitations do not impair the rights of the Accused. On the contrary, strict insistence on the usual procedures for disclosure and the scope of cross-examination could lead to the testimony not being heard by the close of the Defence case, which would serve the interests of neither the Accused, nor justice. The Chamber has the power to order non-disclosure of the witness's testimony under Rules 53, 54, 75 and 79. Indeed, the very conditions proposed here were previously accepted by a Trial Chamber of the ICTY in Blaskić.[5] This Chamber has itself previously permitted the presence of representatives from a national government to assist a witness under similar circumstances.[6] However, as in the Blaskić case, it must be the Chamber which resolves any disputes as to the proper scope of questioning which may arise during the testimony.

6. The measures granted in the present instance must be understood as exceptional. The Government of France has invoked national security and appears to have a credible basis for making that claim.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the request for subpoena, in light of the willingness of the Government of France to make the witness available to testify;

DECLARES that (i) the testimony be heard in closed session; (ii) the witness's identity will not be disclosed; (iii) examination and cross-examination shall be limited to matters already covered during previous interviews of the witness; (iv) a representative of the Government of France may be present during proceedings and may request that the witness be relieved from answering questions on the grounds of national security; and (v) the witness's testimony shall not be subject to disclosure to any party in another proceeding.

Théoneste Bagosora et al., Decision on Nsengiyumva Motion for Witness Higaniro to Testify by Video-Conference, 29 August 2006 (ICTR-98-41)

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the "Requête … visant la coopération du Royaume de Belgique", filed by the Bagosora Defence on 20 September 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the request.

1. The Bagosora Defence asks the Chamber to issue a request to the Government of Belgium to permit an interview with Alphonse Higaniro, a person now in detention in Belgium, who is scheduled to testify on behalf of the Nsengiyumva Defence in early October. The Defence indicates that such a meeting is for the purpose of determining whether it wishes to cross-examine the witness.

2. Article 28 of the Statute imposes an obligation on States to

> "cooperate with the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda in the investigation and prosecution of persons accused of committing serious violations of international humanitarian law".

A request to a Chamber to make an order under Article 28 must set forth the nature of the information sought; its relevance to the trial; and the efforts that have been made to obtain it. The type of assistance sought should also be defined with particularity.[1]

3. This Chamber has previously found that Mr. Higaniro may have information relevant to this trial.[2] Colonel Bagosora is said to have been present on one of the occasions on which Mr. Higaniro may be able to give testimony.[3] The correspondence appended to the motion shows that the Defence has tried to arrange the interview without recourse to the Chamber, but that Belgian law requires an order under Article 28 for such an interview to be permitted. Accordingly, the Chamber finds that the conditions for the issuance of a request under Article 28 are satisfied.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

RESPECTFULLY REQUESTS the Kingdom of Belgium to provide any relevant assistance in facilitating a meeting between the Bagosora Defence and Mr. Alphonse Higaniro; DIRECTS the Registry to transmit this decision to the relevant authorities of the Kingdom of Belgium.

1. The Appeals Chamber of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighboring States, between 1 January and 31 December 1994 ("Appeals Chamber" and "Tribunal", respectively) is seized of an interlocutory appeal[1] filed jointly by Anatole Nsengiyumva and Gratien Kabiligi ("Appellants") against a decision of Trial Chamber I,[2] ("Impugned Decision") dismissing Mr. Nsengiyumva's request for the disclosure of documents pursuant to Rule 66 (B) of the Tribunal's Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("Rules").

Background

2. In April 2005, soon after the defence cases in this case commenced, the Prosecution disclosed that it had documents related to the immigration, refugee, and asylum status of certain defence witnesses that it intended to use during cross-examination for impeachment purposes.[3] On 16 May 2005, one of the Appellants, Mr. Nsengiyumva, requested the disclosure of this material,[4] in part, based on Rule 66 (B) of the Rules.[5] On 27 September 2005, the Trial Chamber denied this request and held that the Prosecution would make such documents available at the time of cross-examination in conformity with the normal practice in the case.[6]

3. The Appellants sought certification to appeal the Impugned Decision, which the Trial Chamber granted on 22 May 2006.[7] The Appellants filed their joint appeal brief on 29 May 2006. The Prosecution responded on 8 June 2006,[8] and the Appellants replied on 12 June 2006.[9]

4. The Appellants argue that in reaching the Impugned Decision the Trial Chamber erred in its interpretation of Rule 66 (B) and took account of extraneous considerations, such as the ability of the Appellants to obtain the documents themselves.[10] They submit that the immigration documents are essential in assisting them to assess the potential credibility of their case.[11] Consequently, the Appellants contend that they are being denied the right to make a full answer and defence to the

[4] Based on Nsengiyumva's request, the Trial Chamber described this material as follows: "The Defence motion describes the requested materials as materials, documents, correspondence and any papers in [the Prosecution's] possession, control and/or custody that relate to immigration status and/or records of (i) Witness LIG-2; (ii) Defence Witness LT-1; (iii) any other Defence witnesses on the Nsengiyumva defence list in respect of whom inquiries into immigration, asylum and or refugee status may have been made; and (iv) any potential defence witnesses. According to the motion, such materials include, but are not limited to, any enquiry or correspondence from the Prosecution to any host country; any response from a host country thereto; documents forwarded in such correspondence; and documents relating to immigration, refugee status or record of proceedings relating thereto as disclosed by the host country, UNHCR or any other organization." charges against them without the requested disclosure.[12] The Appellants seek an order compelling the Prosecution to disclose the documents in question.[13]

5. The Prosecution responds that the Appellants cite no legal authority in support of their reading of Rule 66 (B).[14] The Prosecution further refers to domestic legal provisions and national case law in support of the Trial Chamber's approach.[15] The Prosecution disputes that the Trial Chamber relied on any extraneous considerations in interpreting Rule 66 (B), such as the ability of the defence to obtain the documents, and notes that this observation referred simply to the lack of prejudice in the present case.[16] In their Reply, the Appellants primarily attempt to distinguish the national case law referred to by the Prosecution.[17]

Discussion

6. In this decision, the Appeals Chamber considers whether the Trial Chamber erred in denying the request for disclosure under Rule 66 (B) of the Rules.[18] As the Impugned Decision relates to the general conduct of trial proceedings, this is a matter that falls within the discretion of the Trial Chamber.[19] A Trial Chamber's exercise of discretion will be reversed only if the challenged decision was based on an incorrect interpretation of governing law, was based on a patently incorrect conclusion of fact, or was so unfair or unreasonable as to constitute an abuse of the Trial Chamber's discretion.[20]

7. Rule 66 (B) of the Rules provides for the inspection of certain items which are: (1) "material to the preparation of the defence case", or (2) "intended for use by the Prosecution as evidence at trial".[21] The Trial Chamber ruled that the immigration documents did not fall into either of these categories.[22] It reasoned that the immigration documents were not "material to the preparation of the defence case" because they did not counter the Prosecution's evidence presented during its case-in-chief, but rather concerned the credibility of defence evidence.[23] In addition, for the Trial Chamber, the immigration documents did not constitute material intended for use by the Prosecution at trial because, in its view, this category refers only to evidence for use during the Prosecution's case-in-chief, which is closed.[24]

[12] Appeal, paras. 34-41. At trial, Mr. Nsengiyumva's fair trial claims also included allegations related to witness intimidation and endangerment. Appeal, para. 6. The Appellants do not address these arguments on appeal and instead focus on their ability to assess the potential credibility of their case.

[18] Rule 66 (B) refers to permitting "inspection". Nonetheless, the provision imposes a disclosure obligation on the Prosecution in the sense of making information available to the Defence. That it is a disclosure obligation in this general sense is reflected in the title of Rule 66, "Disclosure of Materials by the Prosecutor" as well as the language of Rule 66 (C) which refers to Prosecution ability to apply to a Trial Chamber in certain circumstances to be relieved from the obligation "to disclose pursuant to Sub-Rules (A) and (B)". The use of the term "inspection" in Sub-Rule (B) simply relieves the Prosecution from providing copies of requested items to the Defence, though a Trial Chamber may nonetheless issue an order this end.

[21] Rule 66 (B) states in full: "At the request of the Defence, the Prosecutor shall, subject to Sub-Rule (C), permit the Defence to inspect any books, documents, photographs and tangible objects in his custody or control, which are material to the preparation of the defence, or are intended for use by the Prosecutor as evidence at trial or were obtained from or belonged to the accused."

[24] Impugned Decision, paras. 5, 6.

8. The Appellants contend that, in reaching this conclusion, the Trial Chamber adopted an unduly restrictive interpretation of Rule 66 (B) of the Rules contrary to its plain meaning.[25] The Appeals Chamber agrees. The language of Rule 66 (B) does not support the Trial Chamber's restrictive approach. The Prosecution refers extensively to domestic legal provisions, in particular United States Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 16 (a) (1) (E),[26] in support of the Trial Chamber's approach.[27] However, the Appeals Chamber considers the meaning of Rule 66 (B) to be sufficiently clear so as not to require resort to domestic legal provisions in determining its scope.[28] The Appeals Chamber routinely construes the Prosecution's disclosure obligations under the Rules broadly in accord with their plain meaning.[29] Nothing in Rule 66 (B) limits an accused's right to inspection only of material related to the Prosecution's case-in-chief.[30] Rather, this Rule uses much broader language: "material to the preparation of the defence case" and "intended for use … at trial".

9. The Appellants seek material potentially falling under both categories.[31] In accord with the plain meaning of Rule 66 (B) of the Rules, the test for materiality under the first category is the relevance of the documents to the preparation of the defence case. Preparation is a broad concept and does not necessarily require that the material itself counter the Prosecution evidence.[32] Indeed, for the Appellants, the immigration documents are material to the preparation of their defence because these documents may improve their assessment of the potential credibility of their witnesses before making a final selection of whom to call in their defence.[33] The Appeals Chamber cannot exclude that this is an appropriate basis for authorizing the inspection of documents if the requisite showing is made by the defence. There are few tasks more relevant to the preparation of the defence case than selecting witnesses.[34] The Trial Chamber is the appropriate authority to make this case-specific assessment in the first instance under the appropriate standard. Moreover, the use of the phrase "at trial" in the

[26] This provision reads: "Upon a defendant's request, the government must permit the defendant to inspect and to copy or photograph books, papers, documents, data, photographs, tangible objects, buildings or places, or copies or portions of any of these items, if the item is within the government's possession, custody, or control and: (i) the item is material to preparing the defense; (ii) the government intends to use the item in its case-in-chief at trial; or (iii) the item was obtained from or belongs to the defendant." This rule was amended in 2002, and what was previously sub-part (C) – which is the reference cited by the Prosecution and the Trial Chamber (Impugned Decision paras. 6, 7; Prosecution Response, para. 12) – was moved with minor amendments to sub-part (E).

[28] This was the same approach taken by the ICTY Appeals Chamber in interpreting the scope of Rule 68. See The Prosecutor v. Radislav Krstić Case N°IT-98-33-A, Judgement, 19 April 2004, para. 179 ("Krstić Appeal Judgement").

[29] The Prosecutor v. Edouard Karemera et al., Case N°ICTR, 98-44-A73.7, Decision on Interlocutory Appeal Regarding the Role of the Prosecutor's Electronic Disclosure Suite in Discharging Disclosure Obligations, 30 June 2006, paras. 9-13 ("Karemera Appeal Decision"). See also Krstić Appeal Judgement, para. 180; The Prosecutor v. Tihomir Blaškić, Case N°IT-95-14-A, Judgement, 20 July 2004, paras. 265, 266 ("Blaškić Appeal Judgement").

[30] In contrast, United States Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 16 (a) (1) (E) expressly states that the government's disclosure obligation is limited to items to be used in its "case-in-chief". The United States Supreme Court in turn seized on this language to similarly restrict the category "material to preparing the defense" as well to preparations to counter the government's case-in-chief. See United States v. Armstrong, 517 U.S. 456, 462 (1996). It is significant that the Tribunal's Rules omit this reference in favour of a more broad formulation.

[31] In addition to prior statements, which could be used for impeachment purposes and possibly tendered as exhibits, the Appellants seek disclosure of a broader category of material, extending to correspondence between the Prosecution and state authorities. See Impugned Decision, para. 3, footnote 4 (quoted supra).

[32] Indeed, even under United States Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 16, which is limited to disclosure on matters material to the preparation of the defence against the prosecutor's case-in-chief, evidence is material "as long as there is a strong indication that it will play an important role in uncovering admissible evidence, aiding witness preparation, corroborating testimony, or assisting impeachment or rebuttal." See United States v. Marshall, 132 F.3d 63, 68 (D.C. Cir. 1998) (emphasis added). Further, it also extends to some extent to information which might dissuade a defendant from pursuing an unmeritorious defence. Id.

[34] The Prosecution counters that providing possible impeachment material to the defence obviates the purpose of cross-examination and will only result in contrived and perjured testimony. Prosecution Response, para. 9. The Appeals Chamber disagrees. In the present case, the Appellants appear to be seeking disclosure precisely to avoid putting questionable witnesses on the stand. Moreover, the Prosecution still retains the ability to raise questions during cross-examination concerning the witness's preparation in light of the disclosure and make relevant arguments in its final submissions.

second category of Rule 66 (B) signals its applicability throughout the proceedings.[35] As such, at least some of the immigration documents sought are equally subject to inspection to the extent that they are intended as exhibits at trial.

10. The Appeals Chamber observes that this plain reading of Rule 66 (B) of the Rules does not create a broad affirmative obligation on the Prosecution to disclose any and all documents which may be relevant to its cross-examination, as suggested by the Trial Chamber.[36] Rule 66 (B) is only triggered by a sufficiently specific request by the defence,[37] which in turn engages reciprocal disclosure obligations on the defence's part under Rule 67 (C). In this case, as the Trial Chamber recognized, the defence sought a precise category of documents, namely immigration-related material, admittedly in the possession of the Prosecution.[38]

11. In addition, the Trial Chamber observed in the Impugned Decision that the defence was aware of the identity and residence of its witnesses and thus was capable of undertaking its own investigations for the material.[39] The Appellants contend that this is an irrelevant consideration and an error of law.[40] The Prosecution responds that the decision was not based on this observation.[41] The Appeals Chamber, for its part, cannot discern whether the Trial Chamber's observation was a basis for denying the motion. Nonetheless, in the Appeals Chamber's view, there is no requirement for the defence to make independent efforts to obtain material prior to receiving requested disclosure under the Rules. A request under Rule 66 (B) is one of the methods available to the defence for carrying out investigations.

12. Finally, the Appeals Chamber notes that the Impugned Decision in fact provided for the disclosure of at least some of the requested material, the documents intended as exhibits, at the time of cross-examination.[42] This framework may be appropriate in some circumstances for certain material. The Appeals Chamber affirms that the Trial Chamber is best placed to determine both the modalities for disclosure and also what time is sufficient for an accused to prepare his defence based on the timing of such disclosure.[43] It is evident, however, that disclosure at the time of cross-examination is insufficient to the extent, as in this case, that the requested materials are intended to assist the defence select its witnesses.

Conclusion

13. Accordingly, the Appeals Chamber finds that the Trial Chamber erred by narrowly construing the Prosecution's disclosure obligations under Rule 66 (B) of the Rules in a manner inconsistent with the plain language of the provision.

[35] The Appeals Chamber has held that Rule 66 (B) is applicable on appeal as well if the material sought was not available at trial. See Georges Rutaganda v. The Prosecutor, Case N°ICTR 96-3-A, Decision on the Prosecution's Urgent Request for Clarification in Relation to the Applicability of Rule 66 (B) to Appellate Proceedings and Request for Extension of the Page Limit Applicable to Motions, 28 June 2002, p. 2.

Disposition

14. For the foregoing reasons, the Appeal is GRANTED, and the Impugned Decision is REVERSED. The Prosecution is ORDERED to permit inspection by the defence of all the requested immigration documents that it intends to use as exhibits during cross-examination. Furthermore, with respect to the other immigration documents not intended for use as exhibits, the Appeals Chamber REMITS this matter to the Trial Chamber for reconsideration consistent with this decision on whether they are material to the preparation of the defence.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the "Motion to Request the Communication of the Closed Sessions Transcripts of … Witness FMB", etc., filed by the Kabiligi Defence on 22 September 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

1. The Kabiligi Defence in the Bagosora et al. trial requests disclosure of the closed session testimony of Witness FMB in the case of The Prosecutor v. Juvenal Kajelijeli. This same witness will shortly appear as a Kabiligi witness in the Bagosora case. The Defence wishes to review the witness's prior testimony as part of its preparation.

2. As no Chamber is currently seized of the Kajelijeli trial, this request is properly made before this Chamber under Rule 75 (G) (ii) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence[1]. The witness has apparently revealed his protected status to the Defence; accordingly, there is no reason not to order the disclosure of these Tribunal records, on the understanding that the applicable witness protection orders will apply mutatis mutandis to any party in the present case in receipt of the protected information[2].

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

GRANTS the motion;

ORDERS the Registry to disclose the closed session transcripts and sealed exhibits of Witness FMB to the Kabiligi Defence;

ORDERS that the Kabiligi Defence and any other party in receipt of the protected information, including the Accused, are bound mutatis mutandis by the terms of the witness protection order governing the testimony of Witness FMB.

Rules of Procedure and Evidence, rules 73 (A), 74 (F) (i), 75 (F) (i) and 75 (G) (i)

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA (the "Tribunal"),

SITTING as Trial Chamber II, composed of Judge Asoka de Silva, Presiding, Judge Taghrid Hikmet and Judge Seon Ki Park (the "Chamber");

BEING SEISED OF the "Extremely Urgent Confidential Motion for Disclosure of Closed Session Testimony of Witness DO and his Unredacted Statements and Exhibits in Prosecutor v. Ndindiliyimana (ICTR-00-56-T)" filed by the Defence for Anatole Nsengiyumva on 11 September 2006 (the "Motion");

CONSIDERING the Statute of the Tribunal (the "Statute"), and the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules"), in particular Rule 74 (F) (i) of the Rules;

NOTING that the Prosecution has not filed a response;

HEREBY DECIDES the Motion on the basis of the written submissions filed by the Defence for Nsengiyumva pursuant to Rule 73 (A) of the Rules.

1. Anatole Nsengiyumva, an Accused in the trial of The Prosecutor v. Bagosora et al. (also known as the Military I case), requests disclosure of the closed session transcripts, unredacted statements and exhibits in respect of protected Witness DO, who testified for the Prosecution in the present case. The Motion is brought pursuant to Rule 75 (G) (i)

2. The Chamber notes Rule 75 (F) (i) which provides that once protective measures have been ordered in respect of a victim or witness in any proceedings before the Tribunal, such protective measures shall continue to have effect in any other proceedings before the Tribunal unless and until they are rescinded, varied or augmented in accordance with the procedure set out in the Rules.

3. In two recent decisions, the Chamber held that confidential inter partes material may be disclosed to a party in another case provided that the applicant demonstrates that it "is likely to assist that applicant's case materially, or […] there is a good chance that it would."[1] The Chamber further held that this standard can be met by showing that there is a factual nexus between the two cases.[2]

4. Nsengiyumva wishes to have access to the said material in order to prepare his defence. He submits that the testimony of Witness DO is exculpatory in nature since Witness DO recants himself in his testimony in the Military II case from what he said in the Military I case.

5. The Chamber notes that Witness DO testified in both the Military I case and the present case on the same issues. The Chamber is therefore satisfied that a sufficient factual nexus between the two cases is established.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

GRANTS the Motion;

ORDERS the Prosecution and the Registry to transmit to the Nsengiyumva Defence the closed session transcripts of Witness DO's testimony, his unredacted statements and any exhibit filed under seal during his testimony before this Chamber;

DECLARES that the Nsengiyumva Defence and the Accused shall be bound mutatis mutandis, upon receipt of the confidential material, by the terms of the witness protection orders issued in the present case.[3]

I.C.T.R. : Appeals Chamber, The Prosecutor v. Edouard Karemera et al., Decision on Prosecutor's Interlocutory Appeal of Decision on Judicial Notice, 16 June 2006 (ICTR-98-44)

1. THE APPEALS CHAMBER of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January 1994 and 31 December 1994 ("Appeals Chamber" and "Tribunal", respectively) is seized of the "Alloys Ntabakuze Motion for Reconsideration of an Appeals Chamber Decision (or to Intervene in Such a Motion) and Ancillary Alternative Motion for Clarification of the Decision" filed on 14 July 2006 ("Motion") in which the Applicant requests

(i) A reconsideration of a decision on interlocutory appeal concerning judicial notice rendered in another case ("Impugned Decision");[1] or, in the alternative,

(ii) Leave to intervene in motions for reconsideration of the Impugned Decision filed by the accused in that case; and

(iii) Clarification of the Impugned Decision.

2. The Prosecution filed a Response opposing the Motion and the Applicant subsequently filed his Reply thereto.[2]

The Appeals Chamber will accordingly not

3. HEREBY RENDERS ITS DECISION as follows:

I. Background

4. On 16 June 2006, the Appeals Chamber issued the Impugned Decision, in which it directed the Trial Chamber in the Karemera et al. case to take judicial notice of facts 2, 5 and 6 listed in Annex A of the Prosecution's Interlocutory Appeal.[3] These facts are

> (i) The following state of affairs existed in Rwanda between 6 April 1994 to 17 July 1994: There were throughout Rwanda widespread or systematic attacks against a civilian population based on Tutsi ethnic identification. During the attacks, some Rwandan citizens killed or caused serious bodily or mental harm to persons perceived to be of a Tutsi ethnic identity;

5. In support of the Motion, the Applicant submits that he has the requisite standing to independently bring this matter before the Appeals Chamber. However, should it be held that he does not have standing, he requests leave to intervene in motions for reconsideration filed by the appellants in the Karemera et al. case.[5]

6. The Applicant avers that the findings in the Impugned Decision affect all pending cases before the Tribunal and his case in particular.[6] He argues that he has "an immediate, compelling interest" in this matter which he distinguishes from other accused, including the appellants in the Karemera et al. case.[7] According to the Applicant, his defence is based on advancing an alternative to the "genocide hypothesis", and his Defence team already introduced evidence in this regard.[8] However, the Impugned Decision has the impact of cutting off the presentation of evidence and eliminating defences which are still the subject of active litigation in his case and while evidence in his defence is still being presented.[9] The Applicant, in his view, is therefore immediately and severely prejudiced based on principles of fair trial.[10]

7. The Applicant submits that the Appeals Chamber has the inherent power to reconsider its decisions in instances where there are new circumstances or where such decisions were erroneous and caused prejudice.[11]

8. The Applicant also, as an alternative remedy, seeks clarification of the Impugned Decision. He submits that the precise parameters of the Impugned Decision must be clearly delineated to avoid any error as to any permissible inferences that may be drawn from it.[12] This will enable him to determine the evidence that may or may not be presented in concluding his case and the treatment that will be accorded to the evidence already on record.[13]

9. The Prosecution responds that the Applicant has no standing to bring the Motion.[14] In its view, only Rules 74 and 107 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the Tribunal ("Rules") could allow the Appeals Chamber to grant the Applicant standing in this case, but the Applicant has failed to satisfy the criteria set forth therein. Furthermore, the Applicant's request for reconsideration constitutes an exceptional discretionary remedy, and would only be justified where a clear error in reasoning, or injustice was demonstrated.[15] The Motion fails to satisfy this test.[16]

10. In addition, the Prosecution argues that the Applicant did not seek standing to intervene in motions for reconsideration filed in the Karemera et al. case in a timely manner.[17] He failed to intervene when the matter relating to the judicial notice of facts was being considered by the Trial Chamber and Appeals Chamber in the Karemera et al. case.[18] The Prosecution further argues that the Applicant's request for clarification of the Impugned Decision is baseless. The Prosecution avers that the Impugned Decision is sufficiently clear, and that it is up to the Trial Chamber in the Applicant's case to determine the scope of its application.[19] Accordingly, the Prosecution submits that the Motion should be dismissed in its entirety.

11. The Applicant replies that there is no predetermined regulatory regime that deals with the question of standing in this instance.[20] Rule 74 of the Rules is not applicable in his case as it is apparent that an Amicus Curiae is intended to assist a Chamber by being a "friend of the court" where someone else's interests are at stake.[21] In the present case, it is the Applicant's own interests that are at stake.[22] The Applicant argues that reconsideration procedure is based on the inherent jurisdiction and discretion of the Appeals Chamber to act in the interests of justice.[23] The exceptional remedy of reconsideration was created because there is no higher court to litigate matters that have been decided by the Appeals Chamber. It should therefore not be foreclosed to any one seeking redress on an issue that is causing him or her grave prejudice.[24]

12. The Applicant also submits in reply that there is no explicit Rule that limits standing to the original parties in the dispute. Any party that has been prejudiced by an Appeals Chamber decision may have standing to seek reconsideration in order to redress the prejudice suffered by that party.[25] The Applicant consequently maintains that he has standing to submit the Motion.

13. According to the Applicant, the Prosecution's submission that he failed to intervene before either the Trial Chamber or Appeals Chamber in the Karemera et al. case, has no merit.[26] Unlike the Office of the Prosecutor, which functions as one unit, Defence teams are barred from sharing information as they are bound by witness protection orders and counsel-client confidentiality.[27] The Applicant avers that in his case, the issue of judicial notice has already been decided and the Trial Chamber did not take judicial notice of genocide, or of the ethnic character of the widespread or systematic violence.[28] Consequently, prejudice only became a live issue with the rendering of the Impugned Decision.[29]

II. Discussion

14. The Appeals Chamber notes that the Applicant seeks reconsideration of a decision on interlocutory appeal in a case to which he is not a party. He acknowledges that neither the Statute of the Tribunal ("Statute") nor the Rules prescribe who has standing to seek reconsideration and argues that any party that is prejudiced by a decision may have standing to seek its reconsideration in order to redress the prejudice suffered by that party.[30] The Appeals Chamber confirms that neither the Statute nor the Rules expressly settle the question of standing to seek reconsideration of a decision. However, the Appeals Chamber rejects the assertion that any person who alleges some form of prejudice as a consequence of a particular decision has the requisite standing to seek its reconsideration.

15. As a general principle, only a party to a decision of the Appeals Chamber may ask the Chamber to reconsider that decision. To hold otherwise would open the Appeals Chamber's reconsideration procedures to any non-party who is affected by a decision of the Chamber. In this case, the Applicant is a stranger to the Karemera et al. case. Accordingly he has no standing to seek reconsideration of the Appeals Chamber's decision. Also, the Appeals Chamber does not propose to entertain the Applicant's request for intervention at this stage. Moreover, his request for clarification in another case to which he is not a party has no merit.

16. The Appeals Chamber observes that the Applicant is in no way prejudiced. If the Trial Chamber in his own case takes judicial notice of the same or similar facts, he may challenge the matter there in accordance with his right to be heard. Finally, if the Applicant wants to seek further clarification [see above paragraph 1 (iii)] he may also do so in his own case.

III. Disposition

17. For the aforementioned reasons, the Appeals Chamber DISMISSES the Applicant's Motion in its entirety.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the Kabiligi Defence "Motion to Request the Testimony of Witnesses KX-38 and KVB-46 via Video Link", filed on 20 September 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

Introduction

1. The Kabiligi Defence requests that two of its witnesses be heard by video-conference. Both are willing to testify, but refuse to travel to Arusha on the basis that, as prominent opponents of the present Government of Rwanda, their security would be at risk.

Deliberations

2. Testimony by video-conference may be ordered pursuant either to Rule 54 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence, on the basis that it is "in the interests of justice"; or as a witness protection measure under Rule 75, which requires that the video-conference be "necessary to safeguard the witness's security".[1] The Kabiligi Defence invokes both Rules in support of the present application.

3. Whether video-conference testimony is in the interests of justice under Rule 54 depends on three factors: the importance of the testimony; the witness's inability or unwillingness to attend; and whether a good reason has been adduced for that inability or unwillingness.[2] Although it is not absolutely necessary that the reason for the refusal to attend be objectively justified, a showing must at least be made that the witness has a credible basis for the refusal, and that those grounds are genuinely held.[3]

4. Witness KX-38 refuses to travel to Arusha on the basis that he is a prominent opponent of the present Government of Rwanda. He went into exile in 1994. The motion suggests that the witness's fears are based on the untimely and unexplained deaths of other members of the opposition and on alleged ongoing harassment. He is said to have known the Accused for a long time and is in a position to testify that the Accused was not racially prejudiced or an extremist. The witness's refusal to travel to Arusha is manifest in an email from the witness to counsel for the Defence, which is contained in a confidential and ex parte annex to the motion.[4]

5. Witness KVB-46 is a former senior Rwandese official who subsequently became a leader of an opposition group. The motion indicates that he has first-hand knowledge that the Accused supported the Arusha Accords. The witness states in an email to Counsel for Kabiligi that his refusal to testify in Arusha is "a matter of life or death".[5]

6. The Defence has established that both witnesses refuse to travel to Arusha on the basis of genuinely-held fears. Although the Chamber is not in a position to determine the objective justification of those fears, the Defence has shown that both witnesses are high-profile individuals who may be particularly anxious about their security. The witnesses appear to be able to give potentially exculpatory testimony in respect of clearly-defined issues. On this basis, the Chamber considers that it is in the interests of justice to allow these witnesses to testify by video-conference.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

AUTHORIZES the taking of the testimony of Witness KX-38 and Witness KVB-46 by video-conference;

INSTRUCTS the Registry, in consultation with the parties, to make all necessary arrangements, in respect of the testimony of Witness KX-38 and Witness KVB-46 by video-conference and to videotape the testimony for possible future reference by the Chamber.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the "Motion for the Disclosure of Exculpatory Evidence", filed by the Ntabakuze Defence on 7 November 2005;

CONSIDERING the Prosecution Response, filed on 10 November 2005; and the Reply to the Prosecutor's Response, filed on 14 November 2005;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

Introduction

1. The Defence for Ntabakuze requests an order requiring the Prosecution to disclose "any and all evidence gathered by the Office of the Prosecutor concerning actions of members of the RPF".[1] The Defence claims that this information is exculpatory and must, accordingly, be disclosed in accordance with Rule 68 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence. The Prosecution responds that Rule 68 requires disclosure only of material which shows that the RPF, rather than the Accused, committed the very crimes with which the Accused are charged. The Prosecution asserts that its review of the material in its possession does not reveal any such evidence.[2]

Deliberations

2. Rule 68 (A) provides that the Prosecution has an obligation to disclose

> "any material, which in the actual knowledge of the Prosecutor may suggest the innocence or mitigate the guilt of the accused or affect the credibility of Prosecution evidence".

The Appeals Chamber has consistently interpreted the words "actual knowledge" to require that the information be in the Prosecution's possession.[3] Accordingly,

> "[t]he initial decision as to whether material has to be disclosed under Rule 68 has to be made by the Prosecutor".[4]

This determination "is primarily a facts-based judgement made by and under the responsibility of the Prosecution", which is presumed to discharge its obligation in good faith.[5] If the Defence claims that the obligation has been violated, it must: (i) define the exculpatory material with reasonable specificity; (ii) establish that the material is in the custody and control of the Prosecution; and (iii) present a prima facie case that the material is exculpatory.[6]

3. A previous decision of this Chamber has expressed its view that a prima facie basis exists to believe that information concerning some – but not all – RPF activities may be exculpatory.[7] The Chamber ordered partial disclosure of the statements of two witnesses describing such activities:

> The Chamber is of the view, having examined the statements of Witness DM-46 and DM-80, that some of the information may be exculpatory. For example, descriptions of infiltration into areas of government control by RPF soldiers disguised as civilians could provide context or background information which may assist the Chamber in understanding some of the conduct about which the Chamber has heard testimony during the Prosecution case. Information concerning the assassination of President Habyarimana may also assist the Chamber in understanding the background to events in April 1994. The admission of any particular element of evidence will depend on the purpose for which it is tendered; whether the extent of detail is necessary for that purpose; and the Chamber's discretion to avoid needless consumption of time.
> On the other hand, some of the information in the statements of the two witnesses is not exculpatory. Descriptions of crimes committed by RPF forces against civilians in geographic areas physically distant from combat between the opposing armed forces in 1994 would not suggest the innocence or mitigate the guilt of the accused. The impact of such events on the criminal conduct with which the accused are charged is too remote and indirect. The Defence submissions have not demonstrated that such information would assist in disproving any element of the offences with which the Accused are charged, or how it could sustain a valid excuse or justification for their alleged conduct. The possible uses of such information suggested by the Defence would not, in the Chamber's view, be exculpatory.[8]

4. Information is exculpatory only if it tends to disprove a material fact alleged against the Accused, or if it undermines the credibility of evidence intended to prove those material facts. This depends on the nature of the charges and evidence heard against the Accused.[9] Evidence of widespread infiltration by RPF operatives dressed as civilians, or operating in specific locations relevant to the Indictment, could be germane to crimes alleged against the Accused or those under his command.[10] The presence of RPF soldiers at specific locations where the Accused or his subordinates are alleged to have committed crimes could, depending on the nature of the information, also be exculpatory.

5. On the other hand, evidence of RPF activities which have only a remote connection to the crimes alleged against the Accused is not exculpatory. For this reason, evidence of RPF operations at times or places unrelated to the crimes alleged against the Accused is not exculpatory. Furthermore, no criminal responsibility is alleged or implied against the Accused for the death of President Habyarimana. Paragraph 6.2 of the Indictment states that:

> "On 6 April 1994 at about 8:30 p.m., the plane carrying, among other passengers, the President of the Republic, Juvénal Habyarimana, was shot down on its approach to Kigali Airport, Rwanda."

This event is characterized as the trigger for the alleged crimes which followed, but nowhere does the Indictment or the Pre-Trial Brief suggest that the Accused or any of his alleged co-conspirators were involved. Indeed, the Prosecution has declared unequivocally that the Accused is not charged that additional material exists in the possession of the Prosecution; and (ii) present a prima facie case that the material is exculpatory").

with any involvement whatsoever in the former President's death.[11] Accordingly, although the fact of the shooting down of the plane is relevant to the case as providing context or background, the Defence has not shown that detailed information concerning the responsibility of any particular person is relevant to the charges against the Accused.[12]

6. Although some of the material within the category defined by the Defence may be exculpatory, this does not justify an order for disclosure of the entire category. The Prosecution is presumed to have diligently and in good faith discharged its obligation to disclose such information as may be exculpatory, in accordance with this and other rulings.[13] Disclosure of an entire category of documents will only be ordered under Rule 68 where the category is accurately tailored to the exculpatory content. A very similar request for information concerning the conduct of enemy forces was rejected on this basis in Delalić et al.:

> [A]ny request for disclosure of information should clearly specify the material desired. The Request before the Trial Chamber fails to do so. It generally refers to all the evidence in the hands of the Officer of the Prosecutor concerning the conduct of forces of the Republic of Serbia, the Bosnian Serbs and others. The Rules permitting disclosure of certain documents cannot be used freely as a means to obtain all information from the Prosecution and then subsequently to determine whether it can be used or not.[14]

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the motion.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF a "Motion for an Order Compelling the Prosecutor to Disclose Various Exculpatory Documents Pursuant to Rule 68", filed by the Ntabakuze Defence on 2 June 2006;

CONSIDERING the Prosecution Response, filed on 7 June 2006, and the Ntabakuze Reply, filed on 27 June 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

Introduction

1. The Ntabakuze Defence seeks disclosure from the Prosecution of eight categories of documents, on the basis that the documents may be exculpatory under Rule 68 (A) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence. The documents consist of reports by UN agencies or the Office of the Prosecutor itself concerning events in Rwanda in 1994. One of the categories of documents – concerning reports prepared by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees – is the object of a separate motion filed by the Ntabakuze Defence which requests substantially the same relief on the same grounds. A separate decision, filed today, will address that request.[1]

Deliberations

2. Rule 68 (A) provides that the Prosecution has an obligation to disclose

The Appeals Chamber has consistently interpreted the words "actual knowledge" to require that the information be in the Prosecution's possession.[2] Accordingly, "[t]he initial decision as to whether material has to be disclosed under Rule 68 has to be made by the Prosecutor".[3] This determination "is primarily a facts-based judgement made by and under the responsibility of the Prosecution", which is presumed to discharge its obligation in good faith.[4] If the Defence claims that the obligation has been violated, it must: (i) define the exculpatory material with reasonable specificity; (ii) establish that the material is in the custody and control of the Prosecution; and (iii) present a prima facie case that the material is exculpatory.[5]

3. The Prosecution denies possessing any documents in four of the eight categories requested by the Defence: alleged files arising from an investigation by Michael Hourigan into the assassination of President Habyarimana on 6 April 1994; an alleged report by Mr. Hourigan to Louise Arbour concerning the assassination of President Habyarimana on 6 April 1994; reports by human rights observers regarding demographic changes in Rwanda; and documents from the United Nations Rwanda Emergency Office.[6] The Defence has not contested this submission. In the absence of any indication to the contrary, the Chamber accepts this submission and denies any order in respect of these four categories.

4. Three categories of documents remain for consideration: "Human Rights Field Office for Rwanda ("HRFOR") reports related to individual massacre and/or burial sites, as well as summaries and reports relating to the 1994 events in Rwanda"; "OTP Special Investigation Unit ("SIU") reports related to individual massacre and/or burial sites, as well as summaries and reports relating to the 1994 events in Rwanda"; "Weekly summary reports by UNAMIR Military Observers to Headquarters in Kigali for all of 1994 and the first six months of 1995".[7] The Defence submits that the documents will support the "Ntabakuze theory of the case as described in the Ntabakuze pre-defence brief", and explains how the categories described could potentially contain exculpatory documents. The Prosecution does not deny possession of documents in these categories, but submits that the documents have been reviewed and that any exculpatory information has already been disclosed.[8]

5. The Chamber must accept that the Prosecution has reviewed the documents in its possession in good faith and has complied with its disclosure obligations. The categories of documents are not so specific as to require disclosure of every document falling within their ambit. Under these circumstances, the Prosecution is obliged to review, identify and disclose any documents which may be exculpatory. In the absence of any showing that it has done otherwise, there is no basis for any order under Rule 68.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the motion.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the "Motion for Request of Cooperation from the Government of France Pursuant to Article 28 of the Statute", filed by the Ntabakuze Defence on 28 April 2006;

CONSIDERING the Prosecution Response, filed on 28 April 2006; and the Ntabakuze Reply, filed on 2 May 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

Introduction

1. The Ntabakuze Defence asks the Chamber to issue a request to the Government of France, pursuant to Article 28 of the Statute, for the disclosure of a report concerning the attack on President Habyarimana's airplane on the night of 6 April 1994. The so-called "Bruguière Report", which allegedly blames the RPF for the attack, is said to be "indispensable" to the Defence.

Deliberations

2. Article 28 of the Statute imposes an obligation on States to

> "cooperate with the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda in the investigation and prosecution of persons accused of committing serious violations of international humanitarian law".

A request to a Chamber to make an order under Article 28 must set forth the nature of the information sought; its relevance to the trial; and the efforts that have been made to obtain it. The type of assistance sought should also be defined with particularity.[1]

6. The key question in the present application is whether the report, as described by the Defence, is relevant to this trial. Paragraph 6.1 of the Indictment states that:

This event is characterized as the trigger for the alleged crimes which followed, but nowhere does the Indictment or the Pre-Trial Brief suggest that the Accused or any of his alleged conspirators were involved, directly or indirectly. Indeed, the Prosecution has declared unequivocally that the Accused is not charged with any involvement whatsoever in the former President's death.[2]

4. This Chamber has previously addressed the extent to which the assassination of President Habyarimana may be relevant to the present trial in the context of a request for disclosure of exculpatory material. It held that

> "[i]nformation concerning the assassination of President Habyarimana may also assist the Chamber in understanding the background to events in April 1994".[3]

In a subsequent decision, however, the Chamber explained that

> "although the fact of the shooting down of the plane is relevant to the case as providing context or background, the Defence has not shown that detailed information concerning the responsibility of any particular person is relevant to the charges against the Accused".[4]

The scope of relevance has been described by another Trial Chamber as meaning that

> "questions relating to the responsibility for the shooting down of the plane may be put to a witness provided that this line of questioning does not go into great detail".[5]

The approach adopted in these decisions may be summarized as follows: the fact of the shooting down of the plane is relevant to the case as providing context or background, but detailed information concerning the responsibility of any particular person is not.[6]

The Chamber is of the opinion that evidence as to who is responsible for the crash of the President's plane would not assist the Chamber in its decision as to the

5. The Defence argues that the existence of an RPF plot to shoot down the Presidential plane, if proven, could be probative of a broader plan to unleash an armed conflict with government forces, an inevitable consequence of which was "widespread killings".[7] The implication, it seems, is that criminal responsibility for the whole course of events between April and July 1994 could, by virtue of this information, be shifted from the Accused to other persons.

6. As discussed in another decision of this Chamber decided today, the applicant for a request under Article 28 must indicate how the information is relevant to an issue before the Judge or Trial Chamber and necessary for a fair determination of that issue.[8] The Defence has failed to discharge its burden of showing by specific references how the information in the alleged report is relevant to disproving elements of the Prosecution case. The identity of the killers of President Habyarimana is undoubtedly a matter of contextual significance for the events described in the Indictment against the Accused. On this basis, the Chamber has admitted some evidence concerning this event. On the other hand, the Chamber must exercise its discretion under Rule 89 (C) to ensure that the focus of the present trial is maintained. Even if the report attributed responsibility for the attack on the Presidential plane to persons other than the Accused or their alleged co-conspirators, it is not clear to the Chamber how this would tend to disprove elements of the Prosecution case in this trial.[9] The admission of detailed evidence on what is, essentially, a matter of collateral and indirect relevance would not assist the Chamber in determining the core issues of this trial.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the motion.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the "Request for Subpoenas of Kofi Annan, Iqbal Riza, Shaharyar Khan and Michael Hourigan Pursuant to Rule 54", filed by the Ntabakuze Defence on 25 August 2006;

CONSIDERING the Submissions filed by the Bagosora Defence on 5 September 2006; the Submissions of the United Nations Office of Legal Affairs, dated 7 September 2006; and the Memorandum and Annexes filed by the Ntabakuze Defence on 15 September 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

Introduction

1. The Ntabakuze Defence requests that subpoenas be issued to Kofi Annan and Iqbal Riza, who were officials of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations ("DPKO") in New York in 1994; Shaharyar Khan, who became the Special Representative of the Secretary-General ("SRSG") in Rwanda in the middle of 1994; and Michael Hourigan, a former investigator of the Office of the Prosecutor. The Defence requests that the subpoenas require the latter three to appear before the Chamber to give testimony, whereas the request in respect of Mr. Annan is only that he be compelled to submit to an interview.

2. The Office of Legal Affairs of the United Nations has responded to the motion arguing that the Defence has not yet articulated the legal and factual basis for the appearance of the witnesses, or the need to interview Mr. Annan. The Office of Legal Affairs claims that it has offered extensive cooperation and assistance to the Defence and wishes to continue to do so; its opposition to the requests for subpoenas "does not stem from our unwillingness or refusal to assist [the Defence] but from [its] failure to comply with arrangements that [it] has already repeatedly acknowledged and from which [it] has repeatedly benefited."[1]

Deliberations

(I) General Principles

3. The applicant for a subpoena requiring a person to give testimony or submit to an interview must show that three conditions are satisfied: (i) reasonable attempts have been made to obtain the voluntary cooperation of the witness; (ii) the prospective witness has information which can materially assist the applicant in respect of clearly identified issues relevant to the trial; and (iii) the witness's testimony must be necessary and appropriate for the conduct and fairness of the trial.[2] It has been said that "subpoenas should not be issued lightly" and that a Chamber must consider "not only the usefulness of the information to the applicant but … its overall necessity in ensuring that the trial is informed and fair".[3] The Appeals Chamber has elaborated that:

> The applicant seeking a subpoena must make a certain evidentiary showing of the need for the subpoena. In particular, he must demonstrate a reasonable basis for his belief that the prospective witness is likely to give information that will materially assist the applicant with respect to clearly identified issues in the forthcoming trial. To satisfy this requirement, the applicant may need to present information about such factors as the position held by the prospective witness in relation to the events in question, any relation the witness may have had with the accused which is relevant to the charges, any opportunity the witness may have had to observe or learn about those events, and any statements the witness made to the Prosecution or others in relation to them. The Trial Chamber is vested with discretion in determining whether the applicant succeeded in making the required showing, this discretion being necessary to ensure that the compulsive mechanism of the subpoena is not abused. As the Appeals Chamber has emphasized, "Subpoenas should not be issued lightly, for they involve the use of coercive powers and may lead to the imposition of a criminal sanction".[4]

Chambers have considered factors such as the specificity with which the prospective testimony is identified and whether the information can be obtained other than through the prospective witness.[5]

(II) APPLICATION

(a) Kofi Annan and Iqbal Riza

4. The Defence argues that, as the officials who were in charge of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations in 1994, Mr. Annan and Mr. Riza have information relevant to the trial. They are in a position to "explain the circumstances" surrounding the correspondence between UNAMIR officials in Rwanda and DPKO in New York, much of which has been admitted into evidence and on which General Roméo Dallaire and Major Brent Beardsley, among others, have given testimony. The Defence wishes to elicit evidence that the DPKO had no information suggesting that, in the months leading up to April 1994, there was any plan or conspiracy to commit genocide as is alleged in the Indictment. Mr. Annan and Mr. Riza are said to be in a position to testify as to what they were told by General Dallaire and others, on a variety of issues which are specifically enumerated in the motion, and their understanding of events based on that information.[6]

Defence attempts to characterize Mr. Annan and Mr. Riza as "eye-witnesses or participants in the events", their prospective testimony concerns information sent to them by UNAMIR officials in Rwanda, and possibly other sources. They are said to be "the only persons who can explain the circumstances described" in the various memos, faxes and code cables exchanged between UNAMIR and the DPKO in New York.[8]

6. The Chamber disagrees that Mr. Annan and Mr. Riza are eyewitnesses. The Defence has not shown that either of them can draw on any personal observation of events for their testimony. Although Mr. Riza did apparently visit Rwanda in May or June 1994, the Defence does not suggest that it wishes to question him about this visit.[9] By contrast, this Chamber has heard from numerous members of UNAMIR who were on the ground in Rwanda: Jacques Roger Booh-Booh, General Dallaire, Major Beardsley, Lt. Colonel Frank Claeys, Colonel Joseph Dewez, Major Donald MacNeil, Colonel Aouilli Tchemi Tchambi, Major Petrus Maggen, Major Robert Van Putten, and Lieutenant Colonel Babacar El Hadj Faye. Indeed, the code cables to United Nations Headquarters in New York City were based on the direct eyewitness observation of these individuals and other UNAMIR officials posted in Rwanda at the time. The impressions of the recipients of those reports in United Nations Headquarters would be of limited weight in comparison to this direct and primary testimony, and does not constitute information which is necessary and appropriate for the conduct and fairness of the trial.

7. The perspective of the DPKO, as the central repository of UNAMIR documents, may have a distinct value in one respect. The Defence wishes the DPKO witnesses to confirm that they had no basis to believe that there was a conspiracy or plan to commit genocide leading up to April 1994. To a large extent, however, the documents already disclosed by the DPKO to the Defence, many of which have been entered as exhibits without any dispute as to authenticity, provide a more direct indication as to the information available to the DPKO over time. To the extent that any further confirmation is required from witnesses, the Office of Legal Affairs has offered to continue to cooperate with the Ntabakuze Defence in the preparation of a statement in lieu of oral testimony.[10] In light of this ongoing cooperation, and the nature of the information sought, the Chamber does not consider that the first condition for the issuance of a subpoena – the exhaustion of reasonable attempts to obtain the voluntary cooperation of the witness – is satisfied. Accordingly, there is no need to further consider whether the information is sufficiently important to satisfy the second and third conditions for a subpoena.

8. Under these circumstances, the Chamber shall not order that a subpoena be issued to either Mr. Annan or Mr. Riza.

(b) Shaharyar Khan

9. The Defence requests a subpoena for Mr. Khan, the SRSG in Kigali from July 1994 until March 1996, in relation to a letter he wrote in 1995 stating that neither the DPKO nor UNAMIR had any warning of an impending genocide prior to April 1994. Furthermore, Mr. Khan purportedly drafted the first list of suspects to be investigated for war crimes in the summer of 1995. The absence of the Accused from that list is said to be an important fact. Finally, Mr. Khan has, according to the Defence, information about a report prepared by the UNHCR concerning alleged massacres of Hutu refugees.[11]

10. The Chamber does not consider that any of the information supposedly in the possession of Mr. Khan justifies the issuance of a subpoena. The state of contemporaneous knowledge of a plan to commit genocide has been addressed in the previous section in relation to the DPKO witnesses, who appear to be in a better position than Mr. Khan to respond to this inquiry. Indeed, the Defence has not indicated that Mr. Khan has any knowledge of this issue other than his retrospective review of the documents which are already in the possession of the Defence. The lack of any mention of the Accused on a list of suspects prepared by Mr. Khan in 1995 constitutes indirect evidence of limited value, and does not justify the issuance of a subpoena. Finally, the relevance of the UNHCR report to the present trial is discussed in a separate decision, rendered today.[12] In light of that decision, Mr. Khan's alleged knowledge of that report does not constitute a valid basis for the issuance of a subpoena.

(c) Michael Hourigan

11. Mr. Hourigan, a former investigator of the Office of the Prosecutor, is said to be able to testify about his investigations into the shooting down of the Presidential airplane on the night of 6 April 1994.[13]

12. The Indictment does not attribute responsibility for the attack on the Presidential airplane to any of the Accused or their alleged co-conspirators. Paragraph 6.2 of the Indictment states neutrally that:

> "On 6 April 1994 at about 8:30 p.m., the plane carrying, among other passengers, the President of the Republic, Juvénal Habyarimana, was shot down on its approach to Kigali Airport, Rwanda."

This event is characterized as the trigger for the massacres which ensued; but, unlike other paragraphs of the Indictment, no involvement of the Accused is alleged. Nor did the Prosecution present evidence during its case-in-chief to prove any responsibility by the Accused in the assassination. The only such suggestion was made during the cross-examination of the Accused Bagosora, when the Prosecution put to Colonel Bagosora that he had been involved in the attack on the Presidential airplane. The Prosecution has made clear, in responding to separate motion by the Bagosora Defence, that this question was posed only for the purpose of challenging the witness's credibility, as he had himself discussed responsibility to the attack during his examination-in-chief. The Prosecution did not suggest, and indeed specifically renounced, that it was seeking to hold the Accused criminally responsibility for the President's assassination.[14]

13. Despite the absence of any charge against the Accused of involvement in the attack on the Presidential airplane, the Defence argues that responsibility for the attack is nevertheless relevant to the trial. The assassination of President Habyarimana is characterized by the Defence as

> "the initiation of the RPA 'final offensive' to seize power, which knowingly touched off the predicted civilian retaliation killings … rather than [the result of] any 'plan' or 'conspiracy' by a military that … lacked the resources to BOTH repel the RPA offensive AND stop the predicted civilian-on-civilian massacres".[15]

14. Legal relevance, as the standard for determining the admission of evidence, is defined in Rule 89 (C): "A Chamber may admit any relevant evidence which it deems to have probative value." This Rule implicates three criteria:

> First, the evidence must be in some way relevant to an element of a crime with which the Accused is charged. Second, the evidence must have some value in proving [or disproving] the elements of the crimes with which an accused is charged. The separate reference to "probative value", and to the requirement that the Chamber must "deem" that the evidence has that quality, suggests that probative value is a different and more complex hurdle than relevance. Third, even where these two criteria are met, Rule 89 (C) does not command, but merely permits, admission of the evidence.
>
> Probative value … has been described simply as "'evidence that tends to prove an issue'" and is sometimes conceived as overlapping with the concept of relevance: "For one fact to be relevant to another, there must be a connection or a nexus between the two which makes it possible to infer the existence of one from the other. One fact is not relevant to another if it does not have real probative value with respect to the latter."
>
> Relevance, probative value and even prejudice are all relational concepts. The content of the putative facts must be defined and then evaluated in relation to their possible value as proof of the existence of a crime as described in the indictment. The nature of this evaluation explains the discretion conferred on the Trial Chamber by Rule 89 (C).[16]

The putative fact invoked by the Defence is that the RPF is responsible for the attack on the Presidential airplane on the night of 6 April. The question is whether this fact, if true, would tend to disprove any element of any crime with which the Accused has been charged in this case.

15. The conspiracy in which the Accused is alleged to have participated does not include the attack on the Presidential airplane on 6 April 1994. The Chamber summarized the nature of the conspiracy charge against the Accused in its decision on the Defence motions for dismissal following the close of the Prosecution case:

> The Prosecution asserts that the inter-relationship of the Accused as senior officers within the military sets the stage for what appears to be a series of co-ordinated or even common actions: the promulgation of the definition of the enemy, which may arguably have targeted Tutsi civilians; the dissemination of that definition amongst soldiers in the army by the Accused; the uncanny repetition of that definition by the four Accused on various occasions; support for the Interahamwe using the resources of the military; and, finally, the direct evidence of some of the Accused being together on various occasions during one or more acts – speeches, preparing lists, ordering killings – which arguably encouraged the commission of genocide.[17]

Evidence that persons other than the Accused or his alleged co-conspirators were involved in shooting down the Presidential plane does not make any of these allegations any less likely.

16. Nor does responsibility for the assassination of President Habyarimana have any bearing on the offences alleged to have been committed by the Accused and his subordinates after 6 April 1994.

[17] Bagosora et al., Decision on Motions for Judgement of Acquittal (TC), 2 February 2005, para. 15.

Culpability for those crimes would not be reduced because someone other than the Accused created the conditions that led to the commission of those crimes. As this Chamber has previously held in relation to a similar issue:

> Descriptions of crimes committed by RPF forces against civilians in geographic areas physically distant from combat between the opposing armed forces in 1994 would not suggest the innocence or mitigate the guilt of the accused. The impact of such events on the criminal conduct with which the accused are charged is too remote and indirect. The Defence submissions have not demonstrated that such information would assist in disproving any element of the offences with which the Accused are charged, or how it could sustain a valid excuse or justification for their alleged conduct.[18]

This said, the Defence is perfectly entitled, of course, to lead evidence concerning the armed conflict with the RPF, the relative strength of forces, and the impact of this context on the crimes for which the Accused is alleged to be responsible.

17. The identity of the killers of President Habyarimana is undoubtedly a matter of contextual significance for the events described in the Indictment against the Accused. On this basis, the Chamber has admitted some evidence concerning this event. On the other hand, the Chamber must exercise its discretion under Rule 89 (C) to ensure that the focus of the present trial is maintained. The admission of detailed evidence on what is, essentially, a matter of collateral and indirect relevance would not assist the Chamber in determining the core issues of this trial.

18. The Defence has failed to establish that the prospective witness has information which can materially assist it in respect of clearly identified issues relevant to the trial, or that his testimony is necessary and appropriate for the conduct and fairness of the trial.[19] Accordingly, no subpoena shall be issued to Mr. Hourigan.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the motion.

CONSIDERING the Prosecution Response, filed on 7 June 2006; the "Strictly Confidential Ntabakuze Request for a Timely Decision", filed on 28 August 2006; the Ntabakuze Memorandum and Annexes, filed on 15 September 2006; the "Extremely Urgent Second Ntabakuze Request for a Timely Decision", etc., filed on 18 September 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

Introduction

1. The Ntabakuze Defence requests the Chamber to: (i) order the Prosecution, pursuant to Rule 68 (A) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence, to obtain reports from the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees ("UNHCR") "relating to the 1994 events in Rwanda", including those prepared by a UNHCR official named Robert Gersony; and (ii) order the UNHCR, pursuant to Article 28 of the Statute, to facilitate an interview with Mr. Gersony, with a view to calling him as a witness.[1] In the alternative, the Defence requests a subpoena addressed to Mr. Gersony requiring that he meet with the Ntabakuze Defence; that he provide relevant UNHCR documents; and that he appear before the Chamber to give testimony.[2]

2. The Prosecution responds that it has already disclosed a UNHCR document to the Defence entitled "Summary of UNHCR Presentation Before Commission of Experts, 10 October 1994".[3]

Deliberations

(i) Request for Exculpatory Material Pursuant to Rule 68 (A)

3. Rule 68 (A) provides that the Prosecution has an obligation to disclose

> "any material, which in the actual knowledge of the Prosecutor may suggest the innocence or mitigate the guilt of the accused or affect the credibility of Prosecution evidence".

The Appeals Chamber has consistently interpreted the words "actual knowledge" to require that the information be in the Prosecution's possession.[4] Rule 68 does not provide a basis for compelling the Prosecution to review and obtain information from other sources.[5] Accordingly, the Prosecution is not under any obligation to make inquiries and obtain exculpatory information from the UNHCR or any other source.

4. The Prosecution asserts that it has disclosed a document from the UNHCR to the Defence, implying that this exhausts its obligations under Rule 68. The Prosecution is presumed to have discharged its obligations in good faith.[6] In the absence of any showing to the contrary, the request is denied.

(ii) Order to the UNHCR Under Article 28

5. Article 28 of the Statute imposes an obligation on States to

> "cooperate with the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda in the investigation and prosecution of persons accused of committing serious violations of international humanitarian law".

Such a request may be directed to an international organization, as well as individual states.[7] Indeed, the UNHCR has been the object of several such orders from this Tribunal in the past.[8]

6. The issuance of a request under Article 28 is subject to three conditions: (i) identification of the nature of the information sought with a reasonable degree of specificity; (ii) a showing that the information is relevant to the trial; and (iii) evidence that reasonable efforts have been undertaken to

However, to adopt such a meaning, would, in the extreme, allow for countless motions to be filed with the sole intention of engaging the Prosecutor into investigations and disclosure of issues which the moving party considered were 'known' to the Prosecutor. obtain the information without the intervention of the Chamber.[9] The second condition, relevance, requires the applicant to show that the information is relevant to any matter in issue before the Judge or Trial Chamber and that it is necessary for a fair determination of that matter.[10]

7. The Defence asks for an order to interview Robert Gersony.[11] Although not specifically requested, the Defence presumably also seeks disclosure of any reports or documents prepared by Mr. Gersony and his colleagues. Mr. Gersony is said to have knowledge of massacres of Hutu civilians "by the RPF during the invasion, and that such massacres were the result of a deliberate policy".[12] The motion claims that the "RPF was responsible for civilian massacres in the Eastern part of the country for which the Accused is being held responsible."[13] More broadly, the Defence argues that:

> To the extent that it can be shown that the massacres for which the Prosecution seeks to hold the Accused accountable either did not occur, or were the direct or indirect conscious product of the RPF war strategy, it reduces the potential liability of the Accused at all levels, including conspiracy, planning, war crimes and so forth.[14]

8. The documents submitted by the Defence suggest that Mr. Gersony was not in Rwanda before August 1994. His investigations appear to have been concerned with the treatment of Hutu refugees as they returned to their homes in the aftermath of the war between government forces and the Rwandese Patriotic Front.[15] In this context, the Defence submission that Mr. Gersony's knowledge extends to massacres "for which the Accused is being held responsible" is suprising. On the contrary, all indications suggest that Mr. Gersony's information concerns events that occurred after the departure of any troops potentially under the command of the Accused. In this respect, the Chamber recalls its previous decision concerning alleged RPF conduct in the Prosecution's possession:

> Descriptions of crimes committed by RPF forces against civilians in geographic areas physically distant from combat between the opposing armed forces in 1994 would not suggest the innocence or mitigate the guilt of the accused. The impact of such events on the criminal conduct with which the accused are charged is too remote and indirect. The Defence submissions have not demonstrated that such information would assist in disproving any element of the offences with which the Accused are charged, or how it could sustain a valid excuse or justification for their alleged conduct. The possible uses of such information suggested by the Defence would not, in the Chamber's view, be exculpatory.[16]

[10] Relevance has not always been formulated in exactly the same words from one case to another. Some decisions, particularly where the relevance of the information is obvious, say no more than that the applicant must articulate its "relevance to the trial". Ndindiliyimana et al., Decision on Nzuwonomeye's Motion Requesting Cooperation From the Government of Ghana Pursuant to Article 28 of the Statute (TC), 13 February 2006, para. 6; Bagosora et al., Request to the Republic of France for Cooperation and Assistance Pursuant to Article 28 of the Statute (TC), 22 October 2004, para. 3. Where relevance is contested, however, it has also been required that the information be "relevant to any matter in issue before the Judge or Trial Chamber", and that the information be "necessary for a fair determination" of that matter. Karemera et al., Decision on Joseph Nzirorera's Motion for a Request for Governmental Cooperation (TC), 19 April 2005, para. 8. This language mirrors the standard codified in Rule 54 bis of the ICTY Rules which deals specifically with the conditions and modalities for issuing orders to States under Article 29 of the ICTY Statute. The Chamber considers this to be the appropriate standard. The limitation that the information be "necessary for a fair determination" of a question before the Chamber reflects a sensible concern that States and international organization not be burdened with numerous requests for information based on relevance alone, a standard which could potentially cast an unduly broad net. In addition, this is an area where a common standard amongst the international tribunals is desirable.

Although that decision concerned disclosure under Rule 68 (A), the general propositions are equally germane to considerations of relevance.

A generalized claim of relevance is insufficient to justify the issuance of an order under Article 28. In the absence of a showing of how, specifically, any aspect of Mr. Gersony's information concerns matters in issue in this trial and, further, that the information is "necessary for a fair determination" of those issues, the relevance standard has not been satisfied. Accordingly, no order under Article 28 is justified.

(iii) Request for Subpoena to Mr. Gersony

9. The applicant for a subpoena must show that (i) reasonable attempts have been made to obtain the voluntary cooperation of the witness; (ii) the witness's testimony can materially assist the applicant in respect of clearly identified issues; and (iii) the witness's testimony must be necessary and appropriate for the conduct and fairness of the trial.[17] For the reasons described in the previous section, neither the second nor third conditions are satisfied.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

CONSIDERING the Statute of the Tribunal (the "Statute"), and the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules"), in particular Rule 54;

HEREBY DECIDES the Motion on the basis of the written submissions filed by the Parties pursuant to Rule 73 (A) of the Rules.

Submissions by the Parties

The Prosecution

1. The Prosecution requests that a subpoena be issued to Annonciata Kavaruganda. The Prosecution claims that because Madame Kavaruganda was the wife of late Joseph Kavaruganda, former President of the Constitutional Court in Rwanda at the beginning of the genocide in April 1994, she has a unique and special knowledge of the events leading to the abduction and killing of her husband by Rwandan Armed Forces on 7 April 1994.

2. Referring to paragraphs 22, 25, 48, 49 and 50 of the Amended Indictment, the Prosecution submits that Madame Kavaruganda's testimony is necessary to prove the existence and execution of a common scheme by the accused persons in collaboration with others mentioned in the Indictment to eliminate certain members of opposition parties and other important actors with a view to obstructing the implementation of the Arusha Accords. According to the Prosecution, this information will significantly corroborate prosecution evidence of a deliberate and systematic targeting and elimination of those political and other actors by the Rwandan Armed Forces in the early days of the genocide in April 1994.

3. The Prosecution further submits that Madame Kavaruganda is uniquely positioned to provide a useful insight into the activities of her husband within the framework of the implementation of the Arusha Accords and to inform the Court of her husband's activities.

4. Finally, the Prosecution submits that substantial and serious attempts have been made to secure the voluntary attendance of Madame Kavaruganda but to no avail.

Nzuwonemeye's Response

5. The Defence for Nzuwonemeye opposes the Motion and submits that the Prosecution has not addressed the reasons put forward by Madame Kavaruganda for her refusal to testify in this case, that is, that she does not hold the accused persons accountable for the death of her husband.

6. The Defence further submits that the Prosecution has omitted to mention that, according to Madame Kavaruganda, Major Protais Mpiranya from the Presidential Guard and Major Kabera, Officer d'Ordonnance of President Habyarimana, were involved in the killing of her husband. The Defence argues that there is no connection between the Presidential Guard and the Reconnaisance Battalion.

7. Finally, the Defence submits that leading this evidence with respect to Major Protais Mpiranya and the Presidential Guard, would only waste court time and delay the end of the Prosecution case.

Sagahutu's Response

8. The Defence for Sagahutu submits that the testimony of Madame Kavaruganda would not assist the Prosecution at all since Major Mpiranya and Major Kabera, whom the witness believes are responsible for the death of her husband, have not been tried and any attempt to convince the Chamber of a conspiracy is a waste of time.

9. The Defence further submits that Madame Kavaruganda's testimony is not necessary since it has no direct or indirect link to any of the accused persons in the present case and prays the Chamber to dismiss the Motion.

Ndindiliyimana's Response

10. The Defence for Ndindiliyimana adopts the submissions made by Nzuwonemeye's Defence and further submits that the Prosecution has not shown that Madame Kavaruganda is best placed to describe the contents of the Arusha Accords since she did not participate in their negotiation and the Prosecution has not indicated any public or political functions that Madame Kavaruganda held in Rwanda in 1994 that may have enabled her to form an opinion about the full details of the Arusha Accords and the obstacles to their implementation.

11. The Defence argues that Madame Kavaruganda would not assist in ascertaining the truth, in particular since the paragraphs of the Indictment on which the Prosecution tries to lead evidence through this witness, have been cited with regard to the testimonies of several other witnesses and will be the subject of General Dallaire's testimony.

Bizimungu's Response

12. The Defence for Bizimungu adopts the submissions made by Nzuwonemeye and Ndindiliyimana's Defence and, recalling the Chamber's decision of 24 November 2005, further submits that it had already on that occasion opposed the appearance of Madame Kavaruganda arguing that this witness's testimony could not go to proof of the count of conspiracy to commit genocide or to Bizimungu's superior responsibility.

Deliberations

13. The Chamber recalls Rule 54 of the Rules which authorizes a Trial Chamber to issue

> "orders, summonses, subpoenas, warrants and transfer orders as may be necessary for the purposes of an investigation or for the preparation of the trial."

According to the jurisprudence of both this Tribunal and the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia (ICTY), an applicant for subpoena must show that (i) reasonable attempts have been made to obtain the voluntary cooperation of the witness; (ii) the witness's testimony can materially assist the applicant in respect of clearly identified issues; and (iii) the witness's testimony must be necessary and appropriate for the conduct and fairness of the trial.[1] The Chamber recalls that "subpoenas should not be issued lightly" and that it must consider

> "not only … the usefulness of the information to the applicant but … its overall necessity in ensuring that the trial is informed and fair."[2]

In this respect, it may also be considered whether the information sought can reasonably be obtained elsewhere.[3]

14. After having carefully read the material disclosed by the Prosecution in respect of this witness, the Chamber is satisfied that Madame Kavaruganda holds a special position with respect to the events leading to death of her husband and that she may provide insight into the activities of her husband within the framework of the implementation of the Arusha Accords. The Chamber notes paragraphs 48 and 50 of the Amended Indictment of 23 August 2004 which refer to the killing of Joseph Kavaruganda and the alleged obstruction of the implementation of the Arusha Accords. The Chamber further notes paragraph 49 of the Indictment which alleges that the Gendarmerie was, inter alia, responsible for protecting Joseph Kavaruganda. Finally, the Chamber notes paragraph 22 of the Indictment which describes Major Mpiranya as a co-conspirator of the accused persons. Based on the aforementioned, the Chamber concludes that Madame Kavaruganda's testimony can materially assist the Prosecution case.

15. The Chamber is further satisfied that Madame Kavaruganda's evidence cannot be reasonably obtained elsewhere and, based on the material annexed to the Motion, that the Prosecution has made reasonable efforts to secure her voluntary cooperation, without success.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

GRANTS the Motion;

ORDERS the Registrar to prepare a subpoena, in accordance with this decision, and to serve it, through appropriate channels in the Kingdom of Belgium, pursuant to Article 28 of the Statute, to Annonciata Kavaruganda, requiring her appearance before this Chamber to testify in the present case;

DIRECTS the Registry to communicate with the Prosecutor with respect to the timeframe within which the evidence of the witness would be heard.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the "Application for Certification to Appeal Oral Decisions of 12 and 13 July 2006", etc., filed by the Bagosora Defence on 19 July 2006;

CONSIDERING the Prosecution Response, filed on 20 July 2006; and the "Request for Timely Decision", filed by the Bagosora Defence on 5 October 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the application.

Introduction

1. On 11, 12 and 13 July 2006, Jean Kambanda, a former Prime Minister of Rwanda who is serving a life sentence of this Tribunal for his role in events in Rwanda between April and July 1994, testified as a witness for Colonel Bagosora. During the witness's cross-examination, the Prosecution posed certain questions to which the Defence objected as going beyond the proper scope of cross-examination. After a number of oral rulings, the Chamber suspended the witness's testimony on 13 July 2006, indicating that this was "a matter that should be dealt with in a written decision" and inviting the Defence to file additional written observations by close of business" the following day.[1] The three Accused other than Bagosora filed such submissions as requested and, on 11 September 2006, the Chamber granted their request for exclusion of testimony in respect of all but one of the challenged areas.[2]

2. The present application was filed on 19 July 2006, six days after the Chamber had invited written submissions concerning the correctness of its oral rulings. Rather than arguing the merits of the Chamber's oral decisions, the Bagosora Defence asks for leave to litigate these decisions before the Appeals Chamber.

3. The Chamber's written decision of 11 September 2006 has rendered the present application moot in respect of "movement of arms", "Pauline Nyiramasuhuko", and "Kabiligi", either by excluding the evidence or offering additional reasons.[3] The areas of questioning which remain for consideration are: "civil defence"; "the death of Prime Minister Agathe and the Belgian peacekeepers"; and alleged involvement by soldiers in killings and rapes at Kabgayi.[4]

Deliberations

4. Leave to file an interlocutory appeal may be granted under Rule 73 (B) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence where it "involves an issue that would significantly affect the fair and expeditious conduct of proceedings or the outcome of the trial" and where "immediate resolution may materially advance the proceedings".

5. The proposed appeal would challenge the Chamber's application of Rule 90 (G) to three narrowly-defined categories of testimony. The first category, concerning the alleged existence of a civil defence program in Rwanda, has been narrowed even further by the Chamber's written decision of 11 September 2006, which excluded any testimony to the effect that the Accused were "involved in a national scheme to supply a national civil defence program" with arms. This testimony substantially overlaps with evidence already heard by the Chamber during the Prosecution's case and, in any event, does not implicate the Accused in any particular conduct.[5] The second category concerns responsibility for the death of the Prime Minister on 7 April 1994. The witness repeatedly denied knowing who was responsible for the death of the Prime Minister.[6] The third category is testimony concerning criminal acts by soldiers at Kabgayi. This testimony substantially repeats evidence heard during the Prosecution case.[7]

6. The testimony of the witness in these three categories, viewed individually or cumulatively, has not been shown to be of sufficient importance to significantly affect the fair conduct of the trial or its outcome.[8] This condition for granting an interlocutory appeal is, therefore, not satisfied.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the application.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the "Motion for Investigation and Production of (Additional) Evidence", filed by the Bagosora Defence on 13 December 2005;

CONSIDERING the Prosecution Response, filed on 19 December 2005; the Ntabakuze Reply, filed on 9 January 2006; and the Bagosora Reply, filed on 10 February 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the application.

Introduction

1. The Bagosora Defence seeks an order requiring the Prosecution to (i) disclose any and all evidence gathered during any investigation into the assassination of President Habyarimana on 6 April 1994; (ii) disclose any exculpatory information obtained as a result of such investigations; and (iii) undertake additional investigations into the assassination. The motion also requests that the United Nations be obliged to disclose any evidence in its possession concerning the assassination, including the flight recorder of the Presidential aircraft.[1] The Defence argues that although Colonel Bagosora is not charged with any involvement in the President's assassination, suggestions to that effect during the Prosecution cross-examination of the Accused has transformed the event into "a material fact to which the Accused must now answer".[2] Various grounds for these orders are invoked, including Rules 66 (B), 68, and 98 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence.

Deliberations

2. The relevance to this trial of evidence concerning the assassination of President Habyarimana, which the Defence attributes to agents of the Rwandan Patriotic Front, has been the object of several decisions of this Chamber.[3] The fullest discussion arose in connection with an Ntabakuze request for a subpoena to a former investigator of the Office of the Prosecutor:

> The Indictment does not attribute responsibility for the attack on the Presidential airplane to any of the Accused or their alleged co-conspirators. Paragraph 6.2 of the Indictment states neutrally that: "On 6 April 1994 at about 8:30 p.m., the plane carrying, among other passengers, the President of the Republic, Juvénal Habyarimana, was shot down on its approach to Kigali Airport, Rwanda." This event is characterized as the trigger for the massacres which ensued; but, unlike other paragraphs of the Indictment, no involvement of the Accused is alleged. Nor did the Prosecution present evidence during its case-in-chief to prove any responsibility by the Accused in the assassination. The only such suggestion was made during the cross-examination of the Accused Bagosora, when the Prosecution put to Colonel Bagosora that he had been involved in the attack on the Presidential airplane. The Prosecution has made clear, in responding to separate motion by the Bagosora Defence, that this question was posed only for the purpose of challenging the witness's credibility, as he had himself discussed responsibility to the attack during his examination-in-chief. The Prosecution did not suggest, and indeed specifically renounced, that it was seeking to hold the Accused criminally responsibility for the President's assassination.
>
> The conspiracy in which the Accused is alleged to have participated does not include the attack on the Presidential airplane on 6 April 1994. The Chamber summarized the nature of the conspiracy charge against the Accused in its decision on the Defence motions for dismissal following the close of the Prosecution case:
> The Prosecution asserts that the inter-relationship of the Accused as senior officers within the military sets the stage for what appears to be a series of co-ordinated or even common actions: the promulgation of the definition of the enemy, which may arguably have targeted Tutsi civilians; the dissemination of that definition amongst soldiers in the army by the Accused; the uncanny repetition of that definition by the four Accused on various occasions; support for the Interahamwe using the resources of the military; and, finally, the direct evidence of some of the Accused being together on various occasions during one or more acts – speeches, preparing lists, ordering killings – which arguably encouraged the commission of genocide.
> Evidence that persons other than the Accused or his alleged co-conspirators were involved in shooting down the Presidential plane does not make any of these allegations any less likely.
> Nor does responsibility for the assassination of President Habyarimana have any bearing on the offences alleged to have been committed by the Accused and his subordinates after 6 April 1994. Culpability for those crimes would not be reduced because someone other than the Accused created the conditions that led to the commission of those crimes. As this Chamber has previously held in relation to a similar issue:

> Descriptions of crimes committed by RPF forces against civilians in geographic areas physically distant from combat between the opposing armed forces in 1994 would not suggest the innocence or mitigate the guilt of the accused. The impact of such events on the criminal conduct with which the accused are charged is too remote and indirect. The Defence submissions have not demonstrated that such information would assist in disproving any element of the offences with which the Accused are charged, or how it could sustain a valid excuse or justification for their alleged conduct.
> This said, the Defence is perfectly entitled, of course, to lead evidence concerning the armed conflict with the RPF, the relative strength of forces, and the impact of this context on the crimes for which the Accused is alleged to be responsible.
> The identity of the killers of President Habyarimana is undoubtedly a matter of contextual significance for the events described in the Indictment against the Accused. On this basis, the Chamber has admitted some evidence concerning this event. On the other hand, the Chamber must exercise its discretion under Rule 89 (C) to ensure that the focus of the present trial is maintained. The admission of detailed evidence on what is, essentially, a matter of collateral and indirect relevance would not assist the Chamber in determining the core issues of this trial.[4]

3. Lead Counsel for Bagosora himself challenged the relevance of questions concerning the attack on the Presidential airplane.[5] The Chamber did allow a few brief questions to Colonel Bagosora on this topic on the basis that they were intended to contradict the witness's own statements during the examination-in-chief. No incriminating admissions were elicited. No allegation implicating the Accused in the assassination of the President is to be found in the Indictment, the Pre-Trial Brief or any other Prosecution communication. Indeed, no factual evidence in support of that allegation was heard during the Prosecution case. In these circumstances, the questions posed to Colonel Bagosora during cross-examination did not transform responsibility for the assassination of President Habyarimana into a material fact in the present trial. The Chamber need not further consider whether the specific requirements for the orders requested are met.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the motion.

Even though it is the Prosecution theory, he is prosecuted for the murder of the Prime Minister, but not of the President. THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the "Request for Certification of the 'Decision on Kabiligi Motion on Exclusion of Evidence' of 4 September 2006", filed by the Kabiligi Defence on 11 September 2006;

CONSIDERING the Prosecution Response, filed on 18 September 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the request.

Introduction

1. The Kabiligi Defence requests leave to appeal the Chamber's Decision on Kabiligi Motion for Exclusion of Evidence, filed on 4 September 2006.[1] By virtue of that decision, the Chamber declared a portion of a witness's testimony inadmissible on the basis that the Defence was not given adequate notice thereof, but denied all other such requests.

Deliberations

2. Certification may be granted under Rule 73 (B) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence when a decision

[1] Bagosora et al., Decision on Kabiligi Motion for Exclusion of Evidence (TC), 4 September 2006.

> "involves an issue that would significantly affect the fair and expeditious conduct of proceedings or the outcome of the trial, and for which, in the opinion of the Trial Chamber, an immediate resolution by the Appeals Chamber may materially advance the proceedings".

3. The Kabiligi Defence wishes to appeal the Chamber's decision on three specific grounds: first, as to second, that the Chamber misapplied the principle of "curing" so as to allow the Prosecution to provide notice of material facts which have no connection to the Indictment; and third, that the Chamber erroneously dismissed a Defence argument that Prosecution Witness XXQ had been improperly added to the Prosecution witness list in violation of Rule 73 bis (E).

> "whether an accused can be convicted … on the basis of new charges not pleaded in the Indictment";

4. Since this request for certification was filed, the Appeals Chamber has rendered a decision concerning another Defence request for exclusion of evidence on similar grounds.[2] The first two grounds of appeal proposed by the Kabiligi Defence have now, to at least some degree, been considered by the Appeals Chamber. Another appeal based on those same grounds would not materially advance the proceedings.

5. Certification on the third ground of appeal, concerning the alleged failure to amend the witness list, is essentially a procedural matter falling with the Trial Chamber's discretion. Furthermore, Witness XXQ's testimony is well-defined and can be addressed by the Defence on any appeal from a final judgement, should that be necessary. Under these circumstances, immediate resolution of this question would not materially advance the proceedings.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the request.

BEING SEIZED OF the "Motion to Request the Hearing of the Testimony of Witnesses LX-1 and ALL-42 To Take Place in Closed Session", etc., and the "Motion to Request (1) the Hearing of the Entire Testimony of Witnesses LCH-01 and LAX-02 to Take Place in Closed Session", etc., filed by the Kabiligi Defence on 22 September and 2 October 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

1. Requests to hear the testimony of a witness in closed session are customarily heard and decided orally at the beginning of a witness's appearance. This procedure enjoys the advantage of permitting the witness to be questioned by the Chamber as to the nature of their security concerns.[1] The Chamber considers this to be an appropriate procedure and will, accordingly, defer any decision on whether to hear the testimony of Witness ALL-42 and Witness LAX-02 entirely in closed session until such time as the witness appears in court to give testimony.

2. The requests concerning Witness LX-1 and Witness LCH-01 are moot, having been granted by the Chamber orally on 3 October 2006.[2]

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the motion.

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the "Motion to Request the Testimony of Witnesses YUL-39 and LAX-23 to be Heard Via Video Link and the Entirety of the Testimony of Witness LAX-23 in Closed Session", filed by the Kabligi Defence on 12 October 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

Introduction

1. The Kabiligi Defence requests that Witness YUL-39 and Witness LAX-23 be permitted to give their testimony by video-conference. Both witnesses fear that their security would be placed at risk by travelling out of their countries of current residence, as they were both high-profile officials in the former Government of Rwanda. They believe that they may be arrested while in transit, or targeted for assassination.

Deliberations

2. Testimony by video-conference may be ordered pursuant either to Rule 54 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence, on the basis that it is "in the interests of justice"; or as a witness protection measure under Rule 75, which requires that the video-conference be "necessary to safeguard the witness's security".[1] Whether video-conference testimony is in the interests of justice under Rule 54 depends on three factors: the importance of the testimony; the witness's inability or unwillingness to attend; and whether a good reason has been adduced for that inability or unwillingness.[2] Although it is not absolutely necessary that the reason for the refusal to attend be objectively justified, a showing must at least be made that the witness has a credible basis for the refusal, and that those grounds are genuinely held.[3]

3. Witness YUL-39 refuses to travel to Arusha on the basis that he may be the object of an international arrest warrant issued at the behest of the Government of Rwanda. He believes that he could be subject to arrest while on the territory of a country through which he must transit between his country of current residence and Tanzania. Materials in the confidential and ex parte annex to the motion demonstrate not only that the witness is genuinely afraid of this possibility, but that the fear may be well-founded. The witness is purportedly able to describe the duties and functions of the office of G3, and to directly contradict the testimony of Prosecution Witness XXQ regarding events in Ruhengeri.

4. Witness LAX-23 held a prominent position in the civil service of the former Government of Rwanda. The motion asserts that the witness believes that his name is amongst those on a list of persons to be assassinated. The list includes the name of at least one person who was allegedly assassinated in Kenya in 1998.[4] The witness is said to have direct knowledge of the date of the Accused's return to Rwanda in April 1994 and, accordingly, can provide important alibi evidence.

5. The Defence has established that both witnesses refuse to travel to Arusha on the basis of genuinely-held fears. Although more direct evidence of Witness LAX-23's views would have been preferable, the Chamber is willing in the present case to accept the assertions in the Defence motion as an accurate reflection of the state of mind of these witnesses. Both witnesses appear to be able to give potentially exculpatory testimony in respect of clearly-defined issues. On this basis, the Chamber considers that it is in the interests of justice to allow these witnesses to testify by video-conference.

6. Requests to hear the entirety of a witness's testimony in closed session are usually decided orally after the Chamber has had the opportunity to hear the reasons for the witness's sensitivity.[5] The Chamber has generally adopted a liberal approach to such concerns, and has exercised caution in protecting witness's identities.[6] No order in respect of hearing Witness LAX-23 entirely in closed session shall be made until the Chamber has had the opportunity to hear from the witness at the beginning of his testimony.

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the "Request for Trial Chamber to Order the Government of Tanzania to Cooperate and For Subpoena for Ambassador Mpungwe", filed by the Bagosora Defence on 29 September 2006;

CONSIDERING the "Submissions in Support", filed by the Bagosora Defence on 12 October 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

1. The Bagosora Defence requests that a subpoena be issued to Ami R. Mpungwe, requiring his appearance before this Chamber to give testimony. Mr. Mpungwe, a former official of the Government of Tanzania, acted as a facilitator during the negotiation of the Arusha Accords in 1992 and 1993.

2. The applicant for a subpoena compelling the appearance of a person as a witness must show that three conditions are satisfied: (i) reasonable attempts have been made to obtain the voluntary cooperation of the witness; (ii) the prospective witness has information which can materially assist the applicant in respect of clearly identified issues relevant to the trial; and (iii) the witness's testimony must be necessary and appropriate for the conduct and fairness of the trial.[1]

3. This Chamber previously considered a request, filed on 7 July 2006, for a subpoena requiring Mr. Mpungwe to meet with the Defence, and for the assistance of the Government of Tanzania in facilitating such a meeting. In a decision of 29 August 2006, the Chamber held that the second and third conditions for the issuance of a subpoena were satisfied:

> A sufficient basis has been established to suggest that Mr. Mpungwe may have information concerning the conduct of Colonel Bagosora during the Arusha negotiations, on which this Chamber has heard direct and potentially incriminating evidence. Further, the evidence relates to a specific allegation in paragraph 5.10 of the Indictment that the Accused "openly manifested his opposition to the concessions made by the Government representative … to the point of leaving the negotiation table. Colonel Théoneste Bagosora left Arusha saying that he was returning to Rwanda to 'prepare the apocalypse'". The Defence has a reasonable basis to believe that Ambassador Mpungwe may have information which could be material to these allegations.[2]

4. The request for a subpoena was, nonetheless, denied on the basis that reasonable efforts to obtain the witness's cooperation had not yet been exhausted. Although the Defence, in conjunction with the Registry, had been trying to arrange a meeting with Mr. Mpungwe since 28 April 2006,[3] the impasse appeared attributable to the witness's good faith belief that official authorization was required before he could meet with the Defence:

> It appears that [Mr. Mpungwe] is willing to attend a meeting voluntarily, provided that he is given authorization to do so by the Tanzanian government. The Chamber observes, however, that the meeting must be held expeditiously. The trial is in its closing stages, and the Defence must be given a reasonable opportunity to ascertain the nature of the witness's knowledge and, if necessary, to call him as a witness.[4]

[4] Id. para. 4.

5. Despite the Chamber's instruction that the "meeting must be held expeditiously" and "as soon as possible", five more weeks elapsed before a meeting was finally held on 5 October 2006.[5] On 11 October 2006, after a Defence request for answers to additional written questions, Mr. Mpungwe's lawyer advised the Defence that no further responses would be forthcoming. The following day, the Defence requested, through Mr. Mpungwe's lawyer, the witness's immediate appearance before the Chamber, and filed the present motion.[6] According to the trial schedule, the deadline for the close of the Bagosora Defence case was 13 October 2006, and the close of the trial is scheduled for 13 December 2006.

6. The Chamber considers that the Defence has made reasonable efforts to obtain the witness's voluntary cooperation, and that a subpoena is now required to ensure his timely appearance. The lengthy delays cannot be attributed to the Defence, which appears to have acted in a diligent manner to secure the witness's testimony before the scheduled close of its case. In light of the imminent completion of the present trial, and the history of delays described above, a subpoena is now required to ensure that Mr. Mpungwe appears during the next trial session.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

GRANTS the motion;

ORDERS the Registrar to prepare a subpoena in accordance with this decision, addressed to Ami R. Mpungwe, requiring his appearance before this Chamber to give testimony in the present case;

DIRECTS the Registry to communicate the subpoena to Mr. Mpungwe through appropriate diplomatic channels, accompanied by a copy of this Decision.

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the "Requête ... en vue d'obtenir la Coopération de la République Française", etc., filed by the Bagosora Defence on 13 Decernber 2005;

CONSIDERING "Submissions" and the "Mémoire Additionel", filed by the Bagosora Defence on 21 September and 16 October 2006, respectively;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion

Introduction

1. The Bagosora Defence wishes to call as a witness a French military officer who was present in Rwanda during some of the events described in the Indictment. The Defence asks the Chamber to issue a request to the Government of France to permit the witness to testify. Since the filing of the motion at the end of 2005, the Defence has twice interviewed the officer, with the consent and cooperation of the French authorities. France has also expressed its willingness to allow the officer to appear as a witness on certain conditions, some of which have been rejected by the Bagosora Defence[1].

Deliberations

2. Article 28 of the Statute imposes an obligation on States to

> "cooperate with the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda in the investigation and prosecution of persons accused of committing serious violations of international humanitarian law".

The issuance of such a request is subject to three conditions: (i) identification of the nature of the information sought with a reasonable degree of specificity; (ii) a showing that the information is relevant to the trial; and (iii) evidence that reasonable efforts have been undertaken to obtain the information without the intervention of the chamber[2]. The second condition requires the applicant to show that the information is relevant to any matter in issue before the Judge or Trial Chamber and that it is necessary for a fair determination of that matter[3]. A similar condition applies to the issuance of a subpoena and, in that context, Chambers have considered "whether the information can be obtained other than through the prospective witness"[4].

3. The Defence asserts that the prospective witness can give testimony as to his knowledge of the Rwandan Armed Forces and events in Kigali in 1994. In particular, he is said to have been present at the Etat major on the night of 6 to 7 April 1994[5].

4. As mentioned above, the prospective witness has met with the Defence on two occasions and, as a result of one of those meetings, produced written answers to questions posed by the Defence. Those answers, which have been communicated to the Chamber and to the Defence, demonstrate that the prospective witness has only limited knowledge concerning the Accused[6]. He appears to have met the Accused on two unremarkable occasions in 1992 and 1993. On the night of 6 April 1994, he saw Bagosora at the Etat major, but apparently did not hear him say anything of substance. He met Bagosora again during two short meetings, one on 7 April in the presence of another French official, and then finally on 9 April 1994. The witness recalls the nature of the requests made by him and his colleague during those two meetings, but apparently has little or no recollection of Colonel Bagosora's response or his attitude[7].

[2] Bagosora et al., Request to the Government of Rwanda for Cooperation and Assistance Pursuant to Article 28 of the Statute (TC), 10 March 2004.
[3] Relevance has not always been formulated in exactly the same words from one case to another. Some decisions, particularly where the relevance of the information is obvious, say no more than that the applicant must articulate its "relevance to the trial". Ndindiliyimana et al., Decision on Nzuwonomeye's Motion Requesting Cooperation From the Government of Ghana Pursuant to Article 28 of the Statute (TC), 13 February 2006, para. 6; Bagosora et al., Request to the Republic of France for Cooperation and Assistance Pursuant to Article 28 of the Statute (TC), 22 October 2004, para. 3. Where relevance is contested, however, it has also been required that the information be "relevant to any matter in issue before the Judge or Trial Chamber", and that the information be "necessary for a fair determination" of that matter. Karemera et al., Decision on Joseph Nzirorera's Motion For a Requcst for Govermental Cooperation (TC), 19 April 2005, para. 8. This language mirrors the standard codified in Rule 54 bis of the ICTY Rules which deals specifically with the conditions and modalities for issuing orders to States under Article 29 of the ICTY Statute. The Chamber considers this to be the appropriate standard. The limitation that the information be "necessary for a fair determination" of a question before the Chamber reflects a sensible concern that States and international organization not be burdened with numerous requeçts for information based on relevance alone, a standard which could potentially cast an unduly broad net. In addition, this is an area where a common standard amongst the international tribunals is desirable.

5. The prospective witness's written answers reflect a general knowledge of the Rwandan Armed Forces and of events in Kigali between 7 and 14 April 1994. The Chamber does not, however, consider that the witness's testimony on these matters is necessary and appropriate for the conduct and fairness of the trial. The Chamber has already heard extensive testimony from both Defence and Prosecution witnesses on these general issues. Further, statements which do not concern the acts and conduct of the Accused may be placed before the Chamber without necessarily requiring the witness's appearance, in appropriate circumstances[8]. Considering the general nature of the evidence, its duplicative character in relation to evidence already heard, and the alternative mechanisms by which it might be admitted, the Chamber cannot conclude that a request for the appearance of the witness is necessary and appropriate for the conduct of the trial.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the motion

CONSIDERING the correspondence filed ex parte by the Bagosora Defence on 4 October 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

Introduction

1. In its Decision of 10 March 2004, following a request by the Bagosora Defence, the Chamber asked the Government of Rwanda to determine whether it possessed any of the documents listed in Annex A of its Decision and, if so, to transmit them to the Registry as soon as possible for disclosure to the Defence[1]. The Defence submits that the Rwandan authorities have not provided a complete response. Furthermore, the Defence has attempted in vain to obtain additional information necessary for the Accused to prepare his defence[2]. As a result, the Defence requests the Chamber to ensure the cooperation of the Government of Rwanda.

[2] Motion, paras. 9-10.

2. Since the present motion was filed, the Rwandan Ministry of Foreign Affairs has provided additional information regarding two of the documents that the Defence had requested[3]. Moreover, in its 4 October 2006 filing, the Defence advised the Chamber that it has received additional communications from the Rwandan Government[4].

Discussion

3. Article 28 of the Statute imposes an obligation on States to

> "cooperate with the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda in the investigation and prosecution of persons accused of committing serious violations of international humanitarian law".

A request to a Chamber to make an order under Article 28 must set forth the nature of the information sought, its relevance to the trial, and the efforts that have been made to obtain it. Requests for assistance under Article 28 should also identify the nature of the assistance required with particularity[5].

(i) Documents Already Covered by the Chamber's 10 March 2004 Decision

4. The Chamber has already found that the documents referenced in its 10 March 2004 Decision were properly sought by the Bagosora Defence. The Defence has obtained information as to some of these documents[6]. The Chamber is persuaded that a response from the Government of Rwanda as to the remaining documents, listed in Annex A to this Decision, is appropriate, and emphasizes the need for a response as soon as possible.

(ii) Additional Documents

5. The remaining documents requested by the Defence are as follows:

a. A copy of the judicial file established in 1996 by the Parquet Général de Kigali supporting the request for extradition of Bagosora made to the Cameroonian authorities;
b. The complete copy of the 1993 agenda of Bagosora;
c. The declaration of Mr. Jean-Bosco Nkulikiyinka, made at the Auditorat Militaire in 1998, on the subject of a roadblock in Kigali;
d. The list and composition of the class for 3rd year "A" of élétromécanique at the school called EFOTEC for the school year 1993-1994;
e. The school records with the different classes attended by three particular students;
f. An interview with Mr. Faustin Twagiramungu, from June 1992, giving his point of view on the attack of the RPF made in the same period;
g. The speech given by Mr. Froduald Karamira in October 1993, after the assassination of the president of Burundi, Melchior Ndadaye; and
h. The speech given by Mr. Fdicien Gatabazi, made in January or February 1994 during a meeting of his party, the PSD.

[4] The filing noted that the Defence had received information as to lists of students from 1993-1994 EFOTEC classes and as to telephone files from Rwandatel-Terracorn.

[6] See footnotes 3 and 4 above.

6. The Chamber finds that the Defence adequately sets forth the nature of the dqcuments sought. The Defence has provided detailed descriptions and documentation showing its efforts to procure these documents.

7. The Chamber considers that documents relating directly to Bagosora (categories a-b, above) are clearly relevant to the proceedings against him. In addition, the two categories (d and e) relating to the EFOTEC school may be relevant to the trial. The declaration of Mr. Nkulikiyinka (category c) is also likely relevant, as it apparently addresses a subject (a certain roadblock said to have been set up in Kigali in April 1994) about which testimony has been given during trial[7]. As noted in the Chamber's 10 March 2004 Decision, evidence has been admitted at trial of events in 1992 which the Prosecution says is probative of an ongoing conspiracy through 1994[8]. The Chamber finds that the interview with Mr. Twagiramungu (category f) and the speeches made by Mr. Karamira and Mr. Gatabazi (categories g and h, respectively) may also be relevant to that question[9]. These documents are listed in Annex B to this Decision.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

REMINDS the Government of Rwanda of its obligation to cooperate with the Tribunal, pursuant to Article 28 of the Statute;

REQUESTS the Government of Rwanda to provide as soon as possible a response to the Request for Cooperation and Assistance of 10 March 2004 as to documents listed in Annex A of this Decision;

FURTHER REQUESTS the Government of Rwanda to determine whether it possesses any of the documents listed in Annex B of this Decision, and if so, to transmit them to the Registry as soon as possible for disclosure to the Defence;

DIRECTS the Registrar to contact the relevant authorities of the Government of Rwanda forthwith, to continue dealing with the matter until a response to the Request for Cooperation and Assistance of 10 March 2004 is received, and to report thereon to the Chamber; and

DENIES the Motion in all other respects.

Théoneste Bagosora et al., Decision on Bagosora Motion to Modify its Witness List, 11 September 2006 (ICTR-98-41)

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the Prosecution's "Motion Regarding Defence Refusal to Provide Witness Statements and Requesting Certain Relief for Deficiencies in Kabiligi Pre-Defence Brief", filed on 5 October 2006;

CONSIDERING the Defence Response, filed on 10 October 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

Introduction

1. The Prosecution requests that Kabiligi Defence witnesses be precluded from testifying because information concerning their identity or expected testimony is lacking. Specifically, the Prosecution complains that: (i) extremely limited personal information has been provided in respect of five witnesses; (ii) no statements have been disclosed in respect of twenty-one witnesses; and (iii) seventeen witnesses have not been listed on the sequence of witnesses during the final trial session, which commences on 6 November 2006.[1]

Deliberations

(i) Witness Identities

2. The scope of the Defence's obligation to provide information identifying its witnesses is defined in a previous decision of the Chamber in this case:

> The Chamber has ruled pursuant to Rule 73 ter (B) (iii) (a) that personal information of each Defence witness must be provided in the same format as had been provided by the Prosecution in respect of its witnesses. The information of particular importance is the witness's activities in 1994, parentage and birthplace, and country of present residence. The Chamber accepts that the Defence may not be in possession of all this information in respect of each and every witness, but would expect deficiencies to be rare and remedied quickly. Alleged feelings of insecurity by witnesses provide no justification for withholding their place of residence. Exigent witness protection measures are in place to satisfy those concerns. The Defence cannot rely upon expressions of insecurity by witnesses as a basis for refusing to provide witness identifying information.[2]

The Kabiligi Defence does not appear to dispute this obligation, but asserts that it > "does not intend to call witnesses without providing witness particulars at least 35 days in advance."[3]

Although the Chamber has, in the exercise of its discretion, permitted Defence witnesses to be added to witness lists provided that at least thirty-five days' notice is given before their appearance, this is not a procedure or a time-period which can be accepted as automatic.[4] On the contrary, the Chamber has already specifically ordered that

> "the Kabiligi Pre-Defence Brief, which shall include witness identifying information and summaries of expected testimony, shall be filed no later than 7 July 2006."[5]

Failure to provide the witness identifying information in accordance with that deadline constitutes a default. The Chamber's previous decision acknowledges that there may be circumstances which excuse such a default, but that such occasions should be "rare and remedied quickly". It appears from the emails annexed to the Prosecution motion that at least some of the deficiencies may be attributable to lack of information, rather than to a wilful disregard of the Chamber's order.[6] Further, some of those annexes suggest that the Defence may have complied, to a certain degree, with the Chamber's order in respect of some of the witnesses.

3. The Chamber affirms its previous order requiring the defence to disclose the following information concerning its witnesses: name, nationality, sex, parentage, birthplace, birthdate, present occupation and occupation in April 1994, and country of current residence. Should any deficiencies remain as of the date of this decision, the Prosecution may make further detailed submissions as to the nature of the information lacking, the insufficiency of any explanation given by the Defence, and the consequences of such failure on investigations.

[1] Three of the five witnesses in the first category also fall into the second category. The categories do not otherwise appear to overlap.

(ii) Witness Statements

4. The Kabiligi Defence denies that it owes any obligation to disclose statements of its witnesses to the Prosecution.

5. Although the Defence is under no obligation to take statements from its witnesses, it must disclose any statements which have been taken. The Chamber did not specifically recapitulate this obligation in its written decision setting the date for disclosure of the Kabiligi Pre-Defence Brief, but that obligation was clearly stated in respect of the general disclosure requirements of all four Defence teams.[7] To the extent that any statements given by the twenty-one witnesses identified by the Prosecution exist and are in the possession of the Defence, they must be disclosed forthwith.

(iii) Sequencing

4. Failure to list a witness among the sequence of expected witnesses is not a deficiency that warrants precluding testimony. Such scheduling is understood to be provisional, and may depend on matters beyond the control of the party calling the witnesses. Some flexibility is required to ensure that a party is able to present its case effectively. Any last minute changes are, of course, subject to the Chamber's control to ensure that proceedings are fair and that no party is unfairly surprised.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

AFFIRMS that the Defence has an immediate obligation to disclose the identities of its witnesses, in accordance with the Chamber's previous decision;

ORDERS the Defence to disclose immediately any statements of its witnesses as may exist and are in its possession;

DENIES the motion in all other respects.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the "Motion for Cooperation from the Government of France Pursuant to Article 28 of the Statute of the ICTR and Issuance of Subpoenas Pursuant to Rule 54 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence", filed by the Kabiligi Defence on 4 October 2006;

CONSIDERING the Registrar's Submissions, filed on 10 October 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

Introduction

1. The Kabiligi Defence asks the Chamber to issue a request to the Government of France to authorize interviews with four retired military officers, with a view to calling them as witnesses. In accordance with procedures previously insisted upon by the French authorities in respect of current or former officials, the Defence requests assistance and authorization for the officers to provide answers to a written questionnaire, and then to attend informal interviews and formal hearings during which pre-determined questions are posed to the prospective witnesses. Citing lengthy delays and the imminent deadline for the close of the trial, the Defence asks the Chamber to set a specific date for the interviews prior to the start of the next trial session on 6 November 2006, and to issue subpoenas commanding the appearance of the officers before the Chamber.

Deliberations

2. Article 28 of the Statute imposes an obligation on States to

> "cooperate with the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda in the investigation and prosecution of persons accused of committing serious violation of international humanitarian law". T he "investigation and prosecution of persons" encompasses not only Prosecution investigations, but the entire trial process, including the right of the Accused in Article 20 (4) (e) to "obtain the attendance and examination of witnesses on his or her behalf under the same conditions as witnesses against him or her".[1] Article 28 (2) requires more particularly that States act "without undue delay" to respond to requests for "the taking of testimony and the production of evidence".

3. On 16 March 2006, a Defence request for assistance in facilitating and authorizing the completion of written questionnaires by four former military officers was conveyed by the Registrar to the Government of France.[2] Additional requests were relayed on 2 June and 12 July 2006.[3] On 16 August 2006, the French authorities undertook to assist the Defence in its inquiries by communicating the answers to the written questionnaires "dans les meilleurs délais possibles" and by facilitating the interviews and hearings of the four witnesses, which are prescribed by French law as a pre-condition for the appearance of the individuals as witnesses in trial proceedings. It doubted, however, that both the informal interviews and formal hearings of all four prospective witnesses could be scheduled during a single Defence visit to France.

4. This trial is scheduled to close on 13 December 2006. Under these circumstances, the need for the Government of France to expeditiously fulfil its commitment to provide written answers to the questionnaires, and to permit interviews with the witnesses, is urgent and immediate.

5. Issuance of subpoenas requiring testimony of the four prospective witnesses is premature. Although the Kabiligi Defence has provided a general indication as to the nature of the expected testimony of the witnesses, the Chamber cannot at this stage evaluate its relevance to the trial, or whether it is necessary for its fair conduct.[4] Nor does the Chamber consider it necessary or appropriate to establish specific dates for the informal interviews and formal hearings. Despite the delays that have followed the first Defence request on 16 March 2006, the Chamber has no reason to doubt that the Government of France will now act expeditiously to ensure that the requested information is produced in a timely manner, and with due regard to the urgency of the trial calendar.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

REQUESTS the Government of France to comply immediately with its commitment to provide written answers to the questionnaires to each of the four prospective witnesses;

REQUESTS the Government of France to complete the procedures prescribed by its own law as expeditiously as possible, in light of the calendar described in the present decision.

DENIES the request for subpoenas and a specific hearing schedule as premature.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the "Request for Certification of a Decision of 20 October 2006", filed by the Bagosora Defence on 27 October 2006;

CONSIDERING the Prosecution Response, filed on 27 October 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the request.

Introduction

1. The Bagosora Defence requests leave to file an interlocutory appeal against a decision of this Chamber of 20 October 2006 (the "Impugned Decision"), declining to issue a request for cooperation to the Government of France, pursuant to Article 28 of the Statute.[1] The nature of the requested assistance was for the appearance before this Chamber of a military officer to give testimony.

Deliberations

2. Leave to file an interlocutory appeal of a decision "may" be granted under Rule 73 (B) where it and where "immediate resolution may materially advance the proceedings".

> "involves an issue that would significantly affect the fair and expeditious conduct of proceedings or the outcome of the trial"

(i) Materially advances the proceedings

3. The Defence advances several grounds upon which the Impugned Decision is said to be erroneous, immediate resolution of which would materially advance the proceedings.[2] The Defence contends that the Chamber erred by requiring not only that the information be "relevant to the trial", but also that it be "necessary for a fair determination" of any matter before the Chamber.[3] The jurisprudence concerning the issuance of requests to States under Article 28 does not, according to the Defence, support such a standard. The Chamber failed to appreciate a distinction between a mere request for cooperation under Article 28, sought by the Bagosora Defence in this case, and a binding order to a State, which might arguably be subject to the higher standard.[4] Furthermore, the Impugned Decision is said to create an inappropriate distinction between the standard for admission of evidence, which is relevance alone, and the standard for requests for the production of evidence.[5]

[2] Bagosora et al., Decision on Motion for Reconsideration Concerning Standards for Granting Certification of Interlocutory Appeals (TC), 16 February 2006, para. 4 ("Numerous Trial Chamber decisions – and not only by this Trial Chamber – have applied this concept more generally, and inquired into the basis of the prospective appeal … It must be "the opinion of the Trial Chamber" that certification could "materially advance the proceedings": in the absence of any reasonably articulated ground of appeal, certification could not materially advance the proceedings. This does not mean, of course, that a Trial Chamber should simply substitute its own opinion for that of the Appeals Chamber; rather, the appropriate inquiry is whether a showing has been made that the appeal could succeed. That threshold would be met, for example, by showing some basis to believe that the Chamber committed an error as to the applicable law; that it made a patently incorrect conclusion of fact; or that it was so unfair or unreasonable as to constitute an abuse of the Trial Chamber's discretion").

[3] Motion, paras. 6-7. The Defence refers to footnote 3 of the Impugned Decision, which reads: "Relevance has not always been formulated in exactly the same words from one case to another. Some decisions, particularly where the relevance of the information is obvious, say no more than that the applicant must articulate its 'relevance to the trial'. Ndindiliyimana et al., Decision on Nzuwonomeye's Motion Requesting Cooperation From the Government of Ghana Pursuant to Article 28 of the Statute (TC), 13 February 2006, para. 6; Bagosora et al., Request to the Republic of France for Cooperation and Assistance Pursuant to Article 28 of the Statute (TC), 22 October 2004, para. 3. Where relevance is contested, however, it has also been required that the information be 'relevant to any matter in issue before the Judge or Trial Chamber', and that the information be 'necessary for a fair determination' of that matter. Karemera et al., Decision on Joseph Nzirorera's Motion for a Request for Governmental Cooperation (TC), 19 April 2005, para. 8. This language mirrors the standard codified in Rule 54 bis of the ICTY Rules which deals specifically with the conditions and modalities for issuing orders to States under Article 29 of the ICTY Statute. The Chamber considers this to be the appropriate standard. The limitation that the information be 'necessary for a fair determination' of a question before the Chamber reflects a sensible concern that States and international organization not be burdened with numerous requests for information based on relevance alone, a standard which could potentially cast an unduly broad net. In addition, this is an area where a common standard amongst the international tribunals is desirable."

[4] Motion, paras. 8, 10-19.

[5] Id., paras. 8-9.

4. The Impugned Decision explicitly acknowledges that the relevance of information sought from a State has been accepted on some occasions as sufficient for the issuance of a request under Article 28, without the need for also showing that it is "necessary for a fair determination" of an issue before the Chamber.[6] Indeed, in 2004 this Chamber made such a request in respect of this very witness.[7] On that occasion, however, the Defence sought only an informal meeting with the prospective witness, to ascertain the extent of his knowledge. The question before the Chamber in the Impugned Decision, however, was not whether the "necessary for a fair determination" standard is applicable to any and all Article 28 requests, but whether it applies to the specific request for the personal appearance of the state official before the Chamber to give testimony.

5. The Defence argues that the standard for the issuance of a subpoena is inapposite as it concerns a binding order, whereas the Defence in the present case sought only a non-binding request under Article 28. This purported distinction between binding and non-binding requests is unsustainable. Article 28 does not contemplate non-binding orders to States. Article 28 (2) provides that > "States shall comply without undue delay with any request for assistance or an order issued by a Trial Chamber…" (emphasis added).

Whether the term "request" or "order" is used is immaterial to its binding character. Furthermore, the content of the specific requests by the Defence were sought as a specific remedy for the alleged non-compliance of the State.[8] The intervention of the Chamber would serve no purpose if its requests to States pursuant to Article 28 were not binding. Furthermore, nothing short of the actual appearance of the witness before the Chamber would have complied with the requests as proposed by the Defence. Accordingly, no basis has been presented to believe that the Chamber's consideration of the standard for the issuance of subpoenas was misplaced or erroneous.

6. The standard for the admission of evidence does not dictate the standard for the issuance of requests or orders for the production of evidence, as is amply demonstrated by the conditions for the issuance of a subpoena.[9] This consequence of the Impugned Decision does not constitute a ground to believe that it is erroneous.

7. The Defence also complains that the Chamber improperly relied on a procès-verbal of a hearing of the witness before the Tribunal de Grande Instance de Paris, arguing that this document is "defence privileged work product", and that it had been inappropriately transmitted by the Registry to the Chamber. Rule 97 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence prescribes that "[a]ll communications between lawyer and client shall be regarded as privileged", subject to two conditions which are not relevant here. The document in question does not reflect any private communications between any lawyer and his or her client. Rather, it describes a formal hearing of a prospective witness before a French judicial officer, in the presence of counsel for the Accused.[10] It was entirely appropriate in these circumstances for the Registry to inform the Chamber of its efforts to secure the witness's Mémoire additionel, etc., filed on 16 October 2006. The Chamber was also asked to "Déclarer applicables à l'audition du [témoin] devant la Chambre de céans les modalités proposés par la défense". In several respects, those proposed modalities conflicted with those proposed by the French authorities.

On 16 December 2005, the Bagosora Defence filed its motion for the appearance of the witness. Consideration of that motion was deferred after representations from the Bagosora Defence that progress was being made, with the assistance of the Registry, to secure the witness's appearance without the need for an Article 28 request. testimony, including the results of the formal hearing of the witness. No impropriety or breach of privilege has been established in relation to the procès-verbal which could constitute a viable ground of appeal.

(ii) Fair and expeditious proceedings

8. Even assuming that the appeal would materially advance the proceedings, neither the fair and expeditious conduct of proceedings nor the outcome of the trial is affected by the absence of this witness. The procès-verbal shows that the witness has only limited knowledge of the Accused, and little or no recollection of his responses or attitude on those few occasions when they did meet. The Defence has failed to identify more general elements of the witness's prospective testimony which are of such significance as to affect the fair and expeditious conduct of proceedings or their outcome. Furthermore, evidence which does not concern the acts and conduct of the Accused may, in appropriate circumstances, be placed before the court by way of written statements.[11] The witness's appearance before the Chamber has not, therefore, been shown to be of sufficient importance to significantly affect the fair and expeditious conduct of the trial or its outcome.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the motion.

CONSIDERING the Prosecution "Response to Kabiligi Motion to Request the Testimony of Witness Delta to be Heard Via Video-Conference and in Closed Session", filed on 1 November 2006; HEREBY ISSUES the following decision proprio motu.

INTRODUCTION

On 1 November, the Chamber granted a Kabiligi Defence request to hear one of its witnesses by video-conference.[1] Later that same day, the Prosecution filed a response to the motion which suggested that a factual predicate of the motion was incorrect. The Chamber considers that the matters raised in the Prosecution response warrant additional submissions by the Defence, and hereby requests, in light of the urgent need to resolve this question expeditiously, that such submissions be made no later than 7 November 2006.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

REQUESTS that the Kabiligi Defence file submissions in relation to the Prosecution Response concerning testimony of Witness Delta by video-conference no later than 7 November 2006.

CONSIDERING the Prosecution Response, filed on 2 October 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the request.

Introduction

1. The Nsengiyumva Defence requests leave to appeal a decision of this Chamber dated 15 September 2006 concerning exclusion of evidence alleged to be outside the scope of the Indictment[1]. On 18 September 2006, the Appeals Chamber decided an interlocutory appeal from a decision concerning one of the other Accused in the present case on the same question[2]. The Appeals Chamber decision, in accordance with the scope of the questions certified, addressed only the legal principles applied by the Trial Chamber, as distinct from their application to specific evidence. The Appeals Chamber largely affirmed those principles, but instructed this Chamber to reconsider its decision on the basis of two additional criteria[3].

Deliberations

2. Certification may be granted under Rule 73 (B) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence when a decision

> "involves an issue that would significantly affect the fair and expeditious conduct of proceedings or the outcome of the trial, and for which, in the opinion of the Trial Chamber, an immediate resolution by the Appeals Chamber may materially advance the proceedings".

3. The present request for certification was filed after the Appeals Chamber's decision. To some degree, the request seems to be based on the additional criteria articulated by the Appeals Chamber[4]. Such arguments are more appropriately presented in the form of a motion for reconsideration, rather than certification.

4. In other respects, the present motion recapitulates legal arguments which have already been resolved by the Appeals Chamber, or challenge s the Chamber's application of those legal principles to specific evidence. Certification on these grounds would not, in the Chamber's view, materially advance the proceedings. No useful purpose would be served by requesting the Appeals Chamber to revisit legal principles which it has only recently affirmed. Nor would certification be appropriate in respect of the ir application to specific evidence. That assessment, which depends heavily on the nature of the evidence in relation to the Indictment and any subsequent timely, clear and consistent clarification of the material facts alleged against the Accused, involves an evaluation of factual questions which are primarily for the trier of fact to weigh[5].

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the request.

HEREBY DECIDES the request.

Introduction

1. The Bagosora Defence requests leave to appeal the Chamber's oral decision to admit as Exhibit P-417, a single page from a larger document whose most notable feature is a pie-chart purporting to show the percentage of killings in which various groups – including Interahamwe, soldiers, gendarmes – participated in Kigali-Ville. The page was prepared, disclosed and filed with the Registry as part of an expert report for the Ntabakuze Defence, but which was never tendered as such. The Prosecution first used the pie-chart during the cross-examination of a Defence witness on 25 September 2006. The Chamber denied objections to questions soliciting the witness's comment on the chart, but reserved its position as to whether the single-page document, or the entire report, should be admitted as an exhibit.[1] The Prosecution used the document in a similar way during the cross-examination of a different witness on 28 September 2006, and the Bagosora Defence objected again. The Chamber allowed the questions and ruled that "we will allow page 29411 to be an exhibit in this case. It was used during [cross-]examination".[2]

2. Certification may be granted under Rule 73 (B) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence when a decision

> "involves an issue that would significantly affect the fair and expeditious conduct of proceedings or the outcome of the trial, and for which, in the opinion of the Trial Chamber, an immediate resolution by the Appeals Chamber may materially advance the proceedings"[3].

The Appeals Chamber has held that:

> It is first and foremost the responsibility of the Trial Chambers, as triers of fact, to determine which evidence to admit during the course of the trial; it is not for the Appeals Chamber to assume this responsibility. As the Appeals Chamber has previously underscored, certification of an appeal has to be the absolute exception when deciding on the admissibility of evidence.[4]

Such an exception could arise where the decision involves a "substantial" or "broad" category of evidence, "or where it determines particularly crucial matters of procedure and evidence".[5]

3. The Defence has not shown that the decision to admit Exhibit P-417 involves a broad or substantial category of evidence, or that it otherwise raises a crucial matter of procedure or evidence, so as to affect the fair and expeditious conduct of proceedings or the outcome of the trial. The document was used only for the purpose of eliciting comment from the witnesses. No aspect of the document or its use during trial proceedings warrants an interlocutory appeal.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the request.

BEING SEIZED OF the "Motion Requesting Suspension of Trial on Medical Grounds", filed by the Nsengiyumva Defence on 8 November 2006;

CONSIDERING the Registrar's Submissions, filed on 13 November 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

Introduction

1. Presentation of evidence by the Nsengiyumva, Bagosora, and Ntabakuze Defence teams closed on 13 October 2006.[1] With the exception of four Bagosora witnesses and one Ntabakuze witness, the present and final session of the trial is devoted exclusively to hearing witnesses on behalf of Kabiligi.[2]

2. On 8 November 2006, Lead Counsel for Nsengiyumva announced that his client was ill and unable to attend proceedings. He indicated that the Accused had no intention of waiving his right to be present, and requested a suspension of the trial until his client was able to return to court.[3] A written motion, filed simultaneously, argued that "most of the witnesses about to take the stand, e.g. ALL 42 and Kambanda are particularly important witnesses whose testimony he absolutely must follow".[4] After an adjournment to allow the Defence time to more fully consult with their client, the Chamber received a medical report from the Registry indicating that "one week rest is recommended for his condition to improve".[5]

3. The Chamber asked whether there were any witnesses of less importance to the Nsengiyumva Defence whom the Accused would consent to be heard in his absence. Lead Counsel responded:

> Now, as I said in the morning, the other witnesses may have nothing obvious, on the face of it, that will have an impact on the defence of the Accused person. But, we do not know what is likely to come out of the cross-examination of those witnesses by the Prosecution, and that is where our difficulty is. So that out of abundant caution, it will be safe that the Accused person is in court to give instructions when issues that are likely to be prejudicial arise during cross-examination either by the Prosecution or by the other Defence teams.[6]

In respect of Witnesses Kambanda and ALL-42, Lead Counsel explained that the situation > is slightly different. It's both the prejudicial testimony and also the possibility of getting exculpatory testimony from those two witnesses. We will lose that if the Accused is not in court, because we believe that they have important – particularly, the first one, ALL-42, he has important information that we could elicit from him…[7]

4. After hearing the parties, the Chamber ruled orally that it would proceed with the examination-in-chief of Witness ALL-42, but would reserve its position as to the timing of any possible Nsengiyumva and Prosecution cross-examination of the witness.[8] Upon completion of the witness's examination-in-chief and cross-examination by the two other Defence teams, the Nsengiyumva Defence re-affirmed that it was not in a position to decide whether to cross-examine the witness. The Chamber decided to postpone the remainder of the witness's testimony.[9]

5. The Kabiligi Defence then called Witness YC-03. At the end of the examination-in-chief and the Prosecution cross-examination the following day, 9 November 2006, the Nsengiyumva Defence indicated that it was not able to take a position in respect of any additional cross-examination of the witness. The Chamber decided that the witness would remain in Arusha, subject to possible recall by the Nsengiyumva Defence, which should consult with its client on the basis of the transcripts in order to determine whether to cross-examine the witness.[10] After the completion of the examination-in-chief of the next Kabiligi witness, Witness LAX-2, the Nsengiyumva Defence again reserved its right to conduct a cross-examination.[11] On 13 November 2006, the Nsengiyumva Defence repeated its objection to hearing evidence in the absence of the Accused. The Chamber nevertheless heard Kabiligi Witness FB-25, who had previously appeared in the trial as Ntabakuze Witness DM-190.

6. On 13 November 2006, the Chamber received a second medical report from the Registry stating that the Accused would be able to attend trial hearings effective 14 November 2006, subject to being able to take a ten-minute break every two hours, and to elevate his leg.[12] The next day, the Accused was present in court, but complained that he was in significant pain that made it difficult for him to consult meaningfully with his counsel.[13]

Deliberations

7. Article 20 (4) (d) of the Statute recognizes the right of an accused "to be tried in his or her presence". This right, however, is not absolute; it is subject to

> "the proportionality principle, pursuant to which any restriction on a fundamental right must be in service of a sufficiently important objective and must impair the right no more than is necessary to accomplish the objective".[14]

Furthermore, implied waiver of this right may arise where an accused is given the opportunity to attend trial, but declines to do so without establishing good cause for the absence.[15] No implied waiver will arise where an accused shows good cause, such as the existence of a medical condition that makes attending trial impossible.[16]

8. Failure to attend proceedings because of illness must be substantiated by a professional medical assessment.[17] The Chamber accepts, on the basis of the first medical report submitted by the Registry, that the Accused was unable to attend trial proceedings on 8, 9, 10 and 13 November 2006. On 14 November 2006, the Accused came to court and addressed the Chamber, saying that he was in pain which prevented him from following the proceedings or engaging in meaningful consultations with his lawyers.[18] Although the Chamber is sympathetic to this claim, it must be guided by the medical report prepared by the attending physician. That report says that the Accused was sufficiently recovered to attend the trial on 14 November 2006. As of that date, the Accused's absence from court has not been substantiated by a professional medical opinion. The Chamber must infer in such circumstances that the Accused's absence is not justified by good cause.[19] Having said this, the Chamber remains open to any further medical reports that may suggest the contrary, and is anxious to ensure that the Accused is closely monitored to ensure that he receives the highest possible standard of health care.[20]

9. The Chamber does not consider that any unjustifiable restriction has been placed on the Accused's right to be present at his trial. First and foremost, the case for the Accused has already closed. None of the witnesses now being called by the other Defence teams appear to be adverse to the Accused. Nsengiyumva argues, nonetheless, that prejudicial testimony might be elicited by the Prosecution from those witnesses, in particular of Witness ALL-42 and Kambanda, and that the Defence might be able to obtain exculpatory testimony from these and other Kabiligi witnesses.

10. The Chamber has taken measures to address the concerns raised by the Nsengiyumva Defence, to the extent that they are justified. The Prosecution cross-examination of Witness ALL-42 was deferred until 16 November 2006. The testimony of other witnesses has been heard, but the Chamber has indicated its openness to specific submissions to allow the recall of these witnesses for additional questioning and, in one case, directed that a witness remain in Arusha to provide the Nsengiyumva Defence, in consultation with the Accused, an opportunity to decide whether to do so.[21] Transcripts and video-recordings of the testimony are available to the Accused so that he can meaningfully and knowledgeably consult with his Defence team about the need to cross-examine the witness or, at least, to offer more specific submissions concerning the relevance of the their testimony to the Accused.

11. The Nsengiyumva Defence has been unable to show the relevance to the Accused of any testimony heard in his absence. The only specific area of potential interest identified by the Nsengiyumva Defence during the testimony so far concerns a few questions posed to Witness LAX-2 concerning his knowledge of a Prosecution witness.[22] Witness LAX-2 made no reference to Nsengiyumva in his testimony, and the context in which he mentions the Prosecution witness is unrelated to any testimony by that witness against the Accused.[23] The Chamber considers the connection between this testimony and Nsengiyumva to be, at its highest, marginal. No undue restriction is placed on the Accused's right to be present at his trial by permitting this testimony to be heard under the conditions described above.

12. The Defence has invoked the recent Appeals Chamber decision in Zigiranyirazo to reverse a Trial Chamber decision to hear a witness in The Netherlands while the Accused observed proceedings by video-link in Arusha, accompanied by his counsel. A series of factors show that precedent to be inapposite. The witness being heard in that case was considered a "key Prosecution witness" against the accused, whereas the witnesses here are appearing on behalf of another co-Accused and no showing has been made that these witnesses have any particular relevance to Nsengiyumva.[24] A further consideration was the Appeals Chamber's opinion that other options could have been explored to ensure that the Accused was present during the hearing of the witness. The Appeals Chamber did not accept as determinative or as sufficiently established the claims that the witness's security would be at risk by travelling to Arusha, and that the Accused was barred from entering The Netherlands for the hearing.[25] No such considerations are relevant in the present case. Finally, Mr. Zigiranyirazo was being tried alone. Here, the Chamber must consider the potential impact of an adjournment on, in particular, the rights of the Accused Kabiligi. Significant, long-term efforts are often required to ensure the appearance of witnesses before this Tribunal. The risk of losing witnesses poses a much greater threat of prejudice to the Accused Kabiligi than the speculative and remote prejudice to the Accused Nsengiyumva.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the motion.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the "Motion to Present Its Witnesses Prior to Resting Its Case and Request for Leave to Vary Witness List", filed by the Bagosora Defence on 26 October 2006;

CONSIDERING the Prosecution Response, filed on 30 October 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

Introduction

1. The Bagosora Defence requests authorization to: (i) add five witnesses to its witness list, two of whom are proposed as replacements for existing witnesses; (ii) call these five plus six other witnesses whose names already appear on the witness list, notwithstanding that the deadline for hearing the Bagosora Defence case, as prescribed by the trial schedule, has passed; and (iii) file additional documentary evidence.

Deliberations

(i) Variation of the Witness List

2. Rule 73 ter (E) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("the Rules") provides that:

> After commencement of the Defence case, the Defence, if it considers it to be in the interests of justice, may move the Trial Chamber for leave to reinstate the list of witnesses or to vary its decision as to which witnesses are to be called.

Amendments to a witness list, whether of the Prosecution or the Defence, must be supported by "good cause" and be in the "interests of justice". A variety of factors are weighed as part of this evaluation:

> the sufficiency and time of disclosure of the witness' information; the materiality and probative value of the proposed testimony in relation to existing witnesses and allegations in the indictment; the ability of the other party to make an effective cross-examination of the witness; and the justification offered by the party for the addition of the witness.[1]

A request to add new witnesses late in a party's case will be scrutinized closely, particularly where it may have the effect of prolonging proceedings.[2] As this Chamber recently held in granting a Bagosora request to amend its witness list:

[2] Muvunyi, Decision on Accused's Motion to Expand and Vary the Witness List (TC), 28 March 2006, para. 17 ("in light of the very advanced stage of these proceedings, and considering the fact that the Defence has already called the final witness on its original list, the Chamber is of the view that it would not be in the interests of justice to allow the Defence Motion");

> Furthermore, the limited time required to hear these witnesses suggests that the orderly appearance of witnesses within the time scheduled before the end of the [Defence] case will not be disturbed, particularly in light of the withdrawal of a number of other witnesses. No basis arises from the present motion to alter the present trial schedule, which requires the Bagosora Defence to call all of its factual witnesses by the end of the present session on 13 October 2006.[3]

A request by the Nsengiyumva Defence to amend its witness list just before its last trial session for presenting evidence was granted subject to the provison that

> "[t]he opportunity to call these witnesses depends on the Defence's own ability to fit them within the existing judicial calendar".[4]

3. The present motion was filed on 24 October 2006, more than ten days after the expiration of the deadline for hearing evidence from the Bagosora, Nsengiyumva and Ntakabuze Defence teams. As discussed below in more detail, this deadline was fixed well in advance, and based on a thorough and ongoing consideration of the progress of the Defence case, and the overriding need to ensure that the Defence had adequate time to present its evidence. The Chamber considers that the deadline reflects a reasonable exercise of its discretion to establish a trial schedule, informed by an anxious consideration of the challenges faced by the Defence in locating and calling witnesses, balanced against the right of the Accused to be tried without undue delay, as well as the interests of judicial economy. The addition of new witnesses at this late stage would extend that carefully chosen deadline, and undermine the orderly progress of the trial. The timing of the present request weighs against the Defence request to add witnesses.

4. The significance and probative value of the testimony of prospective witnesses AZ, G-08 and O-03 does not outweigh the lateness of their proposed addition to the witness list. Their expected testimony is described in general terms and none of them has yet been interviewed.[5] The Defence cannot confirm when, or even if, they are available to testify. Adding these individuals to the witness list, and keeping the Bagosora defence case open on the basis of these speculative conditions, is not in the interests of justice.

5. The request to add Ambassador Ami R. Mpungwe, however, is justified. His expected testimony, concerning his eye-witness observations at the Arusha Accord negotiations in 1992 and 1993, is described in detail and appears to the Chamber to be of potential significance. The Prosecution has been on notice of his potential appearance for some time, considering that Ambassador Mpungwe has been the object of two decisions by the Chamber requiring his cooperation and appearance as a witness.[6] Finally, the record shows unequivocally that the Defence has acted with diligence to secure the witness's appearance before the end of its case, and that the witness is now prepared to appear during the present session, in compliance with the Chamber's order. For all of these reasons, the interests of justice are served by allowing his name to be added to the witness list.

6. The Defence also wishes to add Witness ZZ on the basis that he may have information concerning the negotiation of the Arusha Accords. Unlike Ambassador Mpungwe, however, this person has apparently not yet been met by the Defence, has not previously been the object of any judicial order, and no notice of his potential appearance or disclosure of his identity has previously been given to the Prosecution. For these reasons, the Chamber considers that it is not in the interests of justice for this witness to be added to the witness list.

(ii) Extension of Time to Present Evidence

(a) General Considerations

7. The paramount concern in determining the schedule of a trial is to ensure that an accused has adequate time to prepare and present his or her case.[7] Determining what is adequate in any particular trial involves an exercise of discretion, based on a myriad of factors.[8] Such discretionary decisions, as the Appeals Chamber has explained, are guided by

> "the Trial Chamber's organic familiarity with the day-to-day conduct of the parties and practical demands of the case, and requires a complex balancing of intangibles in crafting a case-specific order to properly regulate a highly variable set of trial proceedings".[9]

The Chamber has throughout the trial adopted a flexible and incremental approach to scheduling, in order to guarantee that the Defence has an adequate opportunity to present its case.

8. The deadline of 13 October 2006 for the close of the presentation of evidence by the Bagosora Defence follows a long arc of pre-trial and trial events. The four Accused were arrested between 9 March 1996 and 18 July 1997, meaning that they have now been in custody for more than nine years.[10] Separate trials of the Accused were scheduled to commence in 1998, but were postponed as a result of an unsuccessful attempt to jointly indict them with twenty-five other defendants, and then the decision to hold a joint trial of these four Accused.[11] Opening statements were heard before Trial Chamber III on 2 April 2002, but the hearing of evidence did not start until 2 September 2002. After the non-re-election of one judge and the retirement of another, the parties agreed to continue the case before Trial Chamber I, as presently composed, on the basis of the existing trial record, which consisted of thirty-one days of testimony.[12] The remainder of the Prosecution case was heard between 14 June 2003 and 14 October 2004; over those sixteen months, in seven separate trial sessions, the Prosecution called eighty witnesses over 170 trial days.[13] On 26 October 2004, the Registrar removed Lead Counsel for the Kabiligi Defence from the legal aid program on the basis of evidence that he had committed fraud. In light of the impact of this decision on the Kabiligi Defence, the Chamber postponed the start of the Defence case until 30 March 2005.[14] On 1 March 2005, the Chamber further postponed the start of the Defence to 11 April 2005, with the start of the Kabiligi Defence to be determined at a later date.[15] The Defence began presenting its evidence on that date, almost six months after the close of the Prosecution case. Over the next eighteen months, in six separate trial sessions, the three Defence teams called 131 witnesses over 173 trial days, before reaching the 13 October 2006 deadline.

9. The Kabiligi Defence filed its Pre-Defence Brief on 7 July 2006 and commenced the presentation of its evidence concurrent with the three other Defence teams during the sixth trial session. The seventh Defence trial session, currently underway, is scheduled to be devoted exclusively to presentation of the Kabiligi Defence evidence subject, however, to the Chamber's oral decision to hear the remainder of Bagosora witness Jean Kambanda's testimony, which had begun during the last session; and to hear one Ntabakuze witness who was the object of a pre-existing subpoena.[16]

10. The Chamber repeatedly reviewed the progress of the case as the Defence phase of the trial proceeded, calibrating targets and guidelines to suit the legitimate needs of the case, rather than imposing mechanistic deadlines based on a statistical comparison with the duration of the Prosecution case. In light of the pace of testimony and submissions from the Defence concerning the number of remaining witnesses, the bench observed at the end of the third trial session that the entire Defence case should end around October 2006.[17] At the end of the fourth trial session, the Chamber expressly indicated that it was considering 14 July 2006 as the deadline for the presentation of evidence by the three Defence teams, with the remaining time given to the Kabiligi Defence. The three Defence teams raised various specific issues of concern, but did not register any fundamental disagreement with that deadline. To accommodate the specific concerns, the Chamber decided that the following session should be longer than usual, commencing on 15 May 2006, in order to provide sufficient time to finish by 14 July 2006.[18]

11. On 3 May 2006, the Presiding Judge issued a memorandum indicating that the Defence had and postponed the start of the fifth defence trial session to 29 May 2006. The memorandum then reiterated that "the three Defence teams are still expected to present all their witnesses by 14 July 2006".[19] During the fifth trial session, which commenced on 29 May 2006, the Defence failed to call any evidence on thirteen trial days, despite repeated admonitions from the Chamber to use trial time efficiently. A review of the Minutes of Proceedings shows that only 79 hours and twelve minutes of court time was utilized during that trial session, out of a minimum of 270 hours available. During that trial session, the Bagosora Defence called only four witnesses.

12. During a Status Conference near the end of the fifth trial session, the bench observed that "there are very few witnesses left from the three teams as we have seen the development during the present session".[20] Despite the three Defence teams' inability to use trial time effectively during that trial session, the Chamber authorized them to present additional evidence in the sixth trial session, concurrent with the Kabiligi Defence, from 4 September through 13 October 2006.[21] The Chamber unequivocally emphasized that this would be the last opportunity for the Bagosora, Nsengiyumva and Ntabakuze Defence teams to present their evidence.[22] Nevertheless, during that sixth trial session, proceedings were again frequently adjourned due to lack of witnesses.[23] The Chamber reiterated throughout the proceedings that the 13 October 2006 deadline remained firm, although the Chamber also emphasized that it would consider any applications to present individual witnesses beyond that date.

(b) Specific Requests

13. The requests to hear Witnesses J-07, B-06 and N-02 after the 13 October 2006 deadline are denied. The Chamber recently denied a Bagosora motion requesting the assistance of a State for the appearance of Witness J-07, on the ground that his testimony had not been shown to be necessary and appropriate for the conduct of the defence.[24] The interests of justice do not favour altering the trial schedule to accommodate a witness whose appearance is both unnecessary and unlikely. The timing of the appearance of Witness B-06 is also uncertain. The reason for his unavailability during the entire course of the Defence case prior to 13 October 2006 is unclear, and the Chamber is not persuaded that his testimony is of sufficient importance to justify his appearance at this stage. Witness N-02's expected testimony has not been described with particularity, nor has any convincing reason been given why steps could not have been taken for his appearance before 13 October 2006. The possibility that Witness N-02's testimony could have been replaced by documents, yet to be received from the Government of Rwanda, provides no justification for not having called him according to the trial schedule.

14. The Chamber will allow the Bagosora Defence to call Ambassador Mpungwe and General Gatsinzi during the last Defence trial session. Judicial orders for the cooperation and appearance of these witnesses have been outstanding since before the expiry of the 13 October 2006 deadline. The Chamber considers that the interest of justice favours hearing their evidence provided that they can appear prior to the end of the present trial session, which concludes on 13 December 2006.

15. The Chamber also authorizes the appearance of expert witnesses Bernard Lugan and Peter Caddick-Adams.[25] The Bagosora Defence's long-held and often-repeated position was that these witnesses should be permitted to testify near the end of the case so as to be able to comment on the totality of factual evidence presented by all the defendants. The Kabiligi Defence did not object to that request until recently. Under these particular circumstances, the Chamber grants leave to the Bagosora Defence to call these witnesses during the trial session which concludes on 13 December 2006. The appearance of these witnesses must be co-ordinated with the Kabiligi Defence, which must have first priority in the presentation of witnesses during the present trial session.

(iii) Documents

16. The deadlines prescribed by the Chamber for the hearing of evidence concerned testimonial evidence. The Chamber hereby declares that any Defence team may tender documentary evidence for admission through the end of the trial on 13 December 2006.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the "Motion for Disclosure of Exculpatory Evidence in the Possession of the Prosecutor Pursuant to Rule 68", filed by the Ntabakuze Defence on 11 October 2006;

CONSIDERING the Prosecution Response, filed on 31 October 2006; the Ntabakuze Reply, filed on 9 November 2006; and the Prosecution Response to the Reply, filed on 10 November 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

Introduction

1. The Ntabakuze Defence seeks disclosure of evidence concerning alleged involvement by RPF soldiers in massacres at nine specific sites between April and June 1994 that have been attributed by Prosecution witnesses to soldiers under the Accused's command. The Defence claims that confidential sources have indicated that such information, in particular in the form of witness statements, is in the Prosecution's possession.[1] The Defence also requests disclosure of material concerning "any massacres at these sites that occurred during the period July – December 1994, which have been purported to have occurred during the period of April – June 1994". More broadly, the Defence asks for "any other exculpatory information in the hands of the Prosecutor".[2]

2. The Prosecution concedes that the material concerning the nine massacre sites, if it existed, would prima facie be potentially exculpatory.[3] However, in response to the motion, the Prosecution undertook a specific review of its files which revealed, "to the best of [it]'s knowledge", that it possesses no such material.[4] It is willing to conduct further queries should the Defence provide more specific information identifying the material.[5]

Deliberations

3. Rule 68 (A) requires the Prosecution to disclose

The initial determination of what material is exculpatory, which is primarily a facts-based judgement, rests with the Prosecution.[6] The expression "actual knowledge" has been consistently interpreted as requiring that the material be in the Prosecution's possession.[7] Hence, if the Defence claims that the obligation to disclose exculpatory material has been violated it must: (i) define the material with reasonable specificity; (ii) establish that it is in the custody and control of the Prosecution; and (iii) present a prima facie case that it is, in fact, exculpatory.[8] The Prosecution is generally presumed to discharge its obligations under Rule 68 in good faith.[9]

4. The Prosecution concedes that if the material concerning the nine massacre sites were in its possession, it would be exculpatory. However, it claims that it has conducted a review of its files and made inquiries amongst its investigators which indicate that it has no such information.[10] The Chamber has no basis to reject this assertion. The Defence reference to "confidential sources" is insufficient to contradict the Prosecution's express and unequivocal statement that it has no such material to disclose.

5. The request for "any exculpatory information in the hands of the Prosecutor" is too general; it does no more than re-state the obligation already prescribed by Rule 68. The request for material concerning massacres that occurred during the period from July-December 1994, but which were "purported to" have been committed from April-June 1994, is also vague. In light of the Prosecution assertion that it has no such information, the Chamber need not consider whether the request is too uncertain and variable to be the object of an order under Rule 68.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the motion.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the Kabiligi "Motion for Disclosure of Documents Intended to be Used by the Prosecution in the Cross-Examination of the Accused Kabiligi", filed on 4 October 2006;

CONSIDERING the Prosecution Response, filed on 10 October 2006 and the Defence reply, filed on the 13 October 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

Introduction

1. The Kabiligi Defence requests four categories of documents from the Prosecution, which the Defence believes may be used during, or may be relevant to, the cross-examination of the Accused if he testifies: (i) documents or materials that "relate to the alibi" of the Accused, or his "alleged travel … around Rwanda during the period relevant to the Indictment"; (ii) "all personal agendas, diaries, passports, photographs, logs and travel documents, and correspondence to and from General Kabiligi" from the time-period covered by the Indictment up to the present; (iii) statements or documents given by the Accused to immigration authorities of various named countries; and (iv) documents seized from the Accused by ICTR investigators. These materials are sought under Rule 66 (B) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence as interpreted, notably, by a recent decision of the Appeals Chamber in this case. The Accused is expected to start his testimony on 11 December 2006.

2. The Prosecution appears to accept that it must allow inspection of documents in the third and fourth categories, but contests that the obligation arises from Rule 66 (B) or that such disclosure must be made before the beginning of the witness's testimony.[1]

Deliberations

3. Rule 66 (B) provides that:

> At the request of the Defence, the Prosecutor shall … permit the Defence to inspect any books, documents, photographs and tangible objects in his custody or control, which are material to the preparation of the defence, or are intended for use by the Prosecutor as evidence at trial or were obtained from or belonged to the accused.

The Appeals Chamber has interpreted this provision in the context of a Defence request to inspect documents concerning, and statements given by, its own witnesses that the Prosecution has obtained from national immigration authorities. The Appeals Chamber defined two categories of immigration documents: (i) those that the Prosecution "intends to use as exhibits", which are automatically subject to inspection; and (ii) those not intended for use as exhibits, but which are otherwise "material to the preparation of the Defence" and, therefore, subject to inspection. The precise scope of the second category was remitted to the Trial Chamber for further consideration in light of the following definition of materiality:

> In accord with the plain meaning of Rule 66 (B) of the Rules, the test for materiality … is the relevance of the documents to the preparation of the defence case. Preparation is a broad concept and does not necessarily require that the material itself counter the Prosecution evidence. Indeed, for the Appellants, the immigration documents are material to the preparation of their defence because these documents may improve their assessment of the potential credibility of their witnesses before making a final selection of whom to call in their defence. The Appeals Chamber cannot exclude that this is an appropriate basis for authorizing the inspection of documents if the requisite showing is made by the defence. There are few tasks more relevant to the preparation of the defence case than selecting witnesses. The Trial Chamber is the appropriate authority to make this case-specific assessment in the first instance under the appropriate standard.
> The Appeals Chamber observes that this plain reading of Rule 66 (B) of the Rules does not create a broad affirmative obligation on the Prosecution to disclose any and all documents which may be relevant to its cross-examination, as suggested by the Trial Chamber. Rule 66 (B) is only triggered by a sufficiently specific request by the defence, which in turn engages reciprocal disclosure obligations on the defence's part under Rule 67 (C). In this case, as the Trial Chamber recognized, the defence sought a precise category of documents, namely immigration-related material, admittedly in the possession of the Prosecution.[2]

The Appeals Chamber also recognized the Trial Chamber's discretion to determine the timing of inspection:

> Finally, the Appeals Chamber notes that the Impugned Decision in fact provided for the disclosure of at least some of the requested material, the documents intended as exhibits, at the time of cross-examination. This framework may be appropriate in some circumstances for certain material. The Appeals Chamber affirms that the Trial Chamber is best placed to determine both the modalities for disclosure and also what time is sufficient for an accused to prepare his defence based on the timing of such disclosure. It is evident, however, that disclosure at the time of cross-examination is insufficient to the extent, as in this case, that the requested materials are intended to assist the defence select its witnesses.[3]

4. In respect of the first category of documents defined by the Appeals Chamber, the Prosecution argues that it does not form any intention as to which documents to use as exhibits until after the examination-in-chief of a Defence witness. Hence, no documents can be subject to advance inspection on that basis. The Trial Chamber accepts that it may be difficult or impossible to know whether a document will be tendered as an exhibit until the witness's testimony-in-chief has been heard. As the Chamber is not in a position to meaningfully review which documents the Prosecution intends to use as exhibits, it accepts the Prosecution submission that none of the documents sought are responsive to that category.

5. The Chamber must also consider whether any of the documents requested are otherwise "material to the preparation of the defence". The Kabiligi request to inspect "documents or materials which relate to the alibi" of the Accused, or concerning his movements throughout Rwanda during the period relevant to the Indictment, potentially embraces a wide range of documents, of varying degrees of significance to the choice of whether the Accused will testify. The indefinite nature of the category risks creating just the "broad affirmative obligation" rejected by the Appeals Chamber in its decision. The request for personal agendas, diaries, travel documents and correspondence is, in the Chamber's view, also unduly broad and vague.

6. The request to inspect statements or documents given by the Accused himself to immigration authorities is a well-defined category of particular importance to the preparation of the Defence. The significance of a witness's own statements is reflected, in particular, in Rule 66 (A) (ii), which requires the Prosecution to disclose all prior statements of its own witnesses. The Defence has a similar obligation in respect of its witnesses.[4] In the present situation, the Chamber considers the Accused's prior statements to be material to the preparation of the Defence. Documents seized from the Accused by ICTR investigators may also be especially important and is a defined category of information. These documents are, accordingly, also subject to inspection under Rule 66 (B) as being material to the preparation of the Defence.

7. In order for the Defence to have a reasonable opportunity to review the documents and exercise its choice as to whether the Accused will testify, the inspection must be permitted immediately.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

ORDERS the Prosecution to permit the Defence to immediately inspect any statements or documents given by the Accused to immigration authorities, or documents seized from the Accused by ICTR investigators;

DENIES the motion in all other respects.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the "Motion Requesting the Trial Chamber to Admit a Statement by Deceased Witness LG-1/U-03", etc., filed jointly by the Nsengiyumva and Bagosora Defence on 16 October 2006;

CONSIDERING the Prosecution Response, filed on 26 October 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

Introduction

1. The Nsengiyumva and Bagosora Defence jointly request that the Chamber admit into evidence, pursuant to Rule 92 bis of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence, a statement given to the Nsengiyumva Defence team by Witness LG-1/U-03 shortly prior to his death.[1] The witness held an important post related to communications in the Rwandan Armed Forces in 1994. He came to the Tribunal in the summer of 2005 but was unable to appear due to scheduling difficulties. Before the witness could return to give his testimony, he became seriously ill. Two members of the Nsengiyumva Defence met with the witness several times in January 2006, resulting in a four-page statement signed by the witness. According to documents submitted by the Defence, the witness passed away on 10 February 2006.

2. The Prosecution opposes the admission of the statement on the basis that it goes to proof of the acts and conduct of the Accused, and that it lacks sufficient indicia of reliability to comply with the requirements of 92 bis (C).[2]

Deliberations

3. Rule 89 (C) provides that "[a] Chamber may admit any relevant evidence which it deems to have probative value". This discretion is guided in respect of testimonial evidence by Rule 90 (A), which requires that "[w]itnesses shall, in principle, be heard directly by the Chambers". Rule 92 bis does, however, allow a statement of a witness to be admitted into evidence in lieu of oral testimony provided that it concerns "proof of a matter other than the acts and conduct of the accused as charged in the indictment". In addition to this requirement, the Chamber must exercise its discretion, in accordance with the criteria set out in Rule 92 bis (A) (i) and (ii), to determine whether the statement should be admitted.[3] Factors which favour admission include the fact that oral evidence has been heard on similar facts; provides an historical, political or military background; or relates to the character of the accused. Factors weighing against admission include whether there is an overriding public interest to hear the evidence orally; its nature and source render it unreliable, or its prejudicial effect outweighs its probative value. The general requirements of relevance and probative value, applicable to all types of evidence under Rule 89 (C), must also be satisfied.[4] When a statement has been given by a person who is deceased, Rule 92 bis (C) permits the admission of the statement provided that the Chamber finds from the circumstances in which the statement was made and recorded that there are satisfactory indicia of its reliability.[5]

(i) Indicia of reliability

4. The Prosecution asserts that the statement lacks satisfactory indicia of reliability, noting that the statement was taken in the absence of any independent and impartial person. Furthermore, the witness did not make any separate declaration that the contents of the statement are true and correct.

5. Based on the documents submitted by the Defence, the Chamber accepts that the witness is deceased and that, accordingly, Rule 92 bis (C) applies to the present situation.[6] The statement does, in the Chamber's view, possess sufficient indicia of reliability to be admissible. The witness's statement was transcribed into French by the Legal Assistant of the Nsengiyumva Defence team and read back to the witness. In the first paragraph, the witness indicates that he "freely declares as follows", and the statement is signed at the end by the witness, and witnessed by Co-Counsel for Nsengiyumva and the Legal Assistant. Co-Counsel has also signed an affidavit attesting that although the witness was in pain, he was lucid throughout the interview and gave his statement freely and willingly, and in Co-Counsel's opinion, was clearly aware of what he was doing. Moreover, the information contained in the statement is consistent with the witness's previous declarations and his will-say statement.[7]

6. While it would have been preferable for the statement to have been witnessed and interpreted by persons other than those forming part of the Defence team for the Accused, the Chamber is satisfied, in light of the circumstances described above, that the statement possesses satisfactory indicia of reliability under Rule 92 bis (C).

(ii) Acts and conduct of the accused

7. The witness's statement can be divided into several sections. The first portion is an account of the background of the witness, and a general description of the organization and operation of his workplace, including an account of how messages were received from and sent to different Army units. This information describes the military background in April 1994, which is expressly mentioned as appropriate for admission under Rule 92 bis (A) (i) (b), and does not relate to the acts and conduct of the Accused.[8] Furthermore, the testimony generally repeats testimony heard previously in the case, a factor which favours admission under Rule 92 bis (A) (i) (a).[9] This evidence is also relevant and probative, as required for admission under Rule 89 (C). Accordingly, the Chamber considers paragraphs 1 to 19 of the statement to be admissible.

8. The character of the Accused Nsengiyumva is also described in the statement. Rule 92 bis (A) (i) (e) specifically mentions that this type of information is appropriate for admission. The Prosecution argues that the discussion of the Accused's character lacks probative value as the declarant does not describe the basis for his knowledge of the Accused. Any such deficiencies may, in the Chamber's view, be appropriately evaluated in determining the weight to be given to the statement, and do not preclude admission. Accordingly, the Chamber admits paragraphs 24 and 25 of the witness's statement into evidence.

[9] Bagosora et al., Decision on Prosecutor's Motion for the Admission of Written Witness Statements Under 92 bis (TC), 9 March 2004, para. 6.

9. Paragraphs 20 to 23 of the statement contain assertions by the witness that he did not see certain specific messages that are alleged by other witnesses to have been transmitted by the Accused in April 1994. These aspects of the witness's statement contradict testimony of Prosecution witnesses about the acts and conduct of the Accused Nsengiyumva, Bagosora and Kabiligi during this critical time-period. Statements tending to contradict evidence that the Accused carried out certain acts have been held to relate to "proof of the acts and conduct of the accused" for the purposes of 92 bis (A).[10] The Chamber therefore considers that the information provided by the witness in paragraphs 20 to 23 concerns the acts and conduct of the accused, and is, therefore, inadmissible.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DECLARES paragraphs 1 to 19 and 24 to 25 of the witness's statement be admitted as evidence;

REQUESTS the Registry to ensure that the admitted documents are marked and assigned exhibit numbers;

DENIES the Defence motion in all other respects.

BEING SEIZED OF the "Requête … visant la visite du Camp de Butotori", filed by the Bagosora Defence on 18 July 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

Introduction

1. The Bagosora Defence requests that the Chamber conduct a site visit to the Butotori training area in Gisenyi, in order to test the credibility of Prosecution and Defence witnesses and, in particular, the possibility that the Accused Bagosora participated in a meeting attended by at least one hundred persons. The Defence submits that the site visit would take no longer than half a day.

Deliberations

2. Rule 4 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence provides that

> "[a] Chamber or a Judge may exercise their functions away from the Seat of the Tribunal, if so authorized by the President in the interests of justice."

A site visit is justified where it would be "instrumental in the discovery of the truth and determination of the matter before the Chamber".[1]

3. The Chamber considers the likely value of a site visit to the Butotori training area to be marginal to the assessment of the evidence. The testimony of the witnesses concerned was extensive, and the Chamber has ample material on which to assess their credibility and make findings of fact. Those findings are not likely to be affected by any observations that the Chamber could make during a site visit, particularly in light of the Defence submission that changes may have been made to the location since 1994.[2]

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the "Request for Certification of a Decision of 17 October 2006", filed by the Bagosora Defence on 25 October 2006;

CONSIDERING the Prosecutor's Response, filed on 26 October 2006; and the Bagosora Reply, filed on 30 October 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the request.

Introduction

1. The Bagosora Defence requests leave to appeal the Chamber's Decision of 17 October 2006, declining to issue an order requiring the Prosecution to disclose evidence or information arising from any investigations into the assassination of President Habyarimana on 6 April, and declining to issue an order requiring the Prosecution to undertake such investigations.[1] The Defence argues that the Chamber abused its discretion by failing to recognize the relevance of information concerning the identity of those responsible for assassinating President Habyarimana on 6 April 1994.[2]

Deliberations

2. Certification may be granted under Rule 73 (B) when a decision

> "involves an issue that would significantly affect the fair and expeditious conduct of proceedings or the outcome of the trial, and for which, in the opinion of the Trial Chamber, an immediate resolution by the Appeals Chamber may materially advance the proceedings".

3. Whether an interlocutory appeal would materially advance the proceedings includes consideration of whether:

> a showing has been made that the appeal could succeed. That threshold would be met, for example, by showing some basis to believe that the Chamber committed an error as to the applicable law; that it made a patently incorrect conclusion of fact; or that it was so unfair or unreasonable as to constitute an abuse of the Trial Chamber's discretion.[3]

In respect of determinations of relevance, the Appeals Chamber has underlined that:

> It is first and foremost the responsibility of the Trial Chambers, as triers of fact, to determine which evidence to admit during the course of the trial; it is not for the Appeals Chamber to assume this responsibility. As the Appeals Chamber has previously underscored, certification of an appeal has to be the absolute exception when deciding on the admissibility of evidence.[4]

4. A proper evaluation of the significance of the information requested involves a detailed understanding of the totality of evidence heard by the Chamber and, in particular, the scope of the Prosecution case against the Accused. Sufficient evidence concerning the shooting down of the Presidential airplane has been entered into evidence to provide the Chamber with the requisite context for events that followed. The Chamber has repeatedly stressed that there is no need for detailed evidence on matters of collateral and indirect relevance to the Indictments against the Accused. Certification of an interlocutory appeal on these matters would not materially advance the proceedings; on the contrary, it would draw the Appeals Chamber into an unwarranted and premature review of the evidence, which is best reserved for the appeal from the final judgement.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the request.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the "Request for Certification of the 'Decision on Kabiligi Motion for Inspection of Documents Under Rule 66 (B)' of 6 December 2006", filed by the Kabiligi Defence on 11 December 2006;

CONSIDERING the oral submissions of the parties on 11 December 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the request.

Introduction

1. The Kabiligi Defence requests leave to file an interlocutory appeal from a decision of this Chamber that granted in part, and denied in part, a Kabiligi request to inspect Prosecution documents under Rule 66 (B) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence.[1] The Chamber granted the Defence request to inspect statements made by the Accused and other documents related to immigration applications to national authorities; and all documents seized from the Accused by ICTR investigators. However, the Chamber denied a request to inspect "documents or materials which relate to the alibi of the accused Kabiligi, and alleged travel of General Kabiligi around Rwanda during the period relevant to the indictment", and of "all personal agendas, diaries, passports, photographs, logs and travel documents, and correspondence to and from General Kabiligi written during the period relevant to the Indictment, in the period up until his arrest, and since his detention in the UNDF".

Deliberations

2. Certification may be granted under Rule 73 (B) of the Rules when a decision

> "involves an issue that would significantly affect the fair and expeditious conduct of proceedings or the outcome of the trial, and for which, in the opinion of the Trial Chamber, an immediate resolution by the Appeals Chamber may materially advance the proceedings".

3. The choice of an Accused to give, or to decline to give, testimony at his or her own trial is unquestionably very important to the conduct of a trial. The question in the present case, however, is whether the category of documents whose inspection has not been granted "would significantly affect the fair and expeditious conduct of proceedings or the conduct of the trial", and whether resolution of that issue now may materially advance the proceedings. In the Impugned Decision, the Chamber granted two of the requests for inspection on the basis that they were well-defined and of apparent importance to the preparation of the Defence. The other two categories, however, were found to be "unduly broad and vague" and "of varying degrees of significance to the choice of whether the Accused will testify".[2] The Chamber was guided by the Appeals Chamber's statement that

and that such requests must be "sufficiently specific".[3] Once a sufficiently specific category has been defined, the Defence must make the "requisite showing" that the documents are material to the preparation of the defence. The determination of what is "material", as distinct from the generality of "any and all documents which may be relevant" to the cross-examination, is a "case-specific assessment" to be made by the Trial Chamber.[4]

4. Certification of this issue – the impermissible vagueness of the categories – would not, in the Chamber's view, materially advance the proceedings. Whether a category has been defined with sufficient specificity is a "case-specific assessment" which falls within the core of the Trial Chamber's discretion. The first category articulated by the Defence could include any document which makes any reference to the whereabouts of the Accused in 1994, as "relat[ing] to the alibi of the accused and alleged travel of General Kabiligi". Many such documents, however, would have only tangential significance to the choice of whether the Accused should testify and, hence, would not be material to the preparation of the Defence. The second category is also vague to the extent that it covers some documents which could be material, but many other documents that likely would not be. Leave to appeal the Chamber's decision to deny inspection of these two broad categories on the basis that they are unduly vague and indefinite would not, in the Chamber's view, materially advance the proceedings.[5]

[4] Id., para. 9.
[5] Certification of interlocutory appeals may only be granted on the basis of arguments and propositions which were first raised before the Trial Chamber. Some of the oral arguments presented by the Defence go beyond the specific argumentation concerning the two categories defined by the Defence in its motion, and are based instead on a much broader proposition that "we have a right to know what's coming". T. 11 December 2006 p. 6 (draft). The grounds for the original motion are narrower, based on the materiality of the specific categories defined by the Defence. The Chamber restricts its consideration of whether to grant interlocutory appeal to the argumentation and issues raised in the original motion. Bagosora et al., Decision on Request for Certification Concerning Sufficiency of Defence Witness Summaries (TC), 21 July 2005 paras. 5-6 ("Permitting interlocutory appeals of decisions on the basis of arguments which were not advanced in relation to the original motion would encourage repetitive pleadings and could lead to resolution of issues by the Appeals Chamber without a prior

5. Some documents within the two categories may be significant to the preparation of the Defence, but this does not mean that the categories as a whole, without further specification, raise an issue that would "significantly affect the fair and expeditious conduct of the proceedings". Indeed, nothing prevents the Defence from interposing objections during the cross-examination of the Accused in respect of documents subject to disclosure under Rule 66 (B). On one previous occasion, the Chamber excluded questioning on a document that had not been disclosed in response to a proper request pursuant to Rule 66 (B).[6] Should that situation arise during the cross-examination of the Accused, the Defence can object and, if not satisfied by the Chamber's ruling, may request certification. Certification of those decisions, based on specific documents whose significance can be concretely assessed, may involve an issue that significantly affects the fair conduct of proceedings, and materially advances the proceedings. However, based on the general categories defined in the Impugned Decision, the Defence has not shown that either criterion is satisfied.

6. The potential materiality of the categories as a whole is further weakened by the Prosecution's assertion that at least some of the documents comprehended by the requests have already been disclosed. For example, the Prosecution asserts that all prior statements and photographs of the Accused have been disclosed.[7] Moreover, many of the documents in the second category – such as, diaries, passports, and personal agendas – would already be subject to disclosure to the extent that the Impugned Decision ordered inspection of "documents seized from the Accused". The failure to specifically define categories of documents that have not yet been disclosed, combined with the general nature of the requests, makes it impossible for the Chamber to make a reasoned assessment of the materiality of the categories without having some idea of at least the specific type of documents involved.

7. For these reasons, the Chamber finds that the Defence has not shown either that certification of appeal of the Impugned Decision would materially advance the proceedings, or that it involves an issue that would significantly affect the fair and expeditious conduct of proceedings or the outcome of the trial.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

decision on the merits by the Trial Chamber. Even though a Trial Chamber may at the certification stage revisit the substance of a decision, it does so only within the context of the criteria set out in Rule 73 (B). A certification motion is not an appropriate venue to advance new grounds of argument. A decision to grant certification on the basis of grounds which had not been previously argued could take the responding party by surprise, and circumvent the usual procedure for assessing motions on the merits").

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the "Request for Reconsideration, Motion to Vary the Witness List and Motion to Tender a Witness Statement", etc., and the Strictly Confidential and Ex Parte Annex thereto, filed by the Bagosora Defence on 4 December 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

INTRODUCTION

1. The deadline for the presentation of evidence by the Bagosora Defence was 13 October 2006. On 17 November 2006, the Chamber granted leave to hear the testimony of four Bagosora witnesses after that date, but denied the request to hear seven others.[1] The Bagosora Defence now asks the Chamber to reconsider its decision in respect of one of the witnesses whom it declined to hear, Witness B-06. It also requests permission to present an additional witness, Witness G-10, or, in the alternative, to tender her statement under Rule 92 bis.[2]

Deliberations

(i) Witness B-06

2. The Chamber previously held in respect of Witness B-06 that

> "[t]he reason for his unavailability during the entire course of the Defence case prior to 13 October 2006 is unclear, and the Chamber is not persuaded that his testimony is of sufficient importance to justify his appearance at this stage".[3]

[1] Bagosora et al., Decision on Bagosora Motion to Present Additional Witnesses and Vary Its Witness List (TC), 17 November 2006.
[2] The Chamber previously indicated orally that the present motion would be denied: T. 8 December 2006 p. 2.
[3] Id., para. 13.

The Chamber has again considered the prospective testimony of Witness B-06 and sees no basis to reconsider its previous decision. The fact that Witness B-06, a Tutsi who was not personally acquainted with Bagosora, may have been saved by the Accused in April 1994, is not a matter of such importance to the case as to justify his appearance at this late stage.[4] Although the Chamber appreciates the difficulties faced by the Defence in convincing this particular witness to testify, this reticence over a long period of time cannot dictate the trial schedule.

(ii) Witness G-10

3. Witness G-10 is ostensibly able to contradict the testimony of Prosecution Witness DAS concerning a roadblock where Tutsi civilians were allegedly killed in the presence of the Accused in Kigali in late June 1994. To be precise, Witness G-10 is said to be able to deny that her relative, who is identified by Witness DAS as having been present at the roadblock and speaking publicly to the Interahamwe, could have been present.[5] Witness G-10 was not an eyewitness to the event, but the Defence suggests that her testimony would generally undermine the credibility of Witness DAS's description of the event.

4. The Defence first met Witness G-10 in November 2006, after an effort to secure similar testimony from another relative. The motion indicates that the Defence has been aware of the need to find members of this family as early as April 2005.[6] No specific showing has been made that Witness G-10 could not have been discovered or contacted before November 2006. As the witness's testimony is not a direct observation of the event or of the Accused, and as the Chamber is not in a position to determine whether the witness could have been contacted earlier, the request for the appearance of the witness beyond the close of the Bagosora Defence case is not justified.

5. Witness G-10's written declaration does not satisfy the formalities prescribed by Rule 92 bis (B). The statement is not witnessed by a person "authorised to witness such a declaration in accordance with the law and procedure of a State", nor by any "Presiding Officer appointed by the Registrar of the Tribunal". In the absence of such formalities, the document is not admissible, unless a showing is made that the declarant has died or is otherwise unavailable, under Rule 92 bis (C). These formal obligations cannot be relieved by the efforts described in the motion to secure a duly authorized witness.[7]

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the request.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the "Motion for Reconsideration of the Trial Chamber's 'Decision on Request for Subpoenas of United Nations Officials' of 6 October 2006", filed by the Ntabakuze Defence on 6 December 2006;

CONSIDERING the Prosecution Response, filed on 7 December 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

Introduction

1. The Ntabakuze Defence asks for reconsideration of the Trial Chamber's decision of 6 December 2006 ("the Subpoena Decision") to the extent that it denied the issuance of a subpoena to Mr. Iqbal Riza, a former official of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations ("DPKO") of the United Nations in New York in 1994.[1] The Defence submits that the United Nations Office of Legal Affairs has ceased its cooperation in procuring a written declaration from Mr. Riza, which is said to have been one of the grounds upon which the Chamber denied the issuance of a subpoena.

Deliberations

[1] Bagosora et al., Decision on Request for Subpoenas of United Nations Officials (TC), 6 October 2006 ("the Subpoena Decision").

2. A Chamber has inherent jurisdiction to reverse or revise a previous decision where new material circumstances have arisen that did not exist at the time of the decision, or when > convinced that the decision was erroneous and has caused prejudice or injustice to a party.[2] The Defence does not contest the legal principles applied in the Subpoena Decision, where the Chamber articulated three requirements for the issuance of a subpoena: "(i) reasonable attempts have been made to obtain the voluntary cooperation of the witness; (ii) the prospective witness has information which can materially assist the applicant in respect of clearly identified issues relevant to the trial; and (iii) the witness's testimony must be necessary and appropriate for the conduct and fairness of the trial."[3]

3. The Chamber expressly relied upon the absence of the first requirement to deny the issuance of a subpoena to Mr. Riza:

> The perspective of the DPKO, as the central repository of UNAMIR documents, may have a distinct value in one respect. The Defence wishes the DPKO witnesses to confirm that they had no basis to believe that there was a conspiracy or plan to commit genocide leading up to April 1994. To a large extent, however, the documents already disclosed by the DPKO to the Defence, many of which have been entered as exhibits without any dispute as to authenticity, provide a more direct indication as to the information available to the DPKO over time. To the extent that any further confirmation is required from witnesses, the Office of Legal Affairs has offered to continue to cooperate with the Ntabakuze Defence in the preparation of a statement in lieu of oral testimony.[4] In light of this ongoing cooperation, and the nature of the information sought, the Chamber does not consider that the first condition for the issuance of a subpoena – the exhaustion of reasonable attempts to obtain the voluntary cooperation of the witness – is satisfied. Accordingly, there is no need to further consider whether the information is sufficiently important to satisfy the second and third conditions for a subpoena.
> Under these circumstances, the Chamber shall not order that a subpoena be issued to either Mr. Annan or Mr. Riza.[5]

Based on the Defence submissions, it now appears that the first requirement for the issuance of a subpoena is satisfied.

4. The Chamber based its reasoning not only on the failure to exhaust efforts to obtain voluntary cooperation, but also on the "nature of the information sought". Indeed, the Subpoena Decision discusses at length whether the information sought is sufficiently important to justify a subpoena:

> The directness of a witness's observation of events is an important criterion in determining whether a subpoena should be issued. Every witness to whom a subpoena has been issued in the present case was an eyewitness to the conduct of the Accused or their subordinates. Although the Defence attempts to characterize Mr. Annan and Mr. Riza as "eye-witnesses or participants in the events", their prospective testimony concerns information sent to them by UNAMIR officials in Rwanda, and possibly other sources. They are said to be "the only persons who can explain the circumstances described" in the various memos, faxes and code cables exchanged between UNAMIR and the DPKO in New York.
> The Chamber disagrees that Mr. Annan and Mr. Riza are eyewitnesses. The Defence has not shown that either of them can draw on any personal observation of events for their testimony. Although Mr. Riza did apparently visit Rwanda in May or June 1994, the Defence does not suggest that it wishes to question him about this visit.[6] By contrast, this Chamber has heard from numerous members of UNAMIR who were on the ground in Rwanda: Jacques Roger Booh-Booh, General Dallaire, Major Beardsley, Lt. Colonel Frank Claeys, Colonel Joseph Dewez, Major Donald MacNeil, Colonel Aouilli Tchemi Tchambi, Major Petrus Maggen, Major Robert Van Putten, and Lieutenant Colonel Babacar El Hadj Faye. Indeed, the code cables to United Nations Headquarters in New York City were based on the direct eyewitness observation of these individuals and other UNAMIR officials posted in Rwanda at the time. The impressions of the recipients of those reports in United Nations Headquarters would be of limited weight in comparison to this direct and primary testimony, and does not constitute information which is necessary and appropriate for the conduct and fairness of the trial.[7]

5. The Defence motion for reconsideration raises no grounds to suggest that new material circumstances have arisen in respect of these observations, or that the Chamber's conclusion is erroneous. Mr. Riza was not an eyewitness of events in Rwanda; his knowledge is limited to the receipt of communications by United Nations Headquarters from UNAMIR personnel, many of whom have personally testified before the Chamber; and the Defence has had an extensive opportunity to review, and seek admission of, United Nations documents in order to directly demonstrate the content of those communications. In the absence of any reason to believe that its previous conclusions are incorrect or were based on circumstances which have now changed, the Chamber reaffirms that the third requirement for the issuance of a subpoena – that the information sought be necessary and appropriate for the conduct and fairness of the trial – is not met.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the motion.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA

SITTING as Trial Chamber I, composed of Judge Erik Møse, presiding, Judge Jai Ram Reddy, and Judge Sergei Alekseevich Egorov;

BEING SEIZED OF the "Motion to Request the Testimony of Witnesses SX-1, VIP-1, and TT-02 to be Heard Via Video Conference", etc., filed by the Kabiligi Defence on 11 December 2006;

CONSIDERING the oral submissions of the parties on 12 December 2006;

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

Introduction

1. The Kabiligi Defence requests that three of its witnesses, who are former French military officers, be permitted to testify by video-link on the basis that the French Ministry of Defence refuses to authorize their travel to Arusha because of security concerns. The French authorities have also requested that the testimony be heard according to the same special conditions as were applied to Witness DM-26, namely: (i) that the testimony be heard in closed session; (ii) non-disclosure of the witness's identity; (iii) limiting the scope of examination to mattets already covered during a previous interview of the witness, and the same limitation on cross-examination; (iv) the presence of a representative of the Government of France in the proceedings who is authorized to assert a national security privilege; and (v) non-disclosure of the witness's testimony to any party to another proceeding[1].

2. The requests are opposed by the Prosecution, which asserts that it has not yet received the statements taken during forma1 interviews of the witnesses and that, accordingly, it is not in a position to know whether video-testimony is justified, and whether it is able to agree to the modalities proposed for the witnesses' testimony[2]. The D efence responds that it has not yet received the statements in question from the French judicial authorities but that, in any event, previous interviews with two of the three witnesses have already been disclosed to the Prosecution, and that the questions during the formal interviews were the same as those asked earlier[3]. Further, the Defence indicates that statements from the formal interviews are expected shortly, and will be disclosed to the Prosecution immediately.

DELIBERATIONS

3. Testimony by video-conference may be ordered on the basis that it is "in the interests of justice", pursuant to Rule 54 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence, or as a witness protection measure under Rule 75, where it is "necessary to safeguard the witness's security"[4]. Whether video-conference testimony is in the "interests of justice" under Rule 54 will depend on the importance of the testimony, the witness's inability or unwillingness to attend, and whether a good reason has been adduced for that inability or unwillingness[5]. Although it is not absolutely necessary that the reason for the refusal to attend be objectively justified, a showing must at least be made that the witness has a credible basis for the refusal, and that those grounds are genuinely held[6].

4. According to the Defence, the three witnesses are unable to come to Arusha because authorization to do so has been refused by their govemment. The Prosecution asserts that France has an obligation to cooperate with the Tribunal and that, accordingly, the Chamber ought to inquire more closely into the security concerns and determine whether they are wellfounded. The Chamber has no reason to doubt the good faith basis for the views of the Government of France, as described by the Defence in its motion. Accordingly, the witnesses have a credible basis to assert that they are unable to testify in Arusha because of the position of their government. Allowing their testimony, which appears to concem matters on which no other Defence witnesses have been called, is in the interests of justice.

5. Despite the absence of statements from the formal interviews, a sufficient basis has been established by the Defence that these three witnesses are in generally the same situation as Witness DM-26. The modalities were previously requested in order to safeguard the security of the witnesses and to facilitate non-disclosure of matters that may touch upon national security concerns. The Defence has made a sufficient showing, based on the existing statements and the role and identity of the witnesses, that the modalities requested may facilitate these objectives to the same degree as was the case for Witness DM-26. For the reasons more fully expressed in that decision, the Chamber accepts that those modalities are compatible with the Rules and the statute[7]. These measures must, however, be understood as justified only by the exceptional circumstance that the Governrnent of France has invoked national security, and appears to have a credible basis for doing so. Furthemore, the final determination as to the proper scope of questioning, in accordance with the modalities prescribed by this decision, must rest with the chamber[8].

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

AUTHORIZES the taking of the testimony of Witnesses SX-1, VIP-1, and TT-02 by videoconference;

INSTRUSTS the Registry, in consultation with the parties, to make al1 necessary arrangements, in respect of the testimony of Witnesses SX-1, VIP-I, and TT-02 by videoconference and to videotape the testimony for possible future reference by the Chamber;

DECLARES that (i) the testimony be heard in closed session; (ii) the witness's identity will not be disclosed; (iii) examination and cross-examination shall be limited to matters already covered during previous interviews of the witness; (iv) a representative of the Government of France may be present during proceedings and may request that the witness be relieved from answering questions on the grounds of national security; and (v) the witness's testimony shall not be subject to disclosure to any party in another proceeding.

1. La Défense de Kabiligi prie la Chambre de l'autoriser à s'entretenir avec le témoin LE-1 qui a déposé les 19, 20 et 21 octobre 2005 en tant que témoin à décharge, même si la Chambre avait recommandé à celui-ci de « ne discuter de [sa] déposition avec qui que ce soit »[1].

2. Comme suite à la nomination du nouveau conseil principal, la Défense de Kabiligi a été autorisée par la Chambre à présenter ses moyens après les autres équipes de la Défense[2]. Reconnaissant que les témoins qui déposent pour le compte des autres accusés pourraient par la suite le faire en faveur de l'accusé Kabiligi, la Chambre a souvent autorisé par le passé la Défense de Kabiligi à s'entretenir avec ces témoins, lorsqu'elle était saisie à cet effet[3]. SAISI de la requête de la Défense intitulée « Kabiligi Application for Certification for Appeal Pursuant to Rule 73 (B) of Part of the Trial Chamber's "Decision on Exclusion of Testimony Outside the Scope of the Indictment" filed 27 september 2005 », déposée le 4 octobre 2005 (la « Requête »),

STATUE sur la Requête

Introduction

1. La Défense de Kabiligi demande l'autorisation d'interjeter appel de la Décision de la Chambre relative à l'inadmissibilité de dépositions qui sortent du cadre de l'acte d'accusation, déposée le 27 septembre 2005[1]. Dans cette décision, la Chambre jugeait inadmissibles certaines parties des dépositions de deux témoins au motif qu'elles n'avaient aucun rapport avec l'acte d'accusation, tout en rejetant toutes les autres demandes dans ce sens concernant les dépositions de huit témoins au total[2].

Délibération

2. En vertu de l'article 73 (B) du Règlement, l'appel d'une décision peut être certifié lorsque celle-ci

> « touche une question susceptible de compromettre sensiblement l'équité et la rapidité du procès, ou son issue, et que son règlement immédiat par la Chambre d'appel pourrait concrètement faire progresser la procédure ».

3. La première condition est indéniablement remplie. Il est question dans la Décision de plus d'une douzaine de faits, dont certains sont présentés comme engageant gravement la responsabilité de l'accusé. Les accusations portées contre l'accusé, et la nécessité pour la Défense de les réfuter, seraient grandement réduites si ces éléments de preuve devaient être exclus au stade actuel de la procédure.

4. La seconde condition à laquelle est subordonnée l'autorisation d'interjeter appel est que la Chambre de première instance doit être convaincue que le « règlement immédiat [de la question] par la Chambre d'appel pourrait concrètement faire progresser la procédure ». La question examinée dans la Décision est de savoir si plusieurs éléments des dépositions devraient être déclarés inadmissibles au motif qu'ils n'ont aucun rapport avec l'acte d'accusation. Pour y répondre, il faut répondre à une autre question, celle de savoir si les allégations générales portées dans l'acte d'accusation ont été précisées par une communication ultérieure, en particulier dans le Mémoire préalable au procès. La Décision expose très clairement le lien qui existe entre ces deux questions.

> L'article 89 (C) du Règlement dispose que « [la] Chambre peut recevoir tout élément de preuve pertinent dont elle estime qu'il a valeur probante ». Pour être admissible, l'«élément de preuve doit se rattacher, d'une manière ou d'une autre, a un élément constitutif d'un crime imputé a l'accusé » [traduction]. Dans la requête, la Défense se plaint du fait que les éléments de preuve n'ont aucun rapport avec les faits mentionnés dans l'acte d'accusation et affirme que les quelques paragraphes de l'acte d'accusation auxquels ils pourraient se rapporter sont trop vagues pour être pris en considération. Dans des arrêts récents, la Chambre d'appel a traité en profondeur de la précision avec laquelle un acte d'accusation doit être libellé et de l'importance à accorder aux autres formes de communication auxquelles peut recourir le Procureur. Même si, dans ces affaires, la question examinée était de savoir s'il fallait annuler une condamnation parce que le fait reproché n'était pas décrit avec suffisamment de précision dans l'accusation, l'analyse peut aussi s'appliquer en l'espèce, où la question est de savoir si le lien entre certains chefs d'accusation et les éléments de preuve présentés est suffisant pour que ceux-ci soient admissibles[3].

[2] La déposition du témoin XAI concernant le meurtre de trois civils, qui aurait été commis sur les ordres de l'accusé, et la déposition du témoin DCH concernant les meurtres commis à l'école de Mburabuturo, et qui l'auraient été en présence de l'accusé, ont été jugées inadmissibles.
[3] Décision, par. 2 (références omises).

> « les questions portées en appel sont manifestement du ressort de la Chambre de première instance, laquelle, en tant que juge des faits, décide souverainement [...] »[4] [traduction].

De telles décisions ne sont certes pas à l'abri d'un appel interlocutoire, mais la Chambre d'appel estime que la certification doit être « l'exception absolue »[5]. Le requérant doit faire valoir, à l'appui de la demande de certification, un motif autre qu'une erreur que la Chambre avait commise dans l'appréciation d'un fait à propos duquel elle a exercé son pouvoir discrétionnaire[6].

6. La Défense admet que les faits essentiels allégués dans un acte d'accusation peuvent être complétés par une communication supplémentaire, mais elle soutient que la Chambre de première instance

> « a commis une erreur dans l'exercice du pouvoir discrétionnaire d'admettre ces faits essentiels, compte tenu des méthodes et du moment choisis en l'espèce par le Procureur pour faire cette communication afférente aux témoins susmentionnés »[7] [traduction].

La Défense affirme en outre que l'inclusion de l'élément de preuve, tel qu'il a été admis par la Chambre, « équivaut a une transformation radicale de l'acte d'accusation modifié et de la thèse du Procureur »[8] [traduction]. Or, la Chambre d'appel, de son côté, considère que pareille « transformation radicale » est inadmissible[9].

7. Les arguments ainsi cumulés par la Défense pour soutenir que la Décision est entachée d'une erreur de droit ne sont pas convaincants. La Défense n'a pas établi qu'une norme juridique erronée avait été appliquée, voire que la Chambre avait commis une erreur de fait dans l'application de cette norme juridique. En gros, la Défense marque son désaccord sur la manière, qu'elle estime erronée, dont la Chambre a exercé son pouvoir d'appréciation. C'est justement le genre de conclusion factuelle que la Chambre d'appel a jugé non indiqué pour une certification. Aucun élément de la présente demande en certification d'appel n'en fait une « exception absolue » au sens où l'entend la Chambre d'appel.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

REJETTE la requête.

Le calendrier des audiences, qui a souvent une incidence sur les droits reconnus à l'accusé par les articles 19 et 20 du Statut, a, lui aussi, été présenté comme étant une question relevant du pouvoir d'appréciation d'une Chambre de première instance, sous réserve d'une infirmation consécutive à un appel interlocutoire « dans un nombre de cas limité, par exemple lorsque la Chambre de première instance n'a pas exercé ce pouvoir d'appréciation ou n'a pas tenu compte d'un élément essentiel »[traduction]. LE TRIBUNAL PÉNAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA (le « Tribunal »),

SIÉGEANT en la Chambre de première instance I, composée des juges Erik Møse, Président de Chambre, Jai Ram Reddy et Sergei Alekseevich Egorov (la « Chambre »), SAISI de la Requête en extrême urgence de la Défense de Théoneste Bagosora sollicitant une ordonnance de transfert d'un témoin détenu conformément à l'article 90 bis du Règlement de procédure et de preuve, déposée le 15 février 2006 (la « requête »), STATUE comme suit sur la requête.

1. La Défense de Bagosora demande que soit ordonné le transfert provisoire de l'un de ses témoins, Jean Kambanda, au centre de détention du Tribunal à Arusha, aux fins de sa déposition devant la Chambre. M. Kambanda purge en République du Mali la peine d'emprisonnement à vie qui lui a été infligée par le Tribunal[1]. La Défense de Bagosora souhaite citer le témoin à partir du 13 mars 2006 et avant la fin de la présente session du procès, fixée au 7 avril 2006. Dans une lettre adressée au conseil principal, M. Kambanda a marqué sa volonté de témoigner pour Bagosora.

2. L'article 90 bis (B) pose deux conditions à la délivrance de l'ordonnance sollicitée. Il appartient à la Chambre de vérifier, premièrement, que

et, deuxièmement, que

En outre, l'article 4.3 de l'accord conclu entre l'organisation des Nations Unies et la République du Mali prévoit expressément le transfert provisoire d'un détenu aux fins de sa comparution en qualité de témoin devant le Tribunal, pourvu que sa présence ne soit pas nécessaire dans une procédure pénale au Mali[2].

3. La Chambre a été informée par le Greffe que la présence de M. Kambanda n'était pas requise dans le cadre d'une procédure pénale au Mali pendant la période de son transfert envisagé à Arusha. La première condition est dès lors remplie. Comme M. Kambanda purge une peine d'emprisonnement à vie, la deuxième condition est sans objet. Vu la volonté de comparaître exprimée par M. Kambanda, l'ordonnance sollicitée est justifiée.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE,

ORDONNE, sous réserve de l'accord du Gouvernement malien et conformément à l'article 90 bis du Règlement, que Jean Kambanda soit temporairement transféré au centre de détention du Tribunal à Arusha le 10 mars 2006 ou vers cette date, et qu'il soit remis aux autorités maliennes au plus tard le 20 avril 2006 ;

PRIE le Gouvernement malien de faciliter le transfert du témoin en coopération avec le Greffier du Tribunal et le Gouvernement tanzanien ;

CHARGE le Greffier du Tribunal de :
transmettre la présente ordonnance aux Gouvernements malien et tanzanien ;
s'assurer du bon déroulement du transfert, y compris du suivi de la détention du témoin au centre de détention du Tribunal ;
s'informer de toutes modifications pouvant intervenir dans les modalités de la détention telles que prévues par l'État requis et pouvant affecter les dates de la détention temporaire, et d'en faire part à la Chambre dans les plus brefs délais.

Arusha, le 27 février 2006.

LE TRIBUNAL PENAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA (le « Tribunal »),

SIÉGEANT en la Chambre de première instance I, composée des juges Erik Møse, Président de Chambre, Jai Ram Reddy et Sergei Alekseevich Egorov (la « Chambre »),

SAISI d'une requête intitulée « Urgent Motion Requesting an Order Directed at the Kingdom of Belgium… » que la Défense de Nsengiyumva a déposée le 7 avril 2006,

VU les observations du Greffier intitulées « The Registrar's Submissions Regarding a Matter of Cooperation with the Kingdom of Belgium », déposées le 10 avril 2006,

STATUE sur ladite requête.

1. La Défense de Nsengiyumva prie la Chambre de demander au Royaume de Belgique, en vertu de l'article 28 du Statut du Tribunal, de faciliter la tenue d'entretiens qu'elle souhaite avoir avec quatre officiers de la MINUAR qui étaient en poste dans la préfecture de Gisenyi en 1994, à savoir le commandant Marc Biot, le capitaine Luc Geysels, le major Jacques De Koninck et l'adjudant Marc Beyens. D'après la Défense, ces quatre personnes possèdent des informations concernant le centre de formation de Butotori. En particulier, elles savent s'il avait été vraiment utilisé pour former des Interahamwe comme l'ont allégué des témoins à charge. La Défense de Nsengiyumva sollicite aussi l'autorisation de s'entretenir avec un certain Alphonse Higaniro qui, selon ses dires, est détenu par les autorités belges et serait en mesure de contredire la déposition du témoin XBH selon laquelle l'accusé avait eu une entrevue avec le colonel Bagosora et d'autres personnes à Butare avant avril 1994 dans le but de planifier le génocide des Tutsis[1].

2. L'article 28 du Statut fait obligation aux Etats de

Toute partie qui demande à une Chambre de rendre une décision en vertu de l'article 28 du Statut doit indiquer dans sa requête la nature des informations recherchées, leur importance pour le procès et les efforts faits pour les obtenir. Le genre d'assistance demandé doit aussi être défini avec précision[2].

3. La requête indique dûment la nature des informations recherchées et leur importance pour la procédure engagée contre l'accusé. Les quatre officiers de la MINUAR ont probablement été témoins de faits survenus dans la préfecture de Gisenyi qui présentent un intérêt en l'espèce[3]. En ce qui concerne M. Higaniro, la Défense semble avoir des raisons de croire qu'il possède des informations précises qui contrediront la déposition incriminante du témoin à charge XBH. En conséquence, la Chambre est convaincue que les informations recherchées présentent un intérêt en l'espèce.

4. La Défense a établi qu'elle s'était convenablement employée à obtenir ces informations sans avoir recours à l'article 28 du Statut. Le Greffier dit que les autorités belges ne rejettent pas la demande de la Défense sur le fond ; seulement la législation belge n'autorise toute coopération que dans les cas ou une décision judiciaire a été rendue à cet effet[4]. Dans ces circonstances, la Chambre estime que la deuxième condition prévue à l'article 28 est remplie.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

PRIE le Royaume de Belgique de lui apporter toute assistance nécessaire pour que la Défense de Nsengiyumva puisse avoir des entretiens avec le commandant Marc Biot, le capitaine Luc Geysels, le major Jacques De Koninck, l'adjudant Marc Beyens et M. Alphonse Higaniro ;

ORDONNE au Greffe de transmettre la présente décision aux autorités compétentes du Royaume de Belgique.

STATUE À PRÉSENT sur les requêtes.

Introduction

1. Le 27 septembre 2005, la Chambre a rejeté une demande présentée par la Défense de Nsengiyumva la priant d'enjoindre au Procureur de communiquer tous documents ou autres pièces en sa possession concernant la situation de certains témoins à décharge vis-à-vis des services d'immigration[1]. Le Procureur avait auparavant reconnu avoir obtenu des déclarations faites par lesdits témoins auprès des autorités nationales ou intergouvernementales d'immigration et il leur avait posé des questions en se servant de ces déclarations. La Chambre a rejeté l'argument de la Défense selon lequel la communication desdites déclarations était obligatoire en application soit de l'article 66 (B), soit de l'article 68 du Règlement de procédure et de preuve (le « Règlement »). La Défense demande l'autorisation de faire appel de la Décision.

Délibération

2. L'appel interlocutoire d'une décision peut être autorisé en vertu de l'article 73 (B) du Règlement lorsque ladite décision touche une question susceptible de compromettre sensiblement « l'équité et la rapidité du procès, ou son issue », et que «son règlement immédiat [. . .] pourrait concrètement faire progresser la procédure ».

(i) Équité et rapidité du procès

3. La Défense fait valoir que le Procureur doit communiquer les déclarations des témoins à décharge se trouvant en sa possession, en application de l'article 66 (B) du Règlement qui prévoit qu'il doit lui permettre d'examiner tous documents « qui sont nécessaires à la défense de l'accusé ». De l'avis de la Chambre, cette disposition exige que le Procureur communique tout document nécessaire à la présentation de ses moyens. La Défense estime, elle, que cette exigence doit s'appliquer à tout document que le Procureur pourrait utiliser pour mettre en doute la crédibilité de témoins à décharge[2]. Elle soutient en outre qu'elle n'a pas été en mesure d'évaluer correctement la crédibilité de ses propres témoins, du fait que le Procureur n'a pas été tenu de communiquer toutes les déclarations antérieures des témoins à décharge bien avant le contre-interrogatoire de ceux-ci[3]. La communication de ces documents aurait permis à la Défense de retirer ces témoins ou tout au moins de les préparer de manière plus adéquate en vue de clarifier et d'expliquer toute contradiction éventuelle avec des déclarations antérieures[4]. Le droit de l'accusé à un procès équitable est compromis lorsque le Procureur est autorisé à poser des questions concernant des déclarations qui ne sont communiquées qu'au début du contre-interrogatoire.

4. Le genre de documents visés par la Décision est bien plus vaste que les déclarations de témoins. La requête initiale demandait en effet la communication non seulement des déclarations des témoins à décharge, mais également

[1] Affaire Bagosora et consorts, Decision on Disclosure of Materials Relating to Immigration Statements of Defence Witnesses (Chambre de première instance), 27 septembre 2005 (la « Décision »).
[2] Affaire Bagosora et consorts, Anatole Nsengiyumva's Reply, etc., 1er juin 2005, par. 27 (« Il a aussi été établi que le Procureur a l'obligation de communiquer tous les éléments qui sont en sa possession et qu'il entend utiliser ou a utilisés au procès. Les éléments devant servir à attaquer ou à tester la crédibilité de témoins doivent aussi être communiqués conformément à la jurisprudence découlant de l'affaire Delalić).
[3] Requête de Kabiligi, par. 22 et 23.
[4] Ibid, par. 15.

« des pièces, documents, éléments de correspondance et écrits que le Procureur aurait en sa possession ou sous son contrôle et qui auraient trait à la situation desdits témoins vis-à-vis des services d'immigration »[5].

La Chambre a rejeté cette demande au motif que

5. La Chambre estime que dans la mesure où la Décision concerne un large éventail de documents susceptibles de relever de l'article 66 (B) du Règlement, « l'équité et la rapidité du procès » pourraient en effet être compromis. La certification de l'appel peut se justifier en particulier lorsqu'une décision vise « de grandes catégories d'éléments de preuve »[6] [traduction]. L'obligation invoquée par la Défense pourrait en principe contraindre le Procureur à communiquer tous les documents qui peuvent être utiles pour le contre-interrogatoire des témoins à décharge. Une telle obligation, si tant est qu'elle existe, accroîtrait de manière considérable l'obligation faite au Procureur de communiquer les documents en sa possession, ce qui en soi pourrait avoir des incidences sur l'équité et la rapidité du procès. La non-communication d'un document que le Procureur entend utiliser lors du contre-interrogatoire pourrait à n'en pas douter, provoquer le report des débats. S'en trouverait de plus changée la façon d'interroger les témoins, notamment la pratique qui consiste à autoriser la partie qui procède au contre-interrogatoire à attendre jusqu'au début de celui-ci pour communiquer les documents en sa possession. Compte tenu de la vaste gamme de documents en jeu et des conséquences sur la conduite du procès, la Chambre est d'avis que la première condition exigée pour autoriser la certification de l'appel est remplie.

(ii) Concrètement faire progresser la procédure

« permettra d'éviter les conséquences graves qui pourraient découler de la poursuite de la présentation des moyens à décharge sur une base juridique erronée »[8] [traduction].

7. Autoriser l'appel au regard de l'article 68 (A) du Règlement ne serait par contre pas de nature à faire progresser concrètement la procédure. La décision applique le principe bien établi qui veut que la Défense démontre qu'il existe à priori des raisons de croire que les pièces demandées sont de nature à disculper l'accusé[9]. Sur la base des conclusions qui lui ont été présentées, la Chambre a estimé qu'en l'espèce, cette démonstration n'avait pas été faite. Dans sa demande de certification, la Défense de

[9] Affaire Bagosora et consorts, Decision on Disclosure of Defence Witness Statements in Possession of the Prosecution Pursuant to Rule 68 (A), (Chambre de première instance), 8 mars 2006, par. 3.

Kabiligi avance un nouvel argument où elle soutient que toute pièce que le Procureur pourrait utiliser en vue de discréditer des témoins à décharge doit être considérée comme susceptible de disculper l'accusé. Ce nouvel argument est irrecevable aux fins de certification, du fait qu'il n'a pas été soulevé dans la requête initiale[10]. En tout état de cause, la Chambre estime que cet argument n'emporte pas la conviction. En effet, l'article 68 (A) du Règlement vise « tous les éléments » qui > « sont de nature à disculper en tout ou en partie l'accusé ou à porter atteinte à la crédibilité [des] éléments de preuve à charge ».

Des éléments qui portent atteinte à la crédibilité des éléments à décharge ne sont pas en eux-mêmes de nature à disculper en tout ou en partie l'accusé.

8. La Chambre considère qu'il ne se justifie pas de suspendre l'instance en attendant que la question soit tranchée en appel[11]. La seule catégorie de documents que sollicite la Défense dans sa requête concerne les déclarations faites antérieurement par les témoins auprès des services nationaux d'immigration. Comme il a été indiqué plus haut, le fait que ces documents n'ont pas été communiqués à l'avance n'a pas eu de conséquences notables. Par ailleurs, la Défense peut toujours demander le rappel d'un témoin si cela se justifie, au vu des circonstances de l'espèce.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

FAIT DROIT à la requête en partie ;

CERTIFIE l'appel interlocutoire, dans la Décision relative à la communication des déclarations faites aux services d'immigration par les témoins à décharge, pour la partie ayant trait à l'obligation faite au Procureur de communiquer des éléments en vertu de l'article 66 (B) du Règlement ;

VU la réponse du Procureur, déposée le 12 décembre 2005, la réplique de la Défense, déposée le 3 janvier 2006, et la duplique du Procureur, déposée le 4 janvier 2006,

STATUANT sur la requête

Introduction

1. La Défense de Ntabakuze demande que 23 jeux de documents soient admis en preuve. Le conseil principal de Ntabakuze a expliqué qu'il s'est personnellement procuré ces documents auprès de l'organisation des Nations unies[1]. Ceux-ci constituent des correspondances officielles des Nations Unies provenant de la mission de maintien de la paix au Rwanda en 1994, la MINUAR. Chaque document est rédigé par l'un des trois hauts fonctionnaires suivants : Jacques-Roger Booh-Booh, ancien Représentant spécial du Secrétaire général au Rwanda ; Kofi Annan, ancien Secrétaire général adjoint chargé des opérations de maintien de la paix, et le général de corps d'armée Roméo Dallaire, ancien commandant de la MINUAR. À une exception près, tous ces documents sont datés de janvier à avril 1994.

Délibérations

2. Aux termes de l'article 89 (C) du Règlement de preuve et de procédure (le Règlement), une Chambre « peut recevoir tout élément de preuve pertinent dont elle estime qu'il a valeur probante ». Lorsqu'elle demande à verser un document en preuve, la partie requérante doit avancer des arguments justifiant que le document est à la fois pertinent et revêt une valeur probante[2].

3. La Défense a avancé des arguments démontrant la pertinence des documents, lesquels reflètent le point de vue de fonctionnaires des Nations Unies sur le contexte politique et militaire au Rwanda en 1994. Ce contexte est pertinent au regard des chefs d'accusation retenus contre l'accusé et il a donné lieu à des dépositions détaillées des témoins cités tant par la Défense que par le Procureur.

4. Il n'est pas nécessaire que des documents soient identifiés par un témoin pour avoir une valeur probante[3]. En revanche, il faut indiquer d'une manière ou d'une autre que le document est bel et bien ce que la partie requérante prétend, et que son contenu est fiable[4]. Le Règlement n'impose aucun critère technique pour établir l'authenticité d'un document, mais un certain nombre de facteurs ont été jugés pertinents :

- dans quelle mesure le contenu du document est corroboré par d'autres éléments de preuve[5].

- si c'est une copie, a-t-elle été enregistrée ou déposée auprès d'une autorité institutionnelle[8].
- est-elle signée, placée sous scellés, cachetée ou certifiée d'une manière ou d'une autre[9].

Au stade de l'admissibilité, la Chambre n'a pas à se prononcer définitivement sur le point de savoir si le document est ce que la partie requérante dit qu'il est, encore moins sur le caractère véridique ou exact de son contenu[10].

6.* En l'espèce, selon l'hypothèse la plus probable il convient de constater la valeur probante de tous les documents qui ont été produits à l'époque des événements survenus au Rwanda en 1994. Lesdits documents proviennent des archives conservées au Siège de l'organisation des Nations Unies, ce qui confirme qu'ils semblent bien être des documents des Nations Unies. En outre, ils ont été produits lors des événements en question, au cours d'échanges de correspondance habituels entre de hauts fonctionnaires de la MINUAR, ou sont en rapport direct avec ces échanges de correspondance. Ces caractéristiques confèrent aux documents une fiabilité suffisante pour les rendre admissibles.

8. L'assertion du Procureur selon laquelle quelques-uns de ces documents ont déjà été admis est fondée[11], et il n'est donc pas nécessaire de les produire une seconde fois.

LE TRIBUNAL PÉNAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA,

SIEGEANT en la Chambre de première instance I composée des juges Erik Møse, Président de Chambre, Jai Ram Reddy et Sergei Alekscevich Egorov, SAISI de la requête intitulée Requête en extrême Urgence de la Défense de Théoneste Bagosora sollicitant une ordonnance de transfert d'un témoin détenu conformément à l'article 90 bis du Règlement de procédure et de preuve (le « Règlement »), déposée le 7 juin 2006, VU la réponse intitulée Ntabakuze Response to Bagosora Request to Transfer Witness Jean Kambanda, and Ancilliary request for Exclusion of Evidence, déposée le 13 juin 2006, et le rectificatif dudit document déposé 14 juin2006.

STATUE sur la requête,

1. La Défense de Bagosora demande que soit ordonné le transfert provisoire de l'un de ses témoins, Jean Kambanda, au centre de détention du Tribunal à Arusha, aux fins de sa déposition devant la Chambre. M. Kambanda purge en République du Mali la peine d'emprisonnement à vie qui lui a été infligée par le Tribunal[1]. La Défense de Bagosora souhaite citer le témoin avant la fin de la présente session du procès, fixée au 14 juillet 2006. M. Kambanda avait auparavant marqué sa volonté de témoigner pour Bagosora[2].

Auparavant, le témoin avait été transféré au centre de détention du Tribunal dans la perspective de sa déposition durant la dernière session du Procès. Toutefois, avant sa déposition, la Chambre a été saisie d'une requête en disjonction d'instances formée par Kabiligi, Nsengiyumva et Ntabakuze, qui se sont élevés contre sa comparution et ont demandé un sursis de la procédure. Le 27 mars 2006, la Chambre a exposé par écrit les motifs du rejet de la disjonction d'instances. Le 3 avril 2006, la Défense a déposé une demande de certification d'appel de ladite décision, et a encore requis le sursis à la comparution de

2. L'article 90 bis (B) du Règlement pose deux conditions à la délivrance de l'ordonnance sollicitée. Il appartient à la Chambre de vérifier, premièrement, que

et deuxièmement, que

En outre, l'article 4 de l'accord conclu entre l'Organisation des Nations Unies et la République du Mali prévoit expressément le transfert provisoire d'un détenu aux fins de sa comparution en qualité de témoin devant le Tribunal, pourvu que sa présence ne soit pas nécessaire dans une procédure pénale au Mali[3].

3. La Chambre a été informée par le Greffe que la présence de M. Kambanda n'était pas requise dans le cadre d'une procédure pénale au Mali pendant la période de son transfert envisagé. La première condition est dès lors remplie. Comme M. Kambanda purge une peine d'emprisonnement à vie, la deuxième condition est sans objet.

4. Les arguments invoqués par la Défense de Ntabakuze ne sont pas pertinents au regard de l'article 90 bis du Règlement qui définit les conditions pour ordonner le transfert du témoin en personne. Au fond, il ressort des arguments avancés par Ntabakuze que la déposition du témoin serait préjudiciable et qu'en conséquence elle doit être exclue comme étant contre lui, ou Kambanda ne doit pas du tout être autorisé à déposer. Ces questions ne relèvent pas vraiment de l'article 90 bis du Règlement et doivent être abordées dans une décision distincte.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

ORDONNE, sous réserve de l'accord du Gouvernement malien et conformément à l'article 90 bis du Règlement, que Jean Kambanda soit temporairement transféré au centre de détention du Tribunal à Arusha le 15 juin 2006 ou vers cette date, et qu'il soit remis aux autorités maliennes au plus tard le 30 juillet 2006 ;

PRIE le Gouvernement malien de faciliter le transfert du témoin en coopération avec le Greffier du Tribunal et le Gouvernement tanzanien :

CHARGE le Greffier de :
(A) transmettre la présente ordonnance aux Gouvernements malien et tanzanien ;
(B) s'assurer du bon déroulement du transfert, y compris du suivi de la détention du témoin au centre de détention du Tribunal ;

Arusha, le 15 juin 2006.

VU les observations du Greffier déposées le 9 juin 2006, et la réponse de la Défense du 15 juin 2006,

STATUE sur la requête.

Introduction

1. Avant le début de la déposition du témoin BRA-1 les 5 et 6 avril 2006, la Chambre a entendu les arguments avancés au sujet de la requête par laquelle la Défense de Nsengiyumva demandait à la Chambre d'autoriser le témoin à résider dans un lieu de son choix, et non dans la maison sécurisée prévue par le Tribunal pour le logement des témoins protégés. La Chambre a jugé qu'un témoin protégé pouvait faire ce choix sans pour autant compromettre son statut. Toutefois, il devait être avisé que de ce fait, le Tribunal ne serait plus en mesure de lui garantir le même niveau de sécurité que dans une maison sécurisée[1]. Le témoin BRA-1 a ensuite été introduit dans la salle d'audience. Le Président lui a exposé la situation telle qu'elle se présentait en droit et en fait. Le témoin a déclaré, de manière non équivoque, qu'il souhaitait demeurer un témoin protégé, même s'il choisissait de résider ailleurs[2]. Le 29 mai 2006, passé le terme de l'ajournement de l'instance, le témoin BRA-1 a terminé sa déposition.

2. La Défense fait valoir qu'à l'issue de la déposition, le Greffe a enfreint ladite ordonnance en exigeant du témoin qu'il signe un formulaire (joint à la requête en annexe 3) par lequel il renonçait à son statut de témoin protégé. Elle prie la Chambre d'enjoindre au Greffe de cesser d'utiliser ce formulaire et d'avoir à verser au témoin la totalité de l'indemnité de subsistance, mais elle n'en précise pas le montant.

3. Le Greffe explique que le témoin BRA-1 a demandé, avant la fin de son séjour à Arusha, que lui soit versé le montant de l'indemnité prévue pour les témoins non protégés, montant qui est beaucoup plus élevé que celui versé aux témoins protégés. Le Greffe lui a dit qu'il ne saurait prétendre à une telle somme s'il ne signait pas un formulaire par lequel il renonçait au statut de témoin protégé, ce que le témoin a refusé de faire. Le 2 juin 2006, le montant auquel il avait droit en tant que témoin protégé lui a été remis mais les dépenses engagées ne lui ont pas été remboursées. Le témoin a refusé ce montant, en faisant valoir que sa requête en versement de la totalité de l'indemnité de subsistance était pendante devant la Chambre. Le 6 juin 2006, un représentant du Greffe s'est rendu à la résidence du témoin pour lui verser cette indemnité au taux fixé pour les témoins protégés, plus le remboursement des dépenses engagées, conformément à la réglementation en vigueur à l'organisation des Nations Unies, mais le témoin ne s'y trouvait pas.

Délibération

4. Les ordonnances prescrivant des mesures de protection des témoins à décharge ne prévoient pas que l'on puisse renoncer volontairement au statut de témoin protégé[3]. Au départ, ce statut avait été invoqué par la Défense de Nsengiyumva lorsqu'elle avait cité le témoin BRA-1 en tant que témoin protégé, conformément au paragraphe 1 de l'ordonnance prescrivant des mesures de protection du témoin ; il a été ensuite réaffirmé par le témoin lui-même avant le début de sa déposition. Seule la Chambre est compétente pour modifier le statut d'un témoin protégé ; or elle a clairement indiqué dans sa décision orale du 5 avril 2006 que le statut du témoin, qui était celui de témoin protégé, demeurait inchangé. Pas plus le Greffe que le témoin ne peuvent modifier ce statut juridique. Le témoin BRA-1 demeure un témoin protégé et doit être traité comme tel. Ceci dit, le risque découlant de la décision du témoin de ne pas habiter la maison sécurisée mise à sa disposition ne peut être imputé au Greffe. Celui-ci a précisé qu'il ne pouvait pas garantir aux témoins résidant hors des maisons sécurisées le même niveau de sécurité et qu'il prévenait tout témoin qui prenait une telle décision du risque accru qu'il encourait[4].

5. Il appartient essentiellement au Greffe d'arrêter le montant exact auquel ont droit les témoins, conformément à la réglementation en vigueur à l'Organisation des Nations Unies. La Défense n'a pas établi que cette réglementation telle qu'elle est actuellement appliquée ne permettait pas un procès équitable. Faute de quoi, la Chambre ne saurait remettre en question l'interprétation faite par le Greffe.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

LE TRIBUNAL PÉNAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA,

SIEGEANT en la Chambre de première instance I, composée des juges Erik Møse, Président de Chambre, Jai Ram Reddy et Sergei Alekseevich Egorov,

SAISI d'une requête de Ntabakuze intitulée Ntabakuze Motion for Certification of the "Decision on Ntabakuze Motion for Exclusion of Evidence" of 29 June 2006, Pursuant to Rule 73 (B), déposée le 6 juillet 2006,

STATUE sur ladite requête.

Introduction

1. Le 29 juin 2006, la Chambre a accueilli en partie une requête de la Défense de Ntabakuze tendant à faire exclure 17 catégories d'éléments de preuve[1]. Elle a exclu en partie trois des catégories d'éléments de preuve contestées et rejeté la requête pour les 14 autres[2]. Ntabakuze sollicite à présent l'autorisation de former un recours interlocutoire contre la décision du 29 juin.

Délibération

2. Aux termes de l'article 73 (B) du Règlement, la Chambre peut accorder l'autorisation de faire appel d'une décision en cours de procès lorsque celle-ci

> « touche une question susceptible de compromettre sensiblement l'équité et la rapidité du procès, ou son issue, et que son règlement immédiat par la Chambre d'appel pourrait concrètement faire progresser la procédure ».

(i) Equité et rapidité du procès

3. La Défense fait valoir que l'équité du procès a été compromise, la Chambre ayant autorisé le Procureur

> « a posteriori à modifier implicitement l'acte d'accusation au fur et à mesure qu'il présentait les moyens à charge »[3] [traduction].

Elle reconnait dans sa demande de certification qu'« il aurait été possible de « purger » l'acte d'accusation de son vice » [traduction] dans une certaine mesure, mais reproche à la Chambre d'avoir indûment permis que cela se fasse pour « l'immense majorité des allégations précises portées contre l'accusé »[4] [traduction]. Comme l'acte d'accusation n'indique pas clairement l'objectif pour lequel le Procureur y a énoncé tel ou tel fait essentiel, l'accusé n'est pas sûr de la nature des accusations portées contre lui. Cette incertitude oblige l'accusé à « s'appuyer plus sur son intuition et des conjectures que sur le raisonnement juridique » [traduction] pour présenter ses moyens de défense et donne lieu à un procès inéquitable et peu circonscrit[5]. Selon la Défense, il s'agit là d'une atteinte à l'équité et à la rapidité du procès.

4. La Chambre dément que sa décision ait autorisé a posteriori la modification de l'acte d'accusation. Toutefois, l'obligation d'informer dûment l'accusé des faits essentiels est une question qui revêt une importance capitale pour l'équité du procès. Vu l'importance des principes sur lesquels sa décision est fondée et l'ampleur des éléments de preuve dont l'exclusion a été sollicitée[6], la

[6] La certification peut se justifier si, en particulier, «de grandes catégories d'éléments de preuve » sont touchées par une décision. Voir l'affaire Bagosora et consorts, Chambre de première instance, Decision on Certification of Interlocutory Appeal Concerning Prosecution Disclosure of Defence Witness Statements, 22 mai 2006, et Certification of Appea1 Concerning Access ta Protected Defence Witness Information, 29 juillet 2005, par. 2.

Chambre est convaincue que cette décision touche une question susceptible de compromettre sensiblement l'équité ou la rapidité du procès.

(ii) Faire concrètement avancer la procédure

5. La Défense soutient qu'à cause de la décision de la Chambre, elle ne connaît clairement ni la thèse du Procureur ni l'objectif qu'il visait par l'exposé de certains faits essentiels. Cette situation lui serait préjudiciable et risque de l'obliger à ne pas circonscrire la présentation des moyens de preuve à décharge. Le préjudice invoqué se manifeste immédiatement, à savoir durant les débats, et ne peut être réparé par la suite. Des requêtes semblables à la sienne qui ont été formées par d'autres équipes de défense sont pendantes devant la Chambre et le règlement immédiat de la question par la Chambre d'appel serait aussi utile à ce propos. Toute déclaration de culpabilité fondée sur les moyens de preuve admis à tort pourrait conduire à un nouveau procès. Or, un appel interlocutoire peut permettre d'éviter ce risque[7]. Au demeurant, la Défense dit avoir de sérieux doutes sur l'exactitude des principes juridiques appliqués par la Chambre et souligne que le règlement de cette question permettrait au procès de se poursuivre suivant les normes[8].

6. Certains des moyens de preuve que la Chambre a refusé d'exclure pourraient suffire pour tirer des conclusions factuelles précises et distinctes susceptibles d'être annulées lorsque le jugement serait attaqué devant la Chambre d'appel si celle-ci estime que c'est à tort qu'ils ont été pris en considération[9]. D'autres pourraient être rapprochés de tel ou tel élément de preuve additionnel dont l'admission n'a pas été contestée pour dégager des conclusions factuelles plus étendues. La Chambre reconnaît que si elle s'appuie en partie sur des éléments de preuve qui seraient jugés inadmissibles par la Chambre d'appel et en partie sur d'autres qui sont admissibles pour prononcer une déclaration de culpabilité, la Chambre d'appel aura considérablement du mal à trouver une réparation appropriée. En outre, compte tenu de la complexité et de l'importance des questions soulevées, l'obtention d'éclaircissements sur les principes applicables à la catégorie de requêtes considérée ferait concrètement avancer la procédure.

(iii) Eventail précis des questions certifiées

7. Compte tenu des questions de fait détaillées qui devaient être tranchées lors de l'appréciation de chacune des 17 catégories d'éléments de preuve en cause, la Chambre refuse de certifier la décision dans son intégralité. Comme l'a déclaré la Chambre d'appel, les questions relatives à l'admissibilité des éléments de preuve relèvent principalement de la compétence du juge des faits et ne doivent pas faire l'objet d'une certification tendant à autoriser un appel interlocutoire[10]. En revanche, les principes juridiques dont la Chambre de première instance s'est inspirée sont des questions qu'il convient de soumettre à l'appréciation de la Chambre d'appel. En conséquence, la Chambre accorde l'autorisation d'interjeter appel des énonciations juridiques figurant au paragraphe 10 de sa décision qui est libellé comme suit :

> La ligne de conduite que la Chambre de première instance adoptera dans les sections suivantes peut être résumée ainsi qu'il suit. Tout fait essentiel qui ne peut raisonnablement être rattaché à Cette responsabilité n'incombe pas à la Chambre d'appel. Ainsi que la Chambre d'appel l'a déjà souligné, l'autorisation d'interjeter appel doit absolument être une exception en matière d'admission des éléments de preuve produits. En conséquence, comme il revenait clairement à la Chambre de première instance, en sa qualité de juge des faits, d'user de son pouvoir souverain d'appréciation pour trancher les questions soulevées dans le recours en l'espèce, la Chambre d'appel estime que ces questions ne justifient aucune exception et n'auraient pas dû être certifiées ») [traduction]) (la note de bas de page n'a pas été reproduite).

l'acte d'accusation sera exclu. Si un fait essentiel ne se rapporte qu'a une allégation vague ou générale portée dans l'acte d'accusation, la Chambre recherchera si le Procureur a informé l'accusé de ce fait essentiel dans son mémoire préalable au procès ou dans sa déclaration liminaire pour remédier à l'imprécision de l'acte d'accusation. Les faits essentiels qui concernent les actes accomplis par l'accusé sont examinés plus minutieusement que les allégations générales faisant état de telle ou telle conduite criminelle. Les autres types de pièces communiquées, telles que les déclarations de témoin ou les pièces à conviction potentielles, ne suffisent généralement pas pour informer dument la Défense des faits essentiels retenus. La Chambre reconnaît deux exceptions à ce principe : premièrement, lorsque la Chambre a fait droit à une requête en adjonction de témoin formée par le Procureur qui indique les faits essentiels dont parlera le témoin en question à la barre (témoin AAA) ; deuxièmement, lorsque la Chambre a ordonné une longue suspension des débats pour permettre explicitement à la Défense de faire face à des faits essentiels nouvellement découverts (témoin DBQ)[11]. [Traduction.]

Il convient d'inclure dans le champ de l'autorisation d'interjeter appel la règle à suivre pour déterminer si l'exception visée au paragraphe 7 de la décision contestée a été soulevée. La Chambre d'appel jugera peut-être nécessaire d'apprécier ces énonciations juridiques à la lumière d'autres passages de la décision, mais ce sont celles-ci qui font l'objet de l'autorisation d'interjeter appel accordée en application de l'article 73 (B) du Règlement.

8. La Défense reproche à la Chambre de n'avoir pas tenu compte de la réplique qu'elle a déposée le 29 mai 2006 à la suite de l'annexe jointe par le Procureur sa réponse (la « réplique »). Ce n'est pas vrai. En effet, la Chambre a bel et bien tenu compte de cette réplique, comme le prouve clairement le fait qu'elle a longuement examiné la question de savoir s'il était loisible a une Chambre de première instance de considérer qu'un acte d'accusation a été « purgé » de ses vices par d'autres pièces ou si cela ne relevait que de la compétence de la Chambre d'appel[12]. La Défense n'avait invoqué l'incompétence de la Chambre de première instance en la matière que dans sa réplique ; la requête initiale n'en fait pas état[13]. C'est donc tout simplement par inadvertance que la réplique n'a pas été mentionnée dans le préambule de la décision. En tout cas, comme l'examen des réponses est tout à fait discrétionnaire, le fait de ne pas analyser des écritures de cette nature ne constitue pas une erreur de droit ni une erreur de fait.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

FAIT DROIT à la requête en partie ;

CERTIFIE aux fins d'un appel interlocutoire les énonciations juridiques articulées aux paragraphes 7 et 10 de sa décision intitulée Decision on Ntabakuze Motion for Exclusion of Evidence, rendue le 29 juin 2006.

[11] Affaire Bagosora et consorts, Chambre de première instance, Decision on Ntabakuze Motion for Exclusion of Evidence, 29 juin 2006, par. 10. 1. Le 7 avril 2006, la Défense de Nsengiyumva a déposé une requête priant la Chambre de demander l'assistance du Royaume de Belgique en vertu de l'article 28 du Statut pour faciliter la tenue d'un entretien avec un national belge, le « major Marc Biot ». La Chambre a fait droit à cette requête le 21 avril 2006[1]. Parallèlement, le 7 juillet 2006, la Défense a déposé une requête demandant à la Chambre de délivrer une citation à comparaître comme témoin à adresser au « major Jacques Biot ».

La Chambre a fait droit à ladite requête le 14 juillet 2006 et enjoint au Greffier d'adresser une citation à comparaître au major Jacques Biot[2].

2. La Défense a déposé par la suite un « mémorandum » [une requête] demandant à la Chambre de rectifier sa décision de manière à faire adresser la citation à comparaître au « major Marc Biot ». Elle y allègue aussi que ladite décision ne résume pas fidèlement les points du témoignage attendu du major Biot et que celui-ci n'était pas membre de la MINUAR, mais appartenait aux services de la coopération militaire belge[3]. Le 25 juillet 2006, la Défense a informé la Chambre, par l'intermédiaire du Greffe, que le nom correct du témoin potentiel était « Willy Biot ».

3. Le 20 juillet 2006, le Greffe a délivré à l'intention du « major Willy Biot », une citation à comparaître qui a été transmise aux autorités belges le 21 juillet 2006. Cette citation ayant à présent été adressée à son destinataire correctement identifié, la requête [« mémorandum »] en modification de la décision de la Chambre est donc sans objet. En outre, aucune des erreurs que la Défense dit avoir relevées n'a pu être établie à ce jour.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

DECLARE la requête sans objet.

Fait à Arusha, le 29 août 2006.

LE TRIBUNAL PÉNAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA,

SIEGEANT en la Chambre de première instance I composée des juges Erik Møse, Président, Jai Ram Reddy et Sergei Alekseevich Egorov (la « Chambre »), SAISI d'une requête intitulée « Anatole Nsengiyumva's Extremely Urgent Motion for the Testimony of Mr. Alphonse Higaniro to be Taken by Video-Conference », déposée par la Défense de Nsengiyumva le 3 juillet 2006,

STATUE sur ladite requête

Introduction

1. La Défense de Nsengiyumva demande que la déposition d'Alphonse Higaniro, témoin à décharge présentement détenu en Belgique, soit entendue par vidéoconférence. M. Higaniro a dit qu'il était disposé à comparaitre, mais les autorités belges ont fait savoir que le droit belge interdisait de le transférer physiquement à Arusha pour qu'il dépose.

Délibération

2. En vertu de l'article 54 du Règlement de procédure et de preuve (le « Règlement »), une Chambre peut autoriser un témoin à déposer par vidéoconférence au lieu de comparaitre en personne lorsque « l'intérêt de la justice » le commande[1]. Pour accorder cette autorisation, la Chambre doit tenir compte de l'importance de la déposition, de l'incapacité ou de la réticence du témoin à comparaitre au prétoire et de la solidité des raisons fournies pour justifier son incapacité ou sa réticence[2].

3. D'après la Défense, la déposition de M. Higaniro viendra contredire celle du témoin XBH qui a attesté que l'accusé s'était entretenu à Butare avec le colonel Bagosora et d'autres personnes pour discuter de l'organisation du génocide des Tutsis, notamment en élaborant des listes de personnalités à tuer. Le témoin XBH a dit que M. Higaniro lui-même avait assisté à une réunion Butare avec l'accusé, réunion au cours de laquelle une opération visant à tuer des Tutsis avait été débattue[3]. En conséquence, la Chambre est convaincue que la déposition serait importante. De plus, il ressort de la lettre des autorités belges annexée à la requête que le témoin étant détenu en Belgique, son transfert à Arusha n'est pas possible. Dans ces circonstances, la Chambre estime que l'intérêt de la justice commande d'autoriser M. Higaniro à déposer par voie de vidéoconférence.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

FAIT DROIT à la requête ;

ORDONNE au Greffe de prendre, en consultation avec la Défense, toutes les dispositions nécessaires pour que la déposition du témoin Alphonse Higaniro soit entendue par voie de vidéoconférence et d'enregistrer la déposition sur vidéocassette pour permettre a la Chambre de la consulter plus tard s'il y a lieu.

LE TRIBUNAL PÉNAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA,

SIÉGEANT en la Chambre de première instance I, composée des juges Erik Møse, Président, Jai Ram Reddy et Sergei Alekseevich Egorov,

SAISI des requêtes intitulées Bagosora Defence Amended Strictly Confidential and Ex Parte Request for Subpoena of Ambassador Mpungwe and Cooperation of the United Republic of Tanzania [la requête] et Bagosora Defence Further Request for Timely Decision on Bagosora Defence Amended Motion Filed 7 July 2006 [la requête complémentaire], déposées respectivement le 7 juillet et le 24 août 2006,

STATUE sur la requête.

1. La Défense de Bagosora souhaite avoir un entretien avec l'Ambassadeur Ami R. Mpungwe, ancien haut fonctionnaire tanzanien qui aurait servi de facilitateur lors des négociations ayant débouché sur les Accords d'Arusha. Elle affirme avoir des motifs raisonnables de croire que M. Mpungwe dispose peut-être d'informations relatives à l'attitude du colonel Bagosora aux pourparlers de paix d'Arusha, attitude décrite par des témoins à charge dans des dépositions tendant à incriminer l'accusé. Dans la requête, la Défense rend compte des efforts considérables qu'elle a déployés, tout comme le Greffe, à partir du 28 avril 2005 pour rencontrer M. Mpungwe[1]. Elle prie donc la Chambre de demander au Gouvernement tanzanien de faciliter un entretien avec l'Ambassadeur Mpungwe et, « le cas échéant » [traduction], de citer celui-ci à la barre. Aux dernières nouvelles reçues par la Chambre, l'Ambassadeur se dit prêt à rencontrer la Défense de Bagosora à condition que les autorités gouvernementales l'y autorisent[2].

[2] Requête complémentaire, par. 4.

2. Aux termes de l'article 28 du Statut, les États sont tenus de

Cette obligation vise tant le Procureur dans sa quête de preuves à charge que la Défense dans sa quête de preuves à décharge. Toute requête présentée à une Chambre pour qu'elle formule une demande en vertu de l'article 28 du Statut doit indiquer la nature des renseignements demandés, la pertinence de ces renseignements pour le procès et les efforts qui ont été faits pour les obtenir. Elle doit également préciser la nature de l'assistance souhaitée[3].

3. Les conditions sont remplies pour prier la Chambre de présenter une demande en vertu de l'article 28 du Statut. La Défense et le Greffe ont fourni des efforts considérables pour organiser la rencontre sollicitée. La Défense a invoqué des motifs valables donnant à penser que M. Mpungwe pourrait disposer d'informations concernant l'attitude du colonel Bagosora aux pourparlers de paix d'Arusha, attitude au sujet de laquelle la Chambre a recueilli des témoignages directs qui sont susceptibles d'incriminer l'accusé. En outre, ces éléments de preuve ont trait à des allégations précises, portées au paragraphe 5.10 de l'acte d'accusation, selon lesquelles l'accusé

La Défense a des raisons sérieuses de croire que l'Ambassadeur Mpungwe dispose peut-être d'informations qui pourraient se rapporter directement à ces allégations.

4. À ce stade de la procédure, la Chambre ne juge pas nécessaire d'adresser une citation à comparaître à M. Mpungwe. Celui-ci semble disposé à s'entretenir de son plein gré avec la Défense de Bagosora, à condition que le Gouvernement tanzanien l'y autorise. La Chambre relève néanmoins que cet entretien devrait avoir lieu le plus tôt possible. Le procès en est à sa phase finale, et la Défense doit avoir une possibilité raisonnable d'évaluer la nature des éléments d'information dont dispose M. Mpungwe pour pouvoir, le cas échéant, le citer à la barre.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

FAIT DROIT à la requête en partie ;

PRIE la République-Unie de Tanzanie d'autoriser l'Ambassadeur Mpungwe à s'entretenir avec la Défense de Bagosora et de fournir toute autre assistance pertinente qui pourra être raisonnablement demandée en vue de faciliter le déroulement de cette rencontre le plus tôt possible ;

CHARGE le Greffe de transmettre la présente décision aux autorités concernées de la République-Unie de Tanzanie.

SAISI de la requête de la Défense de Ntabakuze intitulée « Request to Allow Witness Amadou Dema to Give testimony via Video-Link », déposée le 12 juillet 2006,

VU la Réponse du Procureur, déposée le 20 juillet 2006, et la Réplique de la Défense, déposée le 3 1 juillet 2006,

STATUE CI-APRÈS sur ladite requête

Introduction

1. La Défense de Ntabakuze prie la Chambre d'autoriser le témoin Amadou Deme à déposer par vidéoconférence. Elle fait valoir que le témoin, un ancien fonctionnaire de l'information de la MINUAR, craint avant tout de se voir refuser le droit de rentrer dans son pays de résidence et que son avocat lui a conseillé de ne pas voyager à l'étranger[1]. Elle soutient que la déposition du témoin est importante, car elle portera, entre autres, sur l'existence d'une prétendue entente en vue de commettre le génocide et sur la question de savoir si des civils ont été niés à proximité de l'aéroport de Kigali où des para-commandos étaient stationnés[2].

[1] Requête, par. 7 à 9 ; Réplique de Ntabakuze, par. 4.
[2] Requête, par. 10.

2. Le Procureur s'oppose à la requête au motif que la situation du témoin ne remplit pas les conditions requises pour autoriser une déposition par vidéoconférence.

Délibération

3. L'article 90 (A) du Règlement de procédure et de preuve est ainsi libellé en partie : « [E]n principe, les Chambres entendent les témoins en personne ». Cependant, une Chambre peut décider, en application de l'article 54, de recueillir la déposition par vidéoconférence, si l'intérêt de la justice le commande[3]. A cet effet, la Chambre évaluera l'importance de la déposition, l'impossibilité pour le témoin de se présenter à l'audience ou sa réticence à le faire, et verra si des motifs valables ont été présentés pour justifier cette impossibilité pour le témoin de comparaître ou le fait pour lui d'être peu disposé à le faire[4].

4. Selon la Défense, M. Deme dira à la barre qu'il n'y a, à sa connaissance, aucun élément de preuve crédible établissant qu'en janvier 1994 il existait une entente en vue de commettre le génocide contre les Tutsis au Rwanda, que l'informateur selon lequel il existait une telle entente n'est pas crédible, et que lui-même n'a reçu aucune relation faisant état de massacres de civils près de l'aéroport de Kigali, alors pourtant qu'il y avait des observateurs de la MINUAR dans la zone. Cette déposition, si elle est jugée crédible, va à l'encontre des éléments de preuve tendant à incriminer l'accusé.

5. La Défense a établi que M. Deme refuse réellement de se rendre à l'étranger et que ce refus est fondé, au moins en partie, sur les conseils que son avocat lui donne en ce sens. La Défense n'a pas explicité en quoi un tel déplacement pourrait remettre en question le statut de résident du témoin, mais la Chambre admet que la Défense a établi suffisamment que le témoin estimait sincèrement avoir des raisons valables de ne pas se rendre à l'étranger et que ces raisons se fondent objectivement, en particulier, sur les conseils de son avocat.

6. Ayant examiné l'ensemble des circonstances, la Chambre estime que l'intérêt de la justice commande d'autoriser le témoin à déposer par vidéoconférence.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

AUTORISE le témoin Amadou Deme à déposer par vidéoconférence à partir de son pays de résidence ;

INVITE le Greffe à prendre, en concertation avec les parties, toutes les dispositions nécessaires pour permettre la déposition du témoin Deme par vidéoconférence durant la prochaine session prévue du 4 septembre au 13 octobre 2006, et à enregistrer ladite déposition sur support vidéo pour permettre à la Chambre de s'y référer éventuellement.

LE TRIBUNAL PÉNAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA,

SIÉGEANT en la Chambre de première instance I, composée des juges Erik Møse, Président, Jai Ram Reddy et Sergei Alekseevich Egorov,

SAISI d'une requête intitulée « Requête de la Défense du Dr. Casimir Bizimungu en communication des audiences à huis clos et des exhibits des témoins protégés de la défense BDR-1 et LK2 », déposée le 10 juillet 2006,

STATUE sur ladite requête.

Introduction

1. La Défense de Casimir Bizimungu, dont le procès est en cours devant la Chambre de première instance II, demande que lui soient communiqués les comptes rendus des audiences à huis clos et les pièces à conviction mises sous scellés portant sur les dépositions des témoins BDR-1 et LK-2. Ceux-ci ont été entendus respectivement les 14 et 15 avril 2005 et les 19, 20 et 21 avril 2005 comme témoins à décharge de Nsengiyumva dans l'affaire Bagosora et consorts[1]. La requête se fonde sur l'article 75 (G) du Règlement de procédure et de preuve [le « Règlement »].

2. La Défense de Bizimungu soutient que les deux témoins lui ont révélé avoir déposé devant ladite Chambre dans l'affaire Bagosora et consorts, et avoir consenti à la communication de tout document confidentiel y afférent[2]. Elle fait valoir que ces informations confidentielles doivent lui permettre de se prononcer sur la nécessité de citer ces témoins et, le cas échéant, de préparer et de présenter leurs dépositions[3]. Elle consent à se conformer aux mesures de protection de témoins à décharge applicables prises dans l'affaire Bagosora et consorts[4].

Arguments

3. Dans l'affaire Bagosora et consorts, la Chambre a, en application des articles 21 du Statut et 75 du Règlement, décide des mesures de protection de témoins qui interdisent de divulguer au public tout renseignement permettant d'identifier ceux-ci[5]. Certaines parties des dépositions des témoins BDR-1 et LK-2 ont été considérées comme entrant dans cette catégorie et ont, pour ces motifs, été entendues à huis clos[6]. L'article 75 (G) permet à toute partie à une deuxième affaire qui souhaite la modification de mesures ordonnées dans une première affaire de soumettre sa demande à la Chambre « saisie de la première affaire ».

4. Les témoins BDR-1 et LK-2 ont révélé à la Défense de Bizimungu leur statut de témoins protégés dans la présente affaire, et ils auraient par ailleurs consenti à la divulgation de ces informations confidentielles. Dans ces conditions, on ne voit pas en quoi on protégerait les témoins en refusant à la Défense l'accès à leurs dépositions confidentielles. En effet, tout membre du Bureau du Procureur ayant accès aux informations confidentielles dans toutes les affaires pendantes devant le Tribunal, la communication sollicitée est de nature à renforcer l'équité du procès[7]. Ce même accès ne saurait être refusé à la Défense lorsque des témoins lui ont dévoilé leur statut[8].

5. Les mesures de protection de témoins prises en faveur des témoins de Nsengiyumva s'appliquent mutatis mutandis à la Défense de Bizimungu et à l'accusé lui-même en ce qui concerne les témoins BDR-1 et LK-2[9].

LE TRIBUNAL PÉNAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA,

SAISI de la Requête de la Défense de Bagosora visant la modification de sa liste de témoins, déposée le 31 août 2006,

VU la réponse du Procureur, déposée le 1er septembre 2006,

STATUE sur la requête.

Introduction

1. La Défense de Bagosora demande à la Chambre de l'autoriser à ajouter deux témoins à sa liste et à en radier 15 autres. Elle prétend n'avoir appris l'existence de ces deux témoins que récemment. Leur déposition devrait réfuter des éléments de preuve à charge précis et la durée de l'interrogatoire principal des deux témoins est évaluée à trois heures et demie seulement[1].

Délibération

2. Le Procureur ne s'oppose pas à la requête, déclarant « ne pas prendre position » quant au sort qui devrait lui être réservé. Il fait toutefois valoir que la Défense n'est pas tenue de demander l'autorisation de retirer des témoins de sa liste et qu'en réalité, ceux-ci en avaient déjà été radiés en vertu d'une lettre adressée par le conseil principal à la Chambre le 12 avril 2006.

(i) Norme applicable

3. L'article 73 ter (E) du Règlement de procédure et de preuve est ainsi libellé :

> Après le début de la présentation des moyens à décharge, la défense peut, si elle estime que l'intérêt de la justice le commande, saisir la Chambre de première instance d'une requête aux fins d'être autorisée à revenir à sa liste de témoins initiale ou à revoir la composition de sa liste.

La Chambre a déjà eu à appliquer cette disposition en l'espèce :

> Interprétant les dispositions analogues applicables aux témoins à charge, la Chambre de première instance a déclaré que la modification d'une liste de témoins devait reposer sur des « motifs valables » et servir l'« intérêt de la justice ». Des principes similaires ont été appliqués lors de l'examen des requêtes de la Défense tendant à modifier une liste de témoins. Au moment de décider d'autoriser on non une telle modification, il importe d'évaluer minutieusement, entre autres, pour chaque témoin, la suffisance des éléments de preuve présentés et le moment où ils ont été communiqués, la pertinence et la valeur probante des dépositions proposées par rapport aux témoignages existants et aux allégations portées dans l'acte d'accusation, la capacité effective de l'autre partie à contre-interroger le témoin et les raisons avancées par la partie requérante pour justifier l'ajout du témoin[2] [traduction] .

La Chambre doit s'assurer, à la lumière des obligations de communication imposées à la partie requérante, que l'ajout d'un témoin à la liste n'entraînera ni « surprise injuste ni préjudice » pour la partie adverse[3].

(ii) Retrait de témoins

4. Le Procureur ne s'oppose pas à la demande de retrait de témoins, celle-ci permettra en effet d'économiser les ressources du Tribunal et répond de toute évidence aux besoins d'une présentation efficace des moyens à décharge. D'où son accueil par la chambre[4].

(iii) Ajout de témoins

5. À la lumière des facteurs susmentionnés, la Chambre estime qu'il est dans l'intérêt de la justice d'autoriser la Défense à ajouter les témoins X-06 et X-07 à sa liste. La déposition de ces témoins semble avoir été définie de façon restrictive et orientée vers la réfutation d'éléments de preuve à charge précis.

6. La présente requête n'est que la deuxième du genre déposée par la Défense de Bagosora, ce qui montre que celle-ci a agi avec diligence pour modifier le moins possible sa liste de témoins et minimiser les effets perturbateurs qui en résulteraient pour la préparation du procès. Il semble que la Défense n'ait découvert que fin juillet le témoignage que les deux personnes en question pourraient apporter, ce qui laisse penser qu'elle a formé la présente requête aussitôt que possible. De plus, vu le peu de temps nécessaire à l'audition de ces deux témoins, la comparution des témoins dans les délais impartis avant la fin de la présentation des moyens à charge devrait se dérouler sans entrave, d'autant qu'un certain nombre d'autres témoins ont été retirés de la liste. Rien n'indique dans la présente requête qu'il faudrait modifier le calendrier du procès, lequel demande à la Défense de Bagosora d'appeler tous ses témoins des faits d'ici à la fin de la présente session, fixée au 13 octobre 2006.

7. La Défense avait initialement pour obligation, en matière de communication, de déposer sa liste de témoins, accompagnée du résumé des dépositions attendues au plus tard le 3 janvier 2005[5]. En raison des modifications apportées ultérieurement à la liste des témoins à décharge, la Chambre a exigé que ces informations soient communiquées « trente cinq jours avant la comparution du témoin »[6] [traduction]. Les renseignements concernant les deux témoins ont été communiqués au Procureur les 24 et 28 août 2006. Au regard du nombre limité de témoins visés, la Chambre retient la seconde date comme étant celle où la communication a été effectuée. En conséquence, et a moins .que Procureur ne renonce au délai, les témoins X-06 et X-07 ne pourront pas déposer avant le 2 octobre 2006.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LE TRIBUNAL

FAIT DROIT à la requête de la Défense de Bagosora visant à ajouter les témoins X-06 et X-07 à sa liste, ENJOINT, au cas où cela n'aurait pas encore été fait, que soient communiquées au Procureur toutes les informations permettant d'identifier les témoins visés, ainsi que le résumé de leur témoignage, DÉCLARE, à moins que Procureur ne renonce au délai, que les témoins ne pourront pas déposer avant le 2 octobre 2006.

LE TRIBUNAL PÉNAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA,

SIÉGEANT en la Chambre de première instance I composée des juges Erik Møse, Président, Jai Ram Reddy et Sergei Alekseevich Egorov,

SAISI DE la requête de Ntabakuze intitulée Motion for Request of Cooperation from the Government of France Pursuant to Article 28 of the Statute, ainsi que l'additif et des modifications y afférents, déposés respectivement le 8 mars et le 28 août 2006,

STATUE À PRÉSENT sur la requête

Introduction

1. Le 8 mars 2006, la Défense de Ntabakuze a déposé une requête dans laquelle elle priait la Chambre de solliciter la coopération du Gouvernement français, notamment, pour « faciliter la tenue d'une rencontre et d'un entretien avec le colonel Grégoire de Saint-Quentin qu'elle entend citer en qualité de témoin »[1] [traduction].

Par la suite, la Défense et le Greffe ont informé la Chambre que des dispositions avaient été prises pour organiser cet entretien. Le 5 mai et le 27 juin 2006, un membre de la Défense de Ntabakuze s'est entretenu avec le colonel de Saint-Quentin selon la procédure fixée par le Gouvernement français. Dans l'additif et les modifications apportés à sa requête, la Défense a prié la Chambre de rendre une Les demandes présentées à une Chambre en vertu de l'article 28 du Statut en vue de la délivrance d'une ordonnance doivent indiquer la nature des éléments d'information demandés, leur pertinence pour le procès et les efforts qui ont été faits pour les obtenir. Elles doivent aussi préciser la nature de l'aide souhaitée[3].

3. Le Gouvernement français a indiqué qu'il était disposé à autoriser le colonel de Saint-Quentin à déposer par voie de vidéoconférence conformément à l'article 71 (D) du Règlement de procédure et de preuve au lieu qu'il se rende à Arusha pour le faire de vive voix comme le demande la Défense[4]. Il précise qu'il est difficile de mettre le colonel de Saint-Quentin à la disposition du Tribunal à si brève échéance vu qu'il est un officier en activité à la tête d'une unité militaire[5]. La Défense prend acte de la position de la France, mais elle s'oppose à la demande en vue d'une déposition par voie de vidéoconférence au motif que l'article 71 (A) du Règlement exige qu'il y ait des « circonstances exceptionnelles ». N'ayant pas connaissance de l'existence de telles circonstances, la Défense estime qu'une telle demande ne saurait prospérer. De plus, l'article 71 (A) du Règlement indique qu'une Chambre peut ordonner qu'une déposition soit recueillie « à la demande de l'une des parties » ; la Défense estime qu'en l'absence d'une telle demande, la Chambre ne peut rendre une telle ordonnance[6].

Délibérations

4. Dans la mesure du possible, quand elle examine les requêtes fondées sur l'article 28 du Statut, la Chambre de première instance tient compte des préoccupations légitimes des Etats. Le Gouvernement français affirme que le colonel de Saint-Quentin est un officier en activité, commandant d'une unité militaire et que son absence perturberait le bon fonctionnement de ladite unité. Par ailleurs, le calendrier du procès prescrit à la Défense de Ntabakuze d'achever la présentation de ses moyens avant le 13 octobre 2006.

[6] Additif, par. 7.

5. La Défense fait observer à juste titre que, conformément à l'article 71 du Règlement, une déposition ne peut être ordonnée qu'« à la demande de l'une des parties ». Aucune des parties n'ayant fait une telle demande, la Chambre ne peut rendre une telle ordonnance.

6. Cependant, en vertu de l'article 54 du Règlement, la Chambre est investie du pouvoir d'ordonner qu'un témoin dépose par voie de vidéoconférence quand « l'intérêt de la justice » le commande. Ce pouvoir et le critère « intérêt de la justice » ont été pour la première fois reconnus devant le TPIY dans l'affaire Tadić, et cette jurisprudence est suivie par le Tribunal de céans[7]. Au nombre des critères permettant de déterminer si la déposition par voie de vidéoconférence est dans « l'intérêt de la justice », on citera : l'importance de la déposition, l'incapacité ou le refus du témoin de se présenter à l'audience ; et la preuve de l'existence de raisons valables justifiant cette incapacité ou cette réticence[8]. L'article 54 du Règlement prévoit expressément que la Chambre peut rendre une ordonnance de sa propre initiative[9].

7. Le Gouvernement français affirme que la comparution du colonel de Saint-Quentin à Arusha à une si brève échéance perturberait le bon fonctionnement de l'unité militaire dont il assure le commandement. Cette préoccupation constitue une raison valable justifiant son incapacité à comparaître. Dans ces circonstances, et en raison du fait que la Défense insiste sur l'importance de son témoignage, c'est dans l'intérêt de la justice que le témoin soit entendu par voie de vidéoconférence. Même si la Défense n'a fait aucune demande dans ce sens, la Chambre estime que ce mécanisme permet de prendre en compte les préoccupations légitimes du Gouvernement français tout en s'assurant que la déposition se fasse dans le respect du calendrier établi pour le procès. En conséquence, la Chambre décide, de sa propre initiative, de rendre l'ordonnance.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

PRIE le Gouvernement français de bien vouloir autoriser le colonel de Saint-Quentin à déposer dans la présente affaire par voie de vidéoconférence ;

ENJOINT au Greffe de transmettre la présente décision aux autorités compétentes du Gouvernement français et, en consultation avec les parties et le Gouvernement français, de prendre les dispositions en vue de recueillir la déposition par voie de vidéoconférence conformément à la présente décision.

LE TRIBUNAL PÉNAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA,

SIEGEANT en la Chambre de première instance I composée des juges Erik Møse, Président, Jai Ram Reddy et Sergei Alekseevich Egorov,

SAISI de la Requête de la Défense de Bagosora sollicitant une ordonnance de transfert (article 90 bis du R.p.p.), déposée le 14 septembre 2006,

VU la réponse du Procureur, déposée le 15 septembre 2006,

STATUE sur la requête.

1. La Défense de Bagosora demande à la Chambre d'ordonner le transfert temporaire du témoin à décharge Jean Kambanda au centre de détention du Tribunal sis à Arusha pour qu'il dépose devant la Chambre. M. Kambanda purge actuellement au Mali[1] une peine d'emprisonnement à vie prononcée par le Tribunal. I1 a déposé devant la Chambre les 11, 12 et 13 juillet 2006. Sa déposition a été interrompue et la suite renvoyée à une date ultérieure en attendant que la Chambre statue sur une requête tendant à faire exclure certaines parties de cette déposition ou disjoindre les procès des accusés[2]. La Défense de Bagosora demande que ce témoin soit à Arusha dès le 2 octobre 2006 pour compléter sa déposition qui doit s'achever avant la fin de la présente session d'audiences prévue pour le 13 octobre 2006. Le Procureur ne s'oppose pas à la requête, mais demande que le témoin soit entendu le plus tôt possible et que l'ordonnance reste en vigueur jusqu'a la fin de sa déposition, quel qu'en soit le moment.

[2] Affaire Bagosora et consorts, Chambre de premiere instance, Decision on Severance or Exclusion of Evidence Bared on Prejudice Arising from Testimony of Jean Kambanda, 11 septembre 2006.

2. Aux termes de l'article 90 bis (B) du Règlement de Procédure et de preuve, de telles ordonnances ne peuvent être rendues que si deux conditions sont remplies : premièrement

deuxièmement,

> « son transfert [n'est] pas susceptible de prolonger la durée de sa détention telle que prévue par l'Etat requis ».

De plus, l'article 4 de l'accord conclu entre l'Organisation des Nations Unies et la République du Mali prévoit expressément la possibilité de transférer temporairement un détenu pour qu'il fasse une déposition, à condition que sa présence ne soit pas requise dans une procédure pénale en cours au Mali[3].

3. La Chambre a été informée par le Greffe que la présence de M. Kambanda ne serait requise dans aucune procédure pénale au Mali pendant la période proposée pour son séjour, ce qui satisfait la première condition. Comme M. Kambanda purge une peine d'emprisonnement à vie, la seconde condition est inapplicable. La date précise de la déposition du témoin est une tout autre question. La Chambre tiendra toutefois compte de l'avis de la Défense de Bagosora selon lequel le témoin ne devrait pas reprendre sa déposition avant le retour du conseil principal à Arusha qui aura lieu le 2 octobre 2006 ou vers cette date.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

ORDONNE, sous réserve de l'accord du Gouvernement du Mali, que Jean Kambanda soit temporairement transféré au centre de détention du Tribunal dans les meilleurs délais et renvoyé au Mali au plus tard le 30 octobre 2006, en application de l'article 90 bis du Règlement ;

DEMANDE au Gouvernement du Mali de faciliter son transfert en collaboration avec le Greffier et le Gouvernement de la Tanzanie.

CHARGE le Greffier :
(A) De transmettre la présente ordonnance aux Gouvernements du Mali et de la Tanzanie,
(B) De veiller au bon déroulement du transfert, y compris le suivi de la détention du témoin au centre de détention du Tribunal.

LE TRIBUNAL PÉNAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA,

SIEGEANT en la Chambre de première instance I, composée des juges Erik Møse, Président, Jai Ram Reddy et Sergei Alekseevich Egorov (la « Chambre »),

SAISI de la Requête en extrême urgence de la Défense de Bagosora visant la coopération du Royaume de Belgique (article 54 du RPP et article 28 du Statut), déposée le 20 septembre 2006,

STATUE sur ladite requête.

1. La Défense de Bagosora prie la Chambre de demander que le Gouvernement belge l'autorise à s'entretenir avec Alphonse Higaniro, témoin actuellement détenu en Belgique qui doit en principe déposer en faveur de la Défense de Nsengiyumva au début du mois d'octobre. Elle précise qu'elle sollicite cet entretien pour déterminer si elle a besoin de contre-interroger le témoin.

2. L'article 28 du Statut fait obligation aux États de

Toute personne qui demande à une Chambre de rendre une ordonnance en vertu de l'article 28 du Statut doit indiquer la nature des informations recherchées, l'intérêt que celles-ci présentent pour le procès et les efforts qui ont été faits pour les obtenir. Elle doit aussi préciser la nature de l'assistance souhaitée[1].

3. Dans une décision antérieure, la Chambre a conclu que M. Higaniro pourrait avoir des informations présentant un intérêt pour le procès en l'espèce[2]. Le colonel Bagosora aurait été présent lorsque l'un des faits dont M. Higaniro serait en mesure de parler s'est produit[3]. En outre, il ressort de la correspondance annexée à la requête que la Défense a essayé d'obtenir l'entretien sollicité sans recourir à la Chambre, mais le droit belge n'autorise les entrevues de cette nature que si une décision a été rendue à cet effet en vertu de l'article 28 du Statut. La Chambre estime donc que les conditions nécessaires pour présenter une demande en vertu de l'article 28 sont réunies.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

PRIE le Royaume de Belgique de lui apporter toute assistance nécessaire pour que la Défense de Bagosora puisse s'entretenir avec Alphonse Kiganiro ;

ORDONNE au Greffe de transmettre la présente décision aux autorités compétentes du Royaume de Belgique.

LE TRIBUNAL PÉNAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA,

SIÉGEANT en la Chambre de première instance I, composée des juges Erik Møse, Président, Jai Ram Reddy et Sergei Alekseevich Egorov (la « Chambre »),

SAISI de la requête de la Défense de Kabiligi intitulée « Motion to Request the Testimony of Witnesses KX-38 and KYB-46 via Video-Link », déposée le 20 septembre 2006,

STATUE sur ladite requête.

Introduction

1. La Défense de Kabiligi prie la Chambre d'entendre deux de ses témoins par voie de vidéoconférence. Ceux-ci sont disposés à témoigner, mais refusent de se rendre à Arusha, car en tant que chefs de file de l'opposition à l'actuel Gouvernement du Rwanda, ils craignent pour leur sécurité.

Délibération

2. La déposition par vidéoconférence peut être ordonnée soit en vertu de l'article 54 du Règlement de procédure et de preuve, parce que l'intérêt de la justice le commande, soit comme une mesure de protection du témoin prise en vertu de l'article 75 du Règlement qui exige que ce moyen soit nécessaire pour protéger la sécurité du témoin[1]. La Défense de Kabiligi invoque les deux articles à l'appui de sa présente requête.

3. Pour déterminer si le recueil de la déposition par vidéoconférence est dans l'intérêt de la justice conformément à l'article 54 du Règlement, il faut prendre en compte trois facteurs : l'importance de la déposition, l'incapacité pour le témoin de comparaître ou son refus de le faire, et la raison qui aura été avancée pour justifier cette incapacité ou ce refus[2]. Il n'est pas absolument nécessaire de justifier le refus de manière objective, mais il faut à tout le moins établir que le refus du témoin se fonde sur des motifs crédibles et que ceux-ci sont sincères[3].

4. Le témoin KX-38 refuse de se rendre à Arusha au motif qu'il est un des chefs de file de l'opposition à l'actuel Gouvernement du Rwanda. Il s'est exilé en 1994. Selon la requête, ce qui fonde les craintes du témoin, c'est le décès inopiné et inexpliqué d'autres membres de l'opposition et le fait qu'il serait l'objet d'un harcèlement constant. Il passe pour connaître l'accusé de longue date et est en mesure de témoigner que celui-ci n'avait pas de préjugés raciaux et n'était pas extrémiste. Le témoin a manifesté son refus de se rendre à Arusha dans un courriel qu'il a adressé au conseil de la Défense et qui est joint en annexe confidentielle et unilatérale de la requête[4].

5. Le témoin KVB-46 est un ancien haut responsable rwandais devenu par la suite chef d'un groupe de l'opposition. D'après la requête, il a eu la primeur de l'information selon laquelle l'accusé était favorable aux Accords d'Arusha. Dans son courriel, il dit au conseil de Kabiligi que son refus de venir déposer à Arusha est « une question de vie ou de mort »[5].

6. La Défense a établi que si les deux témoins refusent de se rendre à Arusha, c'est qu'ils éprouvent des craintes sincères. La Chambre n'est pas en mesure de déterminer la justification objective de ces craintes, mais la Défense a établi qu'il s'agit de personnalités très en vue qui peuvent avoir des raisons de craindre tout particulièrement pour leur sécurité. Ils semblent être en mesure de faire, sur des questions bien définies, des dépositions susceptibles de disculper l'accusé. La Chambre conclut donc qu'il est dans l'intérêt de la justice de leur permettre de déposer par voie de vidéoconférence.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

AUTORISE le recueil de la déposition des témoins KX-38 et KVB-46 par voie de vidéoconférence ;

CHARGE le Greffe de prendre, en concertation avec les parties, toutes les dispositions nécessaires pour le recueil de cette déposition et d'enregistrer celle-ci sur bande vidéo pour consultation éventuelle par la Chambre.

Fait à Arusha, le 5 octobre 2006.

LE TRIBUNAL PÉNAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA,

SIÉGEANT en la Chambre de première instance I, composée des juges Erik Møse, Président, Jai Ram Reddy et Sergei Alekseevich Egorov (la « Chambre »),

SAISI de la Requête de la Défense intitulée « Ntabakuze Motion for an Order Compelling the Prosecutor to Disclose Various Exculpatory Documents Pursuant to Rule 68 », déposée le 2 juin 2006,

VU la Réponse du Procureur, déposée le 7 juin 2006, et la Réplique de Ntabakuze, déposée le 27 juin 2006,

STATUE sur ladite requête,

Introduction

1. La Défense de Ntabakuze demande à la Chambre d'enjoindre au Procureur de lui communiquer huit catégories de documents, au motif qu'ils pourraient constituer des éléments de preuve à décharge au sens de l'article 68 (A) du Règlement. Il s'agit de rapports d'institutions des Nations Unies ou du Bureau du Procureur lui-même concernant des événements qui se sont déroulés au Rwanda en 1994. Une de ces catégories de documents, à savoir des rapports élaborés par le Haut Commissaire des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés, fait l'objet d'une requête déposée séparément par la Défense, qui sollicite en substance la même mesure pour les mêmes motifs, sur laquelle la Chambre rendra une décision ce jour-même[1].

Délibération

2. Aux termes de l'article 68 (A) du Règlement, le Procureur a l'obligation de communiquer

> « tous les éléments dont il sait effectivement qu'ils sont de nature à disculper en tout ou en partie l'accusé ou à porter atteinte à la crédibilité de ses éléments de preuve à charge».

La Chambre d'appel a toujours interprété l'expression « dont il sait effectivement » comme signifiant que l'information en question doit être en la possession du Procureur[2]. En conséquence,

> « [c]'est au Procureur qu'il revient de déterminer initialement si des éléments doivent être communiqués en application de l'article 68 du Règlement. »[3] […]

et le Procureur est censé s'acquitter de cette obligation de bonne foi[4]. Si la Défense estime que celui-ci ne s'est pas acquitté de cette obligation, elle doit : (i) indiquer avec un degré de précision raisonnable les éléments de nature à disculper l'accusé ; (ii) établir que ces éléments sont en la possession et sous le contrôle du Procureur ; (iii) présenter un commencement de preuve accréditant l'idée que les éléments recherchés sont susceptibles de disculper l'accusé[5].

3. Le Procureur déclare qu'il n'est en possession d'aucun document appartenant à quatre des huit catégories demandées par la Défense, à savoir : les dossiers constitués sur la base de l'enquête menée par Michael Hourigan sur l'assassinat du Président Habyarimana le 6 avril 1994 ; un rapport qui aurait été présenté par M. Hourigan à Louise Arbour concernant l'assassinat du Président Habyarimana le 6 avril 1994 ; des rapports établis par des observateurs des droits de l'homme sur l'évolution démographique au Rwanda, et des documents provenant du Bureau d'urgence de l'ONU pour le Rwanda »[6]. La Défense ne le conteste pas. En l'absence de toute indication en sens contraire, la Chambre accepte cette affirmation et ne peut délivrer aucune ordonnance concernant ces quatre catégories de documents.

4. Il reste à examiner trois catégories de documents, à savoir : « les rapports établis par le Bureau des Nations Unies pour les droits de l'homme au Rwanda sur certains massacres et charniers, ainsi que des résumés et des rapports sur les événements qui se sont déroulés au Rwanda en 1994 » ; « les rapports de l'Unité spéciale d'enquête du Bureau du Procureur sur certains massacres et charniers, ainsi que les résumés et les rapports relatifs aux événements qui se sont déroulés au Rwanda en 1994 », et « les rapports hebdomadaires succincts adressés par les observateurs militaires de la MINUAR au siège à Kigali tout au long de l'année 1994 et pendant les six premiers mois de 1995 » [traduction][7]. La Défense fait valoir que ces documents viendront étayer « sa thèse, telle qu'elle est exposée dans son mémoire préalable à la présentation des moyens à décharge » [traduction] et explique en quoi les catégories décrites ci-dessus peuvent contenir des documents de nature à disculper l'accusé. Le Procureur ne nie pas avoir en sa possession des documents appartenant à ces catégories, mais il soutient que ces documents ont été examinés et que toute information éventuellement à décharge a déjà été communiquée[8].

5. La Chambre doit accepter que le Procureur a examiné de bonne foi tous les documents en sa possession et qu'il s'est acquitté de ses obligations en matière de communication. Ces catégories de documents ne sont pas spécifiques au point de rendre obligatoire la communication de toute pièce y afférente. C'est pourquoi le Procureur est obligé d'examiner, d'identifier et de communiquer tout document susceptible de disculper l'accusé. En l'absence de toute preuve en sens contraire, aucune ordonnance en vertu de l'article 68 du Règlement ne pourrait se justifier.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

REJETTE la requête.

LE TRIBUNAL PENAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA,

SIÉGEANT en la Chambre de première instance I, composée des juges Erik Møse, Président, Jai Ram Reddy et Sergei Alekseevich Egorov (la « Chambre »),

SAISI de la requête de la Défense de Ntabakuze intitulée Request for Subpoenas of Kofi Annan, Iqbal Riza, Shahayar Khan and Michael Hourigan Pursuant to Rule 54, déposée le25 août 2006, CONSIDÉRANT les arguments déposés par la Défense de Bagosora le 5 septembre 2006, la lettre du Bureau des affaires juridiques de l'organisation des Nations Unies (la « Lettre »), datée du 7 septembre 2006, et le mémorandum de la Défense de Ntabakuze et ses annexes, déposés le 15 septembre 2006,

Introduction

1. La Défense de Ntabakuze demande à la Chambre de première instance d'adresser des citations à comparaître à Kofi Annan et Iqbal Riza, responsables en 1994 du Département des opérations de maintien de la paix (le « Département ») à New York, à Shaharyar Khan, nommé Représentant spécial du Secrétaire général de l'organisation des Nations Unies au Rwanda au milieu de l'année 1994, et à Michael Hourigan, un ancien enquêteur du Bureau du Procureur. Elle lui demande d'enjoindre aux trois derniers de venir déposer devant la Chambre, cependant que M. Annan se verrait seulement contraint à accepter un entretien avec la Défense.

2. Le Bureau des affaires juridiques de l'ONU a répondu à la requête en faisant valoir que la Défense restait devoir exposer les raisons de droit et de fait justifiant la comparution des témoins ou la nécessité d'un entretien avec M. Annan. Il explique qu'il a offert sa coopération entière à la Défense et qu'il reste disposé à le faire. Son opposition à la Requête « n'est pas imputable à un refus d'aider [la Défense]: mais au fait que celle-ci ne se conforme pas aux dispositions qu'elle a déjà acceptées à maintes reprises et dont elle a à maintes reprises bénéficié »[1] [traduction].

Délibération

(i) Principes généraux

3. Celui qui demande la délivrance d'une citation à comparaître comme témoin ou d'une injonction à accepter un entretien doit s'assurer que les trois conditions suivantes sont remplies : (i) des démarches raisonnables ont été entreprises pour obtenir la coopération volontaire du témoin, (ii) le témoin éventuel possède des renseignements qui apporteront une aide sensible à la cause de la Défense sur des questions précisément identifiées et qui seront débattues au procès, (iii) la déposition du témoin est nécessaire aux fins de la conduite et de l'équité du procès[2]. Il a été dit que > « les citations à comparaître ne sauraient être délivrées à la légère et que la Chambre devait tenir compte «non seulement [de] l'utilité des informations pour [celui qui les demande], mais aussi [de] l'obligation générale de veiller à ce que le procès soit exhaustif et équitable »[3].

La Chambre d'appel a développé ces points dans les termes que voici :

> [Celui qui sollicite la délivrance] d'une injonction doit démontrer en droit que celle-ci est nécessaire. En particulier, il doit démontrer qu'il existe des motifs raisonnables de croire que le témoin éventuel sera en mesure de donner des renseignements qui apporteront une aide sensible à sa cause sur des questions précisément identifiées et qui seront débattues au procès. Pour remplir cette condition, le [requérant] pourra être tenu de présenter des informations notamment sur le rôle joué par le témoin éventuel dans les événements considérés, les relations qu'il a pu avoir avec l'accusé et qui pourraient être en rapport avec les accusations, le fait qu'il a eu la possibilité d'observer les événements (ou d'en apprendre l'existence) et toute déclaration qu'il a faite [au Procureur] ou à d'autres sur ces événements. La Chambre de première instance jouit d'un pouvoir discrétionnaire pour déterminer si le [requérant] a bien rapporté les preuves requises, ce pouvoir étant essentiel pour veiller à ce que la mesure coercitive qu'est l'injonction ne soit pas appliquée de façon inconsidérée. Comme l'a souligné la Chambre d'appel, [les Chambres de première instance] « ne sauraient délivrer une citation à comparaître à la légère. La délivrance d'injonctions nécessite de recourir à des mesures de coercition et elle est susceptible d'entraîner l'application de sanctions pénales »[4].

Les Chambres ont tenu compte de facteurs tels que la précision avec laquelle le témoignage éventuel a été identifié et le point de savoir si les renseignements recherchés pouvaient être obtenus par d'autres moyens[5].

(ii) Application

(a) Kofi Annan et Iqbal Riza

4. La Défense fait valoir qu'en tant que responsables en 1994 du Département des opérations de maintien de la paix, MM. Annan et Riza ont des informations pertinentes par rapport au procès. Ils peuvent expliquer les circonstances qui entouraient l'échange de lettres et messages entre les responsables de la MINUAR au Rwanda et le Département des opérations de maintien de la paix [le « Département »] à New York, lettres et messages dont la plupart ont déjà été admis en preuve et à propos desquels le général Roméo Dallaire et le commandant Brent Beardsley, entre autres, ont déposé. La Défense entend prouver que le Département ne possédait aucune information donnant à penser, comme l'indique l'acte d'accusation, qu'il existait, dans les mois ayant précédé avril 1994, un plan ou une entente en vue de commettre le génocide. Les témoignages de M. Annan et de M. Riza pourraient porter sur ce qu'ils ont appris du général Dallaire et d'autres responsables, sur les différentes questions énumérées dans la requête, et sur la façon dont ils comprenaient les évènements à partir de ces informations[6].

5. L'observation directe des faits par le témoin est un critère important lorsqu'il s'agit de déterminer s'il y a lieu de lui adresser une citation à comparaître. Tous les témoins qui ont reçu de telles citations en l'espèce ont pu observer personnellement le comportement des accusés ou de leurs subordonnés[7]. La Défense tente de présenter MM. Annan et Riza comme « des témoins oculaires ou des acteurs des évènements » [traduction], mais leur témoignage éventuel porterait sur des informations qu'ils ont reçues des responsables de la MINUAR au Rwanda et peut-être d'autres sources. Pour la Défense, ils sont « les seuls à pouvoir expliquer les circonstances décrites » [traduction] dans les différents mémorandums, télécopies et télégrammes chiffrés échangés entre la MINUAR et le Département a New york[8].

6. La Chambre ne considère pas MM. Annan et Riza comme des témoins oculaires. La Défense reste devoir établir que l'un ou l'autre d'entre eux pourrait fonder son témoignage sur une observation directe des faits. Certes, M. Riza se serait rendu au Rwanda en mai ou juin 1994, mais la Défense ne donne pas à entendre qu'elle souhaite l'interroger au sujet de cette visite[9]. En revanche, la présente Chambre a entendu plusieurs membres de la MINUAR qui se trouvaient sur place au Rwanda à l'époque des faits, à savoir Jacques Roger Booh-Booh, le général Dallaire, le commandant Beardsley, le lieutenant-colonel Frank Claeys, le colonel Joseph Dewez, le commandant Donald MacNeil, le colonel Aouilli Tchemi Tchambi, le commandant Petrus Maggen, le major Robert Van Putten et le lieutenant-colonel Babacar El Hadj Faye. En réalité, les télégrammes chiffrés envoyés au siège de l'ONU à New York faisaient état des observations de ces témoins directs et d'autres responsables de la MINUAR en poste à Kigali à l'époque. Comparées à ces témoignages directs et de première main, les impressions des destinataires de ces rapports au Siège de l'organisation auraient une valeur limitée. Elles ne constituent donc pas des renseignements nécessaires aux fins de la conduite et de l'équité du procès.

7. Le point de vue du Département, en tant que dépositaire central des documents de la MINUAR, peut présenter un intérêt certain sous un rapport particulier, et la Défense entend faire confirmer aux témoins du Département que rien ne leur permettait de croire à l'existence d'une entente ou d'un plan visant à commettre le génocide dans la période qui a précédé le mois d'avril 1994. Toutefois, les documents déjà communiqués à la Défense par le Département, dont beaucoup ont été admis comme pièces à conviction sans que leur authenticité soit contestée, permettent, dans une large mesure, de se faire une meilleure idée des informations que le Département avait à l'époque. Dans la mesure où une confirmation supplémentaire s'avérerait nécessaire de la part des témoins, le Bureau des affaires juridiques reste disposé à coopérer avec la Défense de Ntabakuze en rédigeant une déclaration en lieu et place d'un témoignage oral[10]. Compte tenu de cette coopération qui se poursuit et de la nature des informations recherchées, la Chambre estime que la première des conditions auxquelles est subordonnée la délivrance d'une citation à comparaître, à savoir que toutes les démarches raisonnables doivent avoir été entreprises pour obtenir la coopération volontaire du témoin, n'est pas remplie. Elle ne voit donc pas la nécessité d'examiner plus avant si les informations recherchées sont suffisamment importantes pour remplir les deuxième et troisième conditions.

8. Dans ces conditions, la Chambre ne délivrera pas d'injonction à adresser que ce soit à M. Aman ou à M. Riza.

(b) Shaharyar Khan

9. La Défense demande à la Chambre de délivrer une citation à comparaître comme témoin à adresser à M. Khan, Représentant spécial du Secrétaire général à Kigali de juillet 1994 à mars 1996, relativement à une lettre de 1995 dans laquelle il écrivait que le Département et la MMAR n'avaient nullement été prévenus avant avril 1994 de l'imminence d'un génocide. Par ailleurs, M. Khan aurait dressé durant l'été 1995, la première liste des suspects devant faire l'objet d'enquêtes pour crimes de guerre, et la Défense attache de l'importance au fait que le nom de l'accusé ne figure pas sur cette liste. Enfin, selon la Défense, M. Khan aurait des informations concernant un rapport du HCR [Haut Commissariat des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés] sur les massacres allégués de réfugiés hutus[11].

10. La Chambre considère qu'aucune des informations qu'aurait M. Khan ne justifie la délivrance d'une citation à comparaître. La question que l'on pouvait avoir, à l'époque, de la connaissance d'un plan visant à commettre le génocide a été examinée dans la section précédente à propos des témoins du Département, lesquels sont mieux placés que M. Khan pour éclairer la Chambre. En effet, la Défense n'a pas soutenu que M. Khan avait la moindre connaissance de cette question autre que celle provenant de l'examen à posteriori des documents qui ont déjà été communiqués a la Défense. Le fait que l'accusé ne figure pas sur une liste de suspects dressée par M. Khan en 1995 est une preuve indirecte dont la valeur est limitée et ne justifie pas la délivrance d'une citation à comparaître. Enfin, la pertinence en l'espèce du rapport du HCR a été examinée dans une autre décision, qui a été rendue ce jour[12], et selon laquelle, l'allégation que M. Khan aurait eu connaissance de ce rapport ne peut justifier la délivrance d'une citation à comparaître.

(c) Michael Hourigan

11. Selon la Défense, M. Hourigan, un ancien enquêteur du Bureau du Procureur, pourrait déposer à propos de son enquête sur l'écrasement de l'avion présidentiel abattu dans la nuit du 6 avril 1994[13].

12. L'acte d'accusation n'impute la responsabilité de l'attentat contre l'avion présidentiel à aucun des accusés ou de ceux avec lesquels ils se seraient entendus. Le paragraphe [6.1] se borne à cette formulation neutre :

> « Le 6 avril 1994, vers 20 h 30, l'avion ayant à son bord, entre autres passagers, le Président Juvénal Habyarimana, Président de la République rwandaise, a été abattu peu avant son atterrissage à l'aéroport de Kigali, Rwanda ».

Cet évènement est considéré comme le fait qui a déclenché les massacres qui ont suivi, mais à la différence de ce qui est dit dans d'autres passages de l'acte d'accusation, aucune participation des accusés n'y est alléguée, pas plus que le Procureur n'a produit, lors de la présentation des moyens à charge, des éléments de preuve établissant la responsabilité des accusés dans cet assassinat. La seule allusion à pareille responsabilité a été faite par le Procureur durant le contre-interrogatoire de l'accusé Bagosora auquel il a demandé de but en blanc s'il avait pris part à l'attentat contre l'avion présidentiel. Il a précisé par la suite dans sa réponse à une requête distincte déposée par la Défense de Bagosora, que sa question visait uniquement à contester la crédibilité du témoin, celui-ci ayant lui-même soulevé durant l'interrogatoire principal le problème de la responsabilité de l'attentat. Le Procureur n'a pas laissé entendre, comme il l'a, du reste, expressément déclaré, qu'il tenait les accusés pénalement responsables de l'assassinat du président[14].

13. Aucune charge n'a été portée contre les accusés relativement à l'attentat contre l'avion présidentiel, mais la Défense soutient que la question de la responsabilité de cet attentat est néanmoins pertinente en l'espèce. À ses yeux, l'assassinat du Président Habyarimana a été

14. La pertinence en droit, en tant que norme régissant l'admission d'éléments de preuve, est définie en ces termes par l'article 89 (C) du Règlement de procédure et de preuve : « La Chambre peut recevoir tout élément de preuve pertinent dont elle estime qu'il a valeur probante ».

Cet article implique les trois critères que voici :

> En premier lieu, l'élément de preuve doit d'une certaine manière se rattacher à un élément constitutif d'un crime imputé à l'accusé. En deuxième lieu, l'élément de preuve doit revêtir une certaine valeur pour établir les éléments constitutifs d'un crime imputé à un accusé. En faisant mention et de la « valeur probante » et du fait que la Chambre doit « estime[r] » que l'élément de preuve à cette qualité, l'article donne à entendre que la valeur probante est un obstacle d'une nature différente et plus complexe que la pertinence. En troisième lieu, même lorsque ces trois critères sont réunis, l'article n'impose pas à la Chambre de recevoir un tel élément de preuve, mais dispose seulement qu'elle peut le faire. [par. 4] [14] Réponse du Procureur à la requête intitulée, Bagosora Defence Urgent Motion for Investigation and Production of (Additional) Evidence ..., etc., déposée le 19 décembre 2005.

[15] Requête, par. 22.

> La valeur probante ... a été décrite tout simplement comme « un élément qui tend à prouver un point litigieux » et se confond parfois avec la notion de pertinence : « Pour qu'un fait soit pertinent par rapport à un autre, il doit exister entre eux une connexion ou un lien qui permette d'inférer l'existence de l'un de celle de l'autre. Un fait n'est pas pertinent vis-à-vis d'un autre s'il n'a pas de valeur probante réelle vis-à-vis de ce dernier ». [par. 15]
> La pertinence, la valeur probante et même le préjudice sont autant de notions apparentées. La teneur des faits allégués doit être définie et ensuite évaluée par rapport à leur valeur éventuelle en tant que preuve de l'existence d'un crime tel qu'il est décrit dans l'acte d'accusation. La nature de cette évaluation explique le pouvoir d'appréciation que l'article 89 (C) du Règlement confère à la Chambre de première instance[16] [par. 18]

La Défense soutient que le FPR est responsable de l'attentat contre l'avion présidentiel abattu dans la nuit du 6 avril 1994. La question qui se pose est de savoir si ce fait, même s'il était avéré, pourrait aider à contester la réalité d'un quelconque des éléments constitutifs d'un quelconque des crimes imputés à l'accusé en l'espèce.

15. L'accusation d'entente portée contre les accusés ne concerne pas l'attentat du 6 avril 1994 contre l'avion présidentiel. Dans sa décision relative aux requêtes en acquittement formées par la Défense après la présentation des moyens à charge, la Chambre a ainsi résumé la nature de cette accusation :

> Le Procureur affirme que les relations que les accusés entretenaient entre eux au sein de l'armée en tant qu'officiers supérieurs plantent le décor de ce qui semble être une série d'actions coordonnées, voire communes : adoption de la définition de l'ennemi, définition dont on peut penser qu'elle a pris pour cibles les civils tutsis; le fait que les accusés ont propagé cette définition à travers les rangs de l'armée; le fait que les quatre accusés aient fort curieusement répété cette définition à différentes occasions; soutien apporté aux Interahamwe en utilisant les ressources de l'armée; enfin, témoignages directs selon lesquels certains des accusés se sont trouvés ensemble à diverses occasions au cours d'un ou plusieurs, faits – discours, établissement des listes, ordre de tuer – autant d'actes qui ont sans doute encouragé la commission du génocide[17] .

Le fait, à supposer qu'il soit établi, que d'autres que l'accusé ou ceux qui se seraient entendus avec lui aient participé à l'attentat contre l'avion présidentiel ne rend pas moins vraisemblable aucune de ces allégations.

16. Pareillement, la responsabilité de l'assassinat du Président Habyarimana n'a aucun rapport avec les infractions qui auraient été commises par l'accusé et ses subordonnés après le 6 avril 1994. La culpabilité des auteurs de ces crimes ne saurait être atténuée au motif qu'une personne autre que l'accusé a créé les conditions qui ont conduit à la commission desdits crimes. Dans un cas similaire, la présente Chambre s'est exprimée dans les termes que voici :

> Des descriptions de crimes commis par les troupes du FPR contre la population civile dans des régions éloignées des combats opposant les deux armées en 1994 ne sauraient laisser croire à l'innocence des accusés ou atténuer leur culpabilité. L'impact de ces faits sur le comportement criminel de l'accusé est trop vague et indirect. La Défense n'a pas établi que cet élément d'information pourrait contribuer à réfuter la réalité d'un quelconque des éléments constitutifs des infractions imputées aux accusés, ni en quoi il pourrait légitimement excuser ou justifier leur comportement[18] [traduction].

Ceci dit, la Défense a parfaitement le droit de faire des offres de preuve concernant le conflit armé avec le FPR, le poids relatif des forces en présence et les circonstances qui ont entouré la commission des crimes imputés à l'accusé.

17. L'identité des assassins du Président Habyarimana est incontestablement une question qui a son importance pour comprendre le contexte des évènements décrits dans l'acte d'accusation dressé contre l'accusé. Sur cette base, la Chambre a admis certains éléments de preuve qui s'y rapportent. Parallèlement, la Chambre doit exercer le pouvoir d'appréciation que lui reconnaît l'article 89 (C) du Règlement afin de veiller à maintenir le cap en l'espèce. L'admission d'éléments de preuve détaillés portant sur ce qui relève essentiellement de la pertinence indirecte et secondaire n'est pas susceptible d'aider la Chambre à se prononcer sur les questions qui sont au cœur même de l'affaire.

18. La Défense n'a pas établi que le témoin éventuel possédait des renseignements qui apporteraient une aide sensible à la cause de la Défense sur des questions précisément identifiées et qui seront débattues au procès ou que la déposition du témoin était nécessaire aux fins de la conduite et de l'équité du procès[19]. Aucune citation à comparaître ne sera donc adressée à M. Hourigan.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LE TRIBUNAL

REJETTE la requête.

STATUE sur la requête.

Introduction

1. La Défense de Ntabakuze demande à la Chambre : (i) d'enjoindre au Procureur, en vertu de l'article 68 (A) du Règlement de procédure et de preuve (le « Règlement »), d'obtenir du Haut Commissariat des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés (le « HCR ») des rapports « relatifs aux événements survenus au Rwanda en 1994 [traduction] », notamment ceux établis par un fonctionnaire du HCR nommé Robert Gersony, et (ii) d'enjoindre au HCR, en vertu de l'article 28 du Statut, de lui permettre d'avoir un entretien avec M. Gersony en vue de l'appeler à la barre[1]. Subsidiairement, elle prie la Chambre d'adresser à celui-ci une injonction de comparaître lui prescrivant de rencontrer la Défense de Ntabakuze, de communiquer les documents du HCR en question et de comparaître devant la Chambre[2].

2. Le Procureur répond qu'il a déjà communiqué à la Défense un document du HCR intitulé « Summary of UNHCR Presentation Before Commission of Experts, 10 October 1994 »[3].

Délibération

(i) Demande de communication d'éléments de preuve à décharge en vertu de l'article 68 (A) du Règlement

3. Selon l'article 68 (A) du Règlement, le Procureur a l'obligation de communiquer

[1] Requête spécifique, p. 11 et 12 ; Requête générale, p. 7.
[2] Requête spécifique, p. 12.
[3] Réponse du Procureur, par. 3 (c).

« tous les éléments dont il sait effectivement qu'ils sont de nature à disculper en tout ou en partie l'accusé ou à porter atteinte à la crédibilité de ses éléments de preuve à charge ».

D'après la jurisprudence constante de la Chambre d'appel, pour que le Procureur « sa[che] effectivement », il faut qu'il soit en possession de l'information recherchée[4]. Les dispositions de l'article 68 n'autorisent pas à contraindre le Procureur à examiner et à obtenir des informations d'autres sources[5]. Rien n'oblige donc celui-ci à faire des recherches auprès du HCR et à obtenir de cette institution, ou de toute autre source, des éléments de preuve à décharge.

4. Le Procureur affirme avoir communiqué à la Défense un document du HCR, donnant ainsi à entendre qu'il s'est acquitté de toutes ses obligations au titre de l'article 68. Il est présumé s'en être acquitté de bonne foi[6]. À défaut de preuve contraire, la requête est rejetée.

(ii) Ordonnance adressée au HCR en vertu de l'article 28 du Statut

5. L'article 28 du Statut fait obligation aux États de

Une demande d'assistance telle que celle sollicitée par la Défense peut être adressée aussi bien à une organisation internationale qu'à des États particuliers[7]. De fait, le HCR a, par le passé, fait l'objet de plusieurs ordonnances similaires émanant du Tribunal de céans[8].

[7] Affaire Blaskić, Arrêt relatif à la requête de la République de Croatie aux fins d'examen de la décision de la Chambre de première instance II rendue le 18 juillet 1997, 29 octobre 1997, par. 50, note de bas de page 68 (où il est dit qu'une injonction de produire ne devrait pas être adressée au responsable d'une organisation internationale dans le but d'obtenir un document de ladite organisation ; « [i]l semblerait plus judicieux de s'adresser à l'organisation internationale au nom de laquelle [celui-ci] devait produire le document ») ; affaire Karemera et consorts, Décision relative à la requête de la Défense aux fins de faire injonction au Département des Opérations de maintien de la paix des Nations Unies de produire certains documents (Chambre de première instance), 9 mars 2004, par. 9 à 19 ; affaire Simić et consorts, Décision relative à la requête aux fins d'assistance judiciaire de la part de la SFOR et d'autres entités (Chambre de première instance), par. 46 à 49.

6. Pour que la Chambre rende une ordonnance sur le fondement de l'article 28 du Statut, trois conditions doivent être réunies : (i) il faut déterminer avec un degré raisonnable de précision la nature des informations recherchées ; (ii) il faut démontrer que ces informations sont pertinentes par rapport au procès ; (iii) il faut établir que des efforts raisonnables ont été faits pour obtenir les informations sans l'intervention de la Chambre[9]. Selon la deuxième condition, celle de la pertinence, le demandeur doit démontrer que les informations recherchées sont pertinentes pour la question dont le juge, ou la Chambre de première instance, est saisi et qu'elles sont nécessaires à un règlement équitable de celle-ci[10].

7. La Défense demande que soit délivrée une injonction lui permettant d'interroger Robert Gersony[11]. On peut supposer, bien que ce ne soit pas explicite, qu'elle demande aussi communication de tous rapports ou documents établis par M. Gersony et ses collègues. Celui-ci aurait connaissance de massacres de civils hutus perpétrés « par le FPR pendant l'invasion, et [du fait] que ces massacres participaient d'une politique délibérée [traduction] »[12]. La Défense affirme que le « FPR est responsable de massacres de civils qui ont été perpétrés dans l'est du pays et dont la responsabilité est attribuée à l'accusé [traduction] »[13]. Plus généralement, elle soutient que :

> Dans la mesure où l'on peut démontrer que les massacres pour lesquels le Procureur entend retenir la responsabilité de l'accusé n'ont pas été perpétrés ou ont résulté, directement ou indirectement, d'une stratégie de guerre délibérée du FPR, la responsabilité potentielle de l'accusé s'en trouve atténuée sur tous les plans, notamment en ce qui concerne l'entente en vue de commettre le génocide, la planification, les crimes de guerre, etc. [traduction][14].

8. Les documents présentés par la Défense donnent à penser que M. Gersony ne se trouvait pas au Rwanda avant août 1994. Ses enquêtes semblent n'avoir porté que sur le traitement des réfugiés hutus lorsque ceux-ci rentraient chez eux, au lendemain de la guerre entre les forces gouvernementales et le

[10] D'une instance à l'autre, la question de la pertinence n'a pas toujours été formulée exactement dans les mêmes termes. Certaines décisions, en particulier lorsque la pertinence des informations recherchées est évidente, se contentent de rappeler que le demandeur doit indiquer sa « pertinence par rapport à l'espèce ». Affaire Ndindiliyimana et consorts, Décision relative à la requête de Nzuwonemeye intitulée Motion Requesting the Cooperation from the Government of Ghana Pursuant to Article 28 of the Statute (Chambre de première instance), 13 février 2006, par. 6 ; affaire Bagosora et consorts, Demande de coopération et d'assistance adressée à la République française en vertu de l'article 28 du Statut (Chambre de première instance), 22 octobre 2004, par. 3. Toutefois, lorsque la pertinence des informations est contestée, il doit être démontré que celles-ci sont « pertinentes à la question dont le juge, ou la Chambre de première instance, est saisi et qu'elles sont nécessaires à un règlement équitable » de celle-ci. Affaire Karemera et consorts, Décision relative à la requête de Joseph Nzirorera aux fins de solliciter la coopération d'un gouvernement (Chambre de première instance), 19 avril 2005, par. 8. Ces termes reflètent le critère consacré à l'article 54 bis du Règlement de procédure et de preuve du TPIY, qui prévoit précisément les conditions et les modalités de délivrance d'ordonnances aux États en vertu de l'article 29 du Statut du TPIY. La Chambre estime que ce critère est approprié. La condition selon laquelle l'information recherchée doit être « nécessaire à un règlement équitable » de la question dont la Chambre est saisie, témoigne du souci légitime d'éviter que les États et les organisations internationales soient assaillis de nombreuses demandes d'informations au seul motif que les informations recherchées sont pertinentes, critère susceptible d'ouvrir indûment la porte à d'innombrables requêtes. Par ailleurs, il s'agit là d'un domaine où il serait souhaitable que les tribunaux internationaux appliquent le même critère.

Front patriotique rwandais[15]. En l'occurrence, l'argument de la Défense selon lequel les massacres « dont la responsabilité est attribuée à l'accusé » font partie des faits dont M. Gersony a connaissance, est surprenant. Tout indique au contraire que les informations en la possession de M. Gersony concernent des événements survenus après le départ de toutes les troupes que l'accusé pouvait avoir sous son commandement. À cet égard, la Chambre rappelle la décision qu'elle a rendue précédemment au sujet d'informations détenues par le Procureur, relatives à la conduite présumée du FPR :

> La description des crimes commis contre des civils par le FPR, dans des zones géographiques physiquement éloignées du théâtre des combats entre les forces armées adverses en 1994, ne sont pas de nature à disculper en tout ou en partie les accusés. L'impact de tels faits sur le comportement criminel reproché à ceux-ci est trop lointain et indirect. La Défense n'a pas démontré que de telles informations aideraient à réfuter l'un quelconque des éléments constitutifs des crimes qui leur sont imputés, ni indiqué dans quelle mesure elles pourraient constituer une excuse ou une justification valable pour les actes qui leur sont reprochés. De l'avis de la Chambre, les différentes utilisations que l'on peut faire de ces informations, telles que proposées par la Défense, ne sont pas disculpatoires [traduction][16].

Invoquer d'une manière générale la pertinence ne suffit pas à justifier la délivrance d'une ordonnance au titre de l'article 28 du Statut. Si la Défense ne peut établir expressément dans quelle mesure des aspects quelconques des informations détenues par M. Gersony se rapportent aux questions en litige en l'espèce et sont, par ailleurs, « nécessaires à un règlement équitable » de ces questions, le critère de la pertinence n'aura pas été satisfait. Aucune ordonnance n'est alors justifiée en vertu de l'article 28.

(iii) Demande de délivrance d'une injonction de comparaître adressée à M. Gersony

9. Celui qui demande la délivrance d'une injonction de comparaître doit démontrer (i) que des efforts raisonnables ont été faits pour obtenir la coopération volontaire du témoin, (ii) que la déposition du témoin apportera une aide sensible à sa cause sur des questions précisément identifiées, et (iii) que la déposition du témoin est nécessaire et pertinente pour la conduite et l'équité du procès[17]. Pour les motifs exposés dans le paragraphe précédent, ni la deuxième, ni la troisième condition ne sont satisfaites.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

REJETTE la requête.

LE TRIBUNAL PÉNAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA,

SIÉGEANT en la Chambre de première instance I, composée des juges Erik Møse, Président, Jai Ram Reddy et Sergei Alekseevich Egorov, SAISI de la requête intitulée « Motion to Request the Testimony of Witnesses YUL-39 and LA.-23 to be Heard Via Video-Link and the Entireîy of the Testimony of Witness LAX-23 in Closed Session », déposée par la Défense de Kabiligi le 12 octobre 2006,

STATUE sur ladite requête.

Introduction

1. La Défense de Kabiligi demande que le témoin WL-39 et le témoin LAX-23 soient autorisés à déposer par vidéoconférence. Les deux témoins craignent de compromettre leur sécurité en quittant le pays où ils résident actuellement, car ils étaient tous deux des personnalités en vue de l'ancien Gouvernement rwandais. Ils croient qu'ils s'exposent à être arrêtés en cours de route ou qu'ils pourraient être pris pour cible par des tueurs.

Délibération

2. La déposition par vidéoconférence peut être ordonnée conformément à l'article 54 du Règlement de procédure et de preuve [le « Règlement »], au motif que l'intérêt de la justice le commande, ou comme une mesure de protection du témoin prise en vertu de l'article 75, qui exige que la vidéoconférence soit « nécessaire pour protéger [...] la sécurité du témoin »[1]. Pour déterminer si le recueil de la déposition d'un témoin par vidéoconférence est dans l'intérêt de la justice et rendre une ordonnance en vertu de l'article 54 du Règlement, il faut tenir compte de trois facteurs : l'importance de la déposition, l'incapacité pour le témoin de comparaître ou son refus de le faire, et la raison qui aura été avancée pour justifier ce refus ou cette incapacité[2]. Il n'est pas absolument nécessaire de justifier le refus de manière objective, mais il faut à tout le moins établir que le témoin se fonde sur des motifs crédibles et que ceux-ci sont sincères[3].

3. Le témoin WL-39 refuse de se rendre à Arusha au motif qu'il pourrait faire l'objet d'un mandat d'arrêt international délivré sur l'ordre du Gouvernement rwandais. Il croit qu'il risque d'être arrêté sur le territoire d'un pays par lequel il serait obligé de transiter pour se rendre en Tanzanie à partir du pays où il réside actuellement. Les documents figurant dans l'annexe confidentielle unilatérale jointe à la requête établissent non seulement que le témoin redoute sincèrement cette possibilité, mais aussi que cette crainte pourrait être fondée. Le témoin serait en mesure de décrire les attributions et fonctions du bureau du G3, et de contredire directement la déposition du témoin à charge XXQ en ce qui concerne les événements de Ruhengeri.

4. Le témoin LAX-23 occupait un poste important dans l'administration sous l'ancien Gouvernement rwandais. Selon la requête, il est persuadé que son nom figure sur une liste de personnes à assassiner. La liste en question comporte le nom d'au moins une personne qui aurait été assassinée au Kenya en 1998[4]. Le témoin connaîtrait de première main la date du retour de l'accusé au Rwanda en avril 1994 et peut, de ce fait, fournir des éléments de preuve importants à l'appui de l'alibi invoqué par l'accusé.

5. La Défense a établi que les deux témoins refusent de se rendre à Arusha parce qu'ils éprouvent des craintes sincères. La Chambre aurait préféré disposer de preuves plus directes concernant l'état d'esprit du témoin LAX-23, mais elle accepte, en l'espèce, que les assertions contenues dans la requête de la Défense traduisent fidèlement l'état d'esprit des deux témoins. Tous deux semblent en mesure de faire, sur des questions bien définies, des dépositions susceptibles de disculper l'accusé. La Chambre conclut donc qu'il est dans l'intérêt de la justice de leur permettre de déposer par vidéoconférence.

[4] Requête de la Défense, par. 26.

6. En général, les demandes aux fins d'entendre entièrement la déposition d'un témoin à huis clos font l'objet d'une décision orale après que la Chambre a eu l'occasion d'entendre le témoin exposer ses craintes[5]. La Chambre a le plus souvent adopté une approche libérale face à de telles préoccupations et se montre prudente lorsqu'il s'agit de protéger l'identité des témoins[6]. Elle ne statuera donc pas sur le point de savoir s'il y a lieu d'entendre entièrement la déposition du témoin LAX-23 à huis clos avant d'avoir eu l'occasion de l'entendre à ce sujet au début de sa déposition.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

AUTORISE le recueil des dépositions des témoins YUL-39 et LAX-23 par voie de vidéoconférence ;

CHARGE le Greffe de prendre, en concertation avec les parties, toutes les dispositions nécessaires pour le recueil de ces dépositions par voie de vidéoconférence et d'enregistrer celles-ci sur vidéocassette pour que, le cas échéant, la Chambre puisse s'y référer ;

REJETTE, au motif qu'elle est prématurée, la demande faite par la Défense d'entendre l'intégralité de la déposition du témoin LAX-23 à huis clos.

LE TRIBUNAL PÉNAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA,

SIÉGEANT en la Chambre de première instance I, composée des juges Erik Møse, Président, Jai Ram Reddy et Sergei Alekseevich Egorov (la « Chambre »),

SAISI de la requête de la Défense de Bagosora intitulée Request for Trial Chamber to Order the Government of Tanzania to Cooperate and for Subpoena for Ambassador Mpungwe, déposée le 29 septembre 2006,

VU les écritures de la Défense de Bagosora intitulées Submissions in Support, déposées le 12 octobre 2006,

STATUE sur la requête.

1. La Défense de Bagosora demande qu'une citation à comparaître comme témoin soit adressée à Ami R. Mpungwe, ancien haut fonctionnaire tanzanien qui est intervenu comme facilitateur lors de la négociation des Accords d'Arusha en 1992 et 1993.

2. Celui qui demande la délivrance d'une telle citation doit démontrer que les trois conditions suivantes sont remplies : (i) des efforts raisonnables ont été faits pour obtenir la coopération volontaire du témoin ; (ii) les renseignements dont dispose le témoin éventuel apporteront une aide sensible à sa cause sur des questions précisément identifiées et qui seront débattues au procès ; (iii) la déposition du témoin est nécessaire et pertinente pour la conduite et l'équité du procès[1].

3. La Défense a déjà saisi la présente Chambre d'une requête, déposée le 7 juillet 2006, pour lui demander d'adresser une injonction à M. Mpungwe aux fins d'un entretien avec la Défense et d'inviter le Gouvernement tanzanien à faciliter le déroulement de cette rencontre. Dans sa décision datée du 29 août 2006, la Chambre a estimé que les deuxième et troisième conditions [visées au paragraphe 2 ci-dessus] étaient réunies :

> [D]es motifs valables donnant à penser que M. Mpungwe pourrait disposer d'informations concernant l'attitude du colonel Bagosora aux pourparlers de paix d'Arusha, attitude au sujet de laquelle la Chambre a recueilli des témoignages directs qui sont susceptibles d'incriminer l'accusé. En outre, ces éléments de preuve ont trait à des allégations précises portées au paragraphe 5.10 de l'acte d'accusation, selon lesquelles l'accusé « a manifesté ostensiblement son opposition aux concessions faites par le représentant du Gouvernement [...] au point de quitter la table des négociations. Le Colonel Théoneste Bagosora a quitté Arusha en déclarant qu'il rentrait au Rwanda pour « préparer l'apocalypse ». La Défense a des raisons sérieuses de croire que l'Ambassadeur Mpungwe dispose peut-être d'informations qui pourraient se rapporter directement à ces allégations[2].

4. La Chambre a cependant refusé de faire droit à la requête, au motif que des efforts raisonnables pour obtenir la coopération du témoin pouvaient encore être déployés. La Défense, appuyée par le Greffe, a certes entrepris à partir du 28 avril 2006[3], de nombreuses démarches pour organiser une rencontre avec M. Mpungwe, mais celles-ci semblent n'avoir pas abouti parce que le témoin croyait en toute bonne foi qu'il devait être autorisé par son Gouvernement à s'entretenir avec la Défense :

> [M. Mpungwe] semble disposé à s'entretenir de son plein gré avec la Défense de Bagasora, à condition que le Gouvemement tanzanien l'y autorise. La Chambre relève néanmoins que cet entretien devrait avoir lieu le plus tôt possible. Le procès en est à sa phase finale, et la Défense doit avoir une possibilité raisonnable d'évaluer la nature des éléments d'information dont dispose M. Mpungwe pour pouvoir, le cas échéant, le citer à la barre[4].

5. La Chambre avait précisé que l'entretien devait avoir lieu « le plus tôt possible »[5], mais il a fallu encore attendre jusqu'au 5 octobre 2006, soit cinq semaines plus tard. Le 11 octobre 2006, la Défense ayant demandé une réponse à des questions écrites supplémentaires, l'avocat de M. Mpungwe a dit que c'était exclu. Le lendemain, la Défense a demandé, par l'intermédiaire dudit avocat, que M. Mpungwe comparaisse sans délai devant la Chambre, et elle a déposé la présente requête[6]. A s'en tenir au calendrier du procès, la présentation des moyens de la Défense de Bagosora devait s'achever le 13 octobre 2006, la fin du procès étant fixée au 13 décembre 2006.

6. La Chambre estime que la Défense a fourni des efforts raisonnables pour amener M. Mpungwe à coopérer de son plein gré et qu'il s'impose à présent de citer celui-ci à comparaître pour qu'il puisse être entendu en temps utile. Les retards importants enregistrés ne sont pas le fait de la Défense, car elle semble avoir fait preuve de diligence pour obtenir la déposition du témoin avant la date butoir de la fin de la présentation de ses moyens. Le procès étant près de se terminer et compte tenu de la longue histoire des retards susmentionnée, une citation à comparaître est désormais indispensable pour s'assurer que M. Mpungwe dépose durant la prochaine session du procès.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

FAIT DROIT à la requête ;

INVITE le Greffier à établir, conformément à la présente décision, une citation à comparaître comme témoin en l'espèce à adresser à M. Ami R. Mpungwe ;

INVITE le Greffier à faire tenir à M. Mpungwe, par la voie diplomatique, cette citation à comparaître accompagnée d'une copie certifiée conforme de la présente Décision.

LE TRIBUNAL PÉNAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA,

SIÉGEANT en la Chambre de première instance I, composée des juges Erik Møse, Président, Jai Ram Reddy et Sergei Alekseevich Egorov (la « Chambre »),

SAISITe la Requête de la défense de Théoneste Bagosora en vue d'obtenir la Coopération de la République Française afin qu'elle autorise et permette la comparution du colonel Maurin, déposée le 13 décembre 2005 par la Défense de Bagosora, VU les conclusions intitulées « Submissions » et le Mémoire Additionnel, déposés par la Défense de Bagosora respectivement les 21 septembre et 16 octobre 2006,

STATUE sur la requête.

Introduction

1. La Défense de Bagosora souhaite citer à la barre un officier français qui se trouvait au Rwanda pendant que s'y déroulaient certains des événements décrits dans l'acte d'accusation. Elle demande à la Chambre de rendre une ordonnance demandant au Gouvernement français d'autoriser le témoin à comparaître. Depuis le dépôt de la requête à la fin 2005, la Défense a interrogé cet officier à deux reprises, avec le consentement et la coopération des autorités françaises. La France a aussi annoncé qu'elle était disposée à autoriser l'officier à déposer à certaines conditions, dont certaines ont été rejetées par la Défense de Bagosora[1].

Délibération

> « collabore[r] avec le Tribunal pénal international pour le Rwanda à la recherche et au jugement des personnes accusées d'avoir commis des violations graves du droit international humanitaire ».

Pour que la Chambre rende une telle ordonnance, trois conditions doivent être réunies, à savoir : (i) il faut déterminer avec un degré raisonnable de précision la nature des informations recherchées ; (ii) il faut démontrer que ces informations sont pertinentes au procès ; (iii) il faut établir que des efforts raisonnables ont été faits pour obtenir les informations sans l'intervention de la chambre[2]. Selon la deuxième condition, le demandeur doit démontrer que les informations sont pertinentes à la question dont le juge, ou la Chambre de première instance, est saisi et qu'elles sont nécessaires à un règlement équitable de la cause[3]. Une condition similaire est mise à la délivrance d'une citation à

[1] Mémoire additionnel, par. 35

[2] Bagosora et consorts, Request to the Government of Rwanda for Cooperation and Assistance Pursuant to Article 28 of the Statute, Chambre de première instance, 10 mars 2004.

[3] La question de la pertinence n'a pas toujours été formulée exactement dans les mêmes termes d'une affaire à l'autre. Certaines décisions, en particulier quand la pertinence des informations est évidente, se bornent à dire que le demandeur doit articuler la « pertinence de sa demande par rapport à l'espèce ». Voir Ndindiliyimana et consorts, Décision relative à la requête de Nzuwonomeye intitulée Motion Requesting Cooperation From the Government of Ghana Pursuant to Article 28 of the Statute, Chambre de première instance, 13 février 2006, par. 6 ; voir aussi Bagosora et consorts, Demande de coopération et d'assistance adressée à la République Française en vertu de l'article 28 du Statut, Chambre de première instance, 22 octobre 2004, par. 3. Toutefois, lorsque la pertinence est contestée, il faut déterminer que non seulement « l'information recherchée intéresse ou non une question quelconque dont la Chambre est saisie », mais en outre qu'elle est comparaître ; dans ce contexte, la Chambre examine si l'information recherchée peut être obtenue « autrement qu'en entendant un témoin potentiel »[4] [traduction].

3. La Défense affirme que le témoin potentiel peut déposer à partir de la connaissance qu'il a des Forces armées rwandaises et des événements survenus à Kigali en 1994. Il se serait, en particulier, trouvé à l'état-major la nuit du 6 au 7 avril 1994[5].

4. Comme indiqué plus haut, le témoin potentiel s'est entretenu avec la Défense à deux reprises ; à la suite d'un de ces entretiens, il a répondu par écrit à des questions de la Défense. Ces réponses, qui ont été communiquées à la Chambre et à la Défense, font apparaître que le témoin n'a qu'une connaissance limitée de l'accusé[6]. Il semble avoir rencontré l'accusé en deux occasions banales, en 1992 et 1993. La nuit du 6 au 7 avril 1994, il a vu Bagosora à l'état-major, mais ne semble pas l'avoir entendu tenir des propos de fond. Il l'a rencontré à nouveau lors de deux brèves réunions, d'abord le 7 avril, en présence d'une autre personnalité française ; ensuite, le 9 avril 1994. Le témoin se souvient de la teneur des demandes que lui-même et ses collègues ont faites lors de ces deux réunions, mais il ne paraît guère se souvenir de la réponse ou de l'attitude du colonel Bagosora[7] .

5. Les réponses écrites du témoin potentiel traduisent une connaissance générale des Forces armées rwandaises et des événements survenus à Kigali entre le 7 et le 14 avril 1994. Toutefois, la Chambre n'estime pas que sa déposition à cet égard s'impose et est nécessaire à la conduite et à l'équité du procès. Elle a déjà entendu les dépositions détaillées de témoins des deux parties sur ces questions générales. Par ailleurs, si les circonstances le justifient, la Chambre peut examiner des déclarations écrites qui ne concernent pas les actes et le comportement de l'accusé, sans devoir nécessairement exiger la comparution du témoin[8]. Étant donné le caractère général que revêtirait la déposition, la portée pléonastique de la déposition par rapport aux témoignages déjà entendus, et les autres formes sous lesquelles elle pourrait être admise, la Chambre ne saurait conclure que la comparution du témoin s'impose et est nécessaire à la conduite du procès.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

REJETTE la requête.

«nécessaire pour que la Chambre puisse statuer équitablement » sur cette question. Voir Karemera et consorts, Décision relative à la requête de Joseph Nzirorera aux fins de solliciter la coopération d'un gouvernement, Chambre de première instance, 19 avril 2005, par. 8. Cette formulation traduit bien la norme énoncée à l'article 54 bis du Règlement du TPIY, lequel traite précisément des conditions et modalités de délivrance par la Chambre d'une ordonnance à un Etat en vertu de l'article 29 du Statut du TPIY. La présente Chambre considère que cette norme est appropriée. En exigeant en outre que les informations soient « nécessaires « au règlement équitable» de la question dont la Chambre est saisie, le Règlement du TPIY exprime le souci réel d'éviter que les Etats et les organisations internationales ne soient submergés par un flot de demandes d'information fondées uniquement sur la pertinence, car, à lui seul, ce critère risque, selon l'expression courante, de « ratisser trop large ». De plus, on se trouve ici dans un domaine où une norme commune aux tribunaux internationaux s'avère souhaitable.

LE TRIBUNAL PÉNAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA,

SIEGEANT en la Chambre de première instance I, composée des juges Erik Møse, Président, Jai Ram Reddy et Sergei Alekseevich Egorov,

SAISI de la Requête de la Défense de Bagosora visant la collaboration de l'État du Rwanda, déposée le 28 mars 2006,

VU la lettre de la Défense de Bagosora, déposée de manière unilatérale le 4 octobre 2006,

STATUE sur ladite requête,

Introduction

1. Dans sa Décision du 10 mars 2004, répondant à-une requête de la Défense de Bagosora, la Chambre avait demandé au Gouvernement mandais de déterminer s'il avait en sa possession les pièces énumérées dans l'annexe A de ladite décision et, si tel était le cas, de les transmettre dès que possible au Greffe pour qu'il les communique à la Défense[1]. Celle-ci indique [dans la Requête du 28 mars 20061 que les autorités rwandaises n'ont pas fourni une réponse complète. Par ailleurs, elle dit s'être vainement efforcée d'obtenir d'autres renseignements nécessaires pour la préparation de la défense de l'accusé[2]. Aussi prie-t-elle la Chambre d'amener le Gouvernement rwandais à coopérer.

2. Depuis que la présente requête a été déposée, le Ministère rwandais des affaires étrangères a fourni un complément d'information concernant deux des pièces demandées par la Défense[3]. Par ailleurs, dans sa lettre du 4 octobre 2006, la Défense a fait savoir à la Chambre qu'elle avait reçu d'autres informations de la part du Gouvernement rwandais[4].

Délibération

3. L'article 28 du Statut du Tribunal fait obligation aux États de > « [collaborer] avec le Tribunal international pour le Rwanda à la recherche et au jugement des personnes accusées d'avoir commis des violations graves du droit international humanitaire ».

Toute demande adressée à la Chambre aux fins de délivrance d'une ordonnance au titre de l'article 28 du Statut doit définir la nature de l'information sollicitée, établir la pertinence de cette information par rapport au procès et préciser les démarches qui ont été faites pour obtenir celle-ci. Les demandes d'assistance formulées en vertu de l'article 28 doivent aussi déterminer avec précision la nature de l'aide souhaitée[5].

(i) Pièces dont il est question dans la décision du 10 mars 2004

4. La Chambre a déjà conclu que les pièces dont il était question dans sa décision du 10 mars 2004 avaient été sollicitées en bonne et due forme par la Défense de Bagosora. Celle-ci a obtenu des informations concernant certaines de ces pièces[6]. La Chambre est convaincue qu'une réponse du Gouvernement rwandais concernant les autres pièces énumérées à l'annexe A de ladite décision serait appropriée et souligne qu'elle devrait être faite le plus tôt possible.

(ii) Autres pièces

5. Les autres pièces sollicitées par la Défense sont les suivantes :

a. Une copie du dossier judiciaire établi en 1996 par le Parquet Général de Kigali à l'appui de la demande d'extradition de Bagosora adressée aux autorités camerounaises ;
b. La copie intégrale de l'agenda 1993 de Bagosora ;
c. La déclaration que Jean-Bosco Nkulikiyinka a faite à l'Auditorat militaire en 1998 concernant un barrage routier établi à Kigali ;
d. La liste et la composition de la classe de 3e Année «A»-Électromécanique, de l'école EFOTEC pour l'année scolaire 1993/94 ;
e. Les fiches scolaires avec les différentes classes suivies par trois élèves en particulier ;
f. Une interview de Faustin Twagiramungu, datant de juin 1992, dans laquelle il donne son point de vue sur l'attaque menée par le FPR à cette période ;
g. Le discours prononcé par Froduald Karamira en octobre 1993, après l'assassinat du Président du Burundi, Melchior Ndadaye ;

[6] Voir notes 3 et 4 ci-dessus.

h. Le discours prononcé par Félicien Gatabazi en janvier ou février 1994, lors d'un meeting de son parti, le PSD.

6. La Chambre estime que la Défense a dûment précisé la nature des pièces sollicitées et fourni une relation circonstanciée et documentée des efforts qu'elle a déployés pour tenter d'obtenir lesdites pièces.

7. La Chambre considère que les pièces se rapportant directement à Bagosora (voir a. et b. ci-dessus) sont manifestement pertinentes à la procédure engagée contre lui. Par ailleurs, les deux pièces (voir d. et e.) concernant l'école EFOTEC peuvent être pertinentes au procès. La déclaration de Nkulikiyinka (voir c.) peut, elle aussi, être pertinente, car elle porte apparemment sur un sujet (un barrage routier qui aurait été établi à Kigali en avril 1994) ayant fait l'objet de dépositions au procès[7]. Comme la Chambre l'a relevé dans sa Décision du 10 mars 1994, des éléments de preuve ont été admis au procès, à propos d'événements survenus en 1992, qui établissent, selon le Procureur, l'existence d'une entente tout au long de l'année 1994[8]. La Chambre juge que l'interview de Twagiramungu (voir f.) et les discours prononcés par Karamira et Gatabazi (voir respectivement g. et h) peuvent, eux aussi, se rattacher a cette question[9]. Ces pièces sont énumérées à l'annexe B de ladite Décision.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

RAPPELLE au Gouvernement rwandais l'obligation de collaborer avec le Tribunal que lui fait l'article 28 du Statut ;

PRIE le Gouvernement rwandais de répondre dès que possible à la Demande de coopération et d'assistance du 10 mars 2004 en ce qui concerne les documents énumérés dans l'annexe A de ladite Décision ;

PRIE ÉGALEMENT le Gouvernement rwandais de déterminer s'il a en sa possession les pièces énumérées dans l'annexe B de ladite Décision et, si tel est le cas, de les transmettre le plus tôt possible au Greffe pour qu'il les communique à la Défense ;

INVITE le Greffier à prendre contact sans retard avec les autorités du Gouvernement rwandais, à rester activement saisi de la question, jusqu'à ce qu'une réponse à la demande de coopération et d'assistance du 10 mars 2004 soit obtenue, et d'en rendre compte à la Chambre ;

REJETTE la requête sous tous autres rapports.

Fait à Arusha, le 26 octobre 2006.

LE TRIBUNAL PÉNAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA,

SIEGEANT en la Chambre de première instance I, composée des juges Erik Møse, Président, Jai Ram Reddy et Sergei Alekseevich Egorov (la « Chambre »),

SAISI de la requête du Procureur intitulée Motion Regarding Defence Refusal to Provide Witness Statements and Requesting Certain Relief for Deficiencies in Kabiligi Pre-Defence Brief; déposée le 5 octobre 2006,

VU la réponse du Procureur, déposée le 10 octobre 2006,

STATUE sur la requête.

Introduction

1. Le Procureur demande que des témoins de la Défense de Kabiligi ne soient pas autorisés à déposer, leur identité et les résumés de leurs dépositions attendues ne lui ayant pas été communiqués. Il fait notamment valoir que : (i) très peu de renseignements concernant l'identité de cinq témoins lui ont été fournis ; (ii) les résumés des dépositions attendues de 21 témoins ne lui ont pas été communiqués ; (iii) dix-sept témoins ne figurent pas sur la liste établie pour la dernière session du procès, qui débutera le 6 novembre 2006[1].

Délibération

(i) Identité des témoins

2. L'obligation faite à la Défense de fournir des informations permettant d'identifier ses témoins est bien précisée dans une décision antérieure de la Chambre en l'espèce :

> La Chambre a jugé, en application de l'article 73 ter (B) (iii) (a) du Règlement, que les renseignements concernant l'identité de chaque témoin de la Défense devraient comporter les mêmes éléments que ceux fournis par le Procureur pour les témoins à charge. Une importance toute particulière s'attache à l'activité professionnelle du témoin en 1994, à sa filiation et à son lieu de naissance, ainsi qu'à son pays de résidence actuel. Tout en admettant que la Défense ne détient peut-être pas tous ces renseignements pour chacun des témoins, la Chambre estime cependant que de telles lacunes devraient être rares et comblées rapidement. Le sentiment d'insécurité qu'éprouveraient des témoins ne justifie pas que leur lieu de résidence soit tenu secret. Des mesures strictes de protection de témoins sont prises afin de dissiper les craintes que ceux-ci pourraient avoir dans ce sens. La Défense ne saurait s'appuyer sur le sentiment d'insécurité exprimé par des témoins pour refuser de communiquer des renseignements permettant de les identifier[2] [traduction].

La Défense de Kabiligi ne semble pas contester cette obligation, mais elle soutient qu'elle « n'a pas l'intention » d'appeler des témoins à la barre sans avoir fourni de renseignements concernant leur identité au moins 35 jours avant leur comparution[3] [traduction]. Certes, la Chambre, usant de son pouvoir discrétionnaire, a autorisé la Défense à inscrire des témoins supplémentaires sur ses listes, sous réserve de notification 35 jours au moins avant leur comparution, mais il ne s'agit pas là d'une procédure ou d'un délai qui va de soi[4]. Au contraire, la Chambre a déjà ordonné que

Le fait de ne pas fournir dans les délais prescrits les informations permettant d'identifier les témoins est une faute. Dans une décision antérieure, la Chambre a estimé que cette faute pouvait être excusée dans certains cas, mais que ceux-ci devraient « être rares et qu'il devait y être remédié sans retard ». Il appert des courriels annexés à la requête du Procureur qu'à tout le moins certaines des lacunes relevées sont imputables à un manque d'information, et non pas à la volonté manifeste d'ignorer les instructions de la chambre[6]. En outre, quelques-unes des annexes donnent à penser que la Défense s'est peut-être, jusqu'à un certain point, conformée à ladite ordonnance pour ce qui est de certains des témoins.

3. La Chambre confirme ses instructions précédentes par lesquelles elle invitait la Défense à communiquer les renseignements suivants concernant ses témoins : nom, nationalité, sexe, filiation, lieu de naissance, date de naissance, profession actuelle et profession exercée en avril 1994, et pays de résidence. S'il n'a pas été remédié à l'une ou l'autre de ces lacunes à la date de la présente Décision, le Procureur est autorisé à déposer des écritures supplémentaires exposant en détail la nature des renseignements manquants, les lacunes relevées dans des explications de la Défense, et l'incidence de ces lacunes sur les enquêtes.

(ii) Déclarations de témoins

4. La Défense de Kabiligi affirme qu'elle n'est absolument pas tenue de communiquer au Procureur le texte des déclarations de ses témoins.

5. La Défense n'est nullement obligée de recueillir des déclarations de ses témoins, mais lorsqu'elle le fait, elle doit communiquer le texte de toutes celles qui ont été recueillies. La Chambre n'a pas rappelé expressément cette obligation dans sa décision écrite qui fixait la date de dépôt du mémoire préalable au procès de la Défense de Kabiligi, mais ladite obligation a été énoncée sans ambages dans le cadre des obligations générales de communication s'imposant aux quatre équipes de la Défense[7]. Si les déclarations écrites des vingt et un témoins mentionnés par le Procureur existent et si elles sont en la possession de la Défense, elles doivent être communiquées sans délai.

(iii) Ordre de comparution

4. Le fait qu'un témoin ne figure pas sur la liste des témoins qui seront appelés à la barre ne constitue pas un motif suffisant pour écarter ce témoignage. On considère que l'ordre de comparution est provisoire, et qu'il peut changer au gré d'évènements sur lesquels la partie qui cite les témoins n'a aucune prise. Une certaine souplesse est donc nécessaire pour permettre à la partie concernée de présenter efficacement sa cause. Les changements de dernière minute sont bien entendu soumis au contrôle de la Chambre pour assurer l'équité du procès et faire en sorte qu'aucune des parties ne puisse être prise au dépourvu.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

CONFIRME que la Défense est tenue de dévoiler sans retard l'identité de ses témoins, conformément à la décision antérieure de la Chambre ;

INVITE la Défense à communiquer sans retard au Procureur toutes les déclarations de ses témoins qui existeraient et seraient en sa possession ;

REJETTE tous les autres points de la requête

LE TRIBUNAL PÉNAL INTERNATIONAL POUR LE RWANDA,

SIÉGEANT en la Chambre de première instance I, composée des juges Erik Møse, Président, Jai Ram Reddy et Sergei Alekseevich Egorov (la « Chambre »),

SAISI de la requête de la Défense de Kabiligi intitulée Motion for Cooperation from the Government of France Pursuant to Article 28 of the Statute of the ICTR and Issuance of Subpoenas Pursuant to Rule 54 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence, déposée le 4 octobre 2006,

VU les observations du Greffier déposées le 10 octobre 2006,

STATUE sur la requête.

Introduction

1. La Défense de Kabiligi prie la Chambre d'adresser au Gouvernement français une demande à l'effet de permettre à la dite Défense de s'entretenir avec quatre officiers à la retraite qu'elle se propose d'appeler à la barre. Conformément à la procédure dont les autorités françaises ont demandé avec insistance qu'elle soit suivie lorsqu'il s'agit d'agents d'autorité, en poste ou à la retraite, la Défense demande l'assistance du Gouvernement français pour qu'il autorise les officiers concernés à répondre à un questionnaire écrit et à se présenter ensuite à des entretiens informels et à des auditions formelles lors desquels les témoins potentiels ont a répondre a des questions préétablies. Faisant état du retard déjà pris et du délai tout proche fixé pour la clôture du procès, la Défense demande à la Chambre de fixer une date précise pour la tenue des entretiens avant le début de la prochaine session du procès prévue pour le 6 novembre 2006 et de délivrer aux officiers des citations a comparaître comme témoins devant la Chambre.

Délibération

2. Aux termes de l'article 28 du Statut du Tribunal (le « Statut »), les États sont tenus de

L'expression « la recherche et le jugement des personnes » ne vise pas uniquement les enquêtes du Procureur, mais bien l'ensemble de la procédure judiciaire, y compris le droit reconnu à l'accusé par l'article 20 (4) (e) du Statut d' > « obtenir la comparution et l'interrogatoire des témoins à décharge dans les mêmes conditions que les témoins a charge »[1].

L'article 28 (2) du Statut oblige plus précisément les États à répondre « sans retard » aux demandes d'assistance concernant la « réunion de témoignages et [la] production des preuves ».

3. Le 16 mars 2006, le Greffier a transmis au Gouvernement français une demande d'assistance adressée par la Défense aux autorités françaises afin que celles-ci autorisent quatre anciens officiers à remplir un questionnaire conformément à la procédure établie[2]. De nouvelles demandes en ce sens ont été transmises les 2 juin et 12 juillet 2006[3]. Le 16 août 2006, les autorités françaises se sont engagées à prêter assistance à la Défense dans sa recherche de renseignements en lui faisant parvenir les réponses aux questions écrites «dans les meilleurs délais possibles » et en facilitant les entretiens et les auditions des quatre témoins, une condition préalable, en droit français, à la comparution de témoins dans un procès. Elles n'étaient pas sûres toutefois que la tenue des entretiens informels et des auditions formelles des quatre témoins potentiels puisse avoir lieu au cours d'un seul séjour de la Défense en France.

3. La clôture du présent procès est fixée au 13 décembre 2006. Dans ces conditions, il est urgent et impératif que le Gouvernement français s'acquitte avec diligence de son engagement à fournir les réponses écrites aux questionnaires et à permettre les entretiens avec les témoins.

4. Il serait prématuré de délivrer des citations à comparaître aux quatre témoins potentiels. La Défense de Kabiligi a donné une idée générale de la teneur des dépositions attendues des témoins, mais la Chambre ne peut, au stade actuel de la procédure, ni évaluer la pertinence des dépositions au procès ni déterminer si elles sont nécessaires pour l'équité du procès[4]. De même, elle ne juge ni nécessaire ni indiqué de fixer des dates précises pour les entretiens informels et les auditions formelles. Malgré les retards qui se sont succédés de la part du Gouvernement français depuis la première demande de la Défense datée du 16 mars 2006, rien n'autorise la Chambre à douter que celui-ci fera montre de diligence et veillera à ce que les renseignements demandés soient transmis en temps utile en tenant compte d'un calendrier judiciaire des plus serrés.

Le Greffe a informé la Chambre que des dispositions étaient prises, en collaboration avec l'État dont il est un agent d'autorité, afin que le témoin comparaisse sans retard devant le Tribunal. Une lettre de l'État concerné, datée du 7 novembre 2006 qui décrit ces dispositions, est jointe à la présente lettre en annexe A. SAISI de la demande de certification d'appel intitulée « Kabiligi Request for Certification of the "Decision on Kabiligi Motion for Inspection of Documents Under Rule 66 (B)" of 6 December 2006 », déposée par la Défense de Kabiligi le 11 décembre 2006,

STATUE COMME SUIT,

Introduction

1. La Défense de Kabiligi demande à pouvoir faire appel (à titre interlocutoire) de la décision rendue par la Chambre quant à l'examen de documents en vertu de l'article 66 (B) du Règlement, la requête formée à cette fin ayant été accueillie à certains égards et rejetée à d'autres[1]. La Chambre a ainsi autorisé la Défense à examiner les déclarations et autres pièces soumises par l'accusé à des services nationaux d'immigration, de même que tous les documents saisis chez lui par les enquêteurs du Tribunal, mais a rejeté sa requête en ce qu'elle avait trait à des > « documents ou pièces relatifs à l'alibi de l'accusé Kabiligi et aux déplacements que le général Kabiligi aurait effectués à travers le Rwanda au cours de la période visée dans l'acte d'accusation » [traduction],

> «tous agendas, journaux, passeports, photographies, carnets de route et documents de voyage personnels de l'accusé, et toutes pièces de correspondance dont il était le destinataire ou l'expéditeur et qui ont été rédigées durant la période visée dans l'acte d'accusation, dans l'intervalle allant jusqu'à son arrestation et depuis son entrée au centre de détention relevant du Tribunal » [traduction].

Délibération

2. L'article 73 (B) du Règlement autorise l'appel interlocutoire dès lors que la Chambre de première instance s'est assurée que la contestation envisagée

> « touche une question susceptible de compromettre sensiblement l'équité et la rapidité du procès, ou son issue, et que son règlement immédiat par la Chambre d'appel pourrait concrètement faire progresser la procédure ».

3. S'il est indéniable que le choix d'un accusé de déposer ou non à son propre procès a une grande incidence sur le déroulement de l'instance, la question qui se pose en l'occurrence est de savoir si le fait pour la Défense de se voir refuser l'examen de certaines catégories de documents « est susceptible de compromettre sensiblement l'équité et la rapidité du procès, ou son issue » et si le fait de porter tel refus en appel à ce stade de la procédure pourrait concrètement faire progresser celle-ci. Dans la décision contestée, la Chambre a autorisé la Défense à examiner deux des catégories de documents dont celle-ci souhaitait prendre connaissance, les estimant bien définies et d'une importance manifeste pour la préparation de la cause de l'accusé ; elle lui a par contre refusé l'examen de documents relevant de deux autres catégories, qu'elle a jugées « par trop larges et vagues » et «d'une incidence fort variable sur le choix de l'accusé de témoigner ou non à son procès »[2] [traduction]. La Chambre a été guidée, ce faisant, par la déclaration de la Chambre d'appel selon laquelle

les requêtes formées en vertu de cette disposition devant être « suffisamment précises »[3] [traduction]. Une fois qu'elle a défini une catégorie de documents avec suffisamment de précision, la Défense doit encore fournir les « éléments requis » [traduction] pour établir que les pièces visées sont nécessaires à sa préparation. Il incombe alors à la Chambre de première instance d'« apprécier selon le contexte de l'affaire » si ces pièces se distinguent effectivement, par leur caractère « nécessaire », de « l'ensemble des documents qui auraient un rapport » avec le contre-interrogatoire des témoins[4].

4. De l'avis de la Chambre, le règlement au second degré de la question soulevée en l'occurrence – à savoir le caractère par trop vague reconnu à deux catégories de documents – ne saurait concrètement faire progresser la procédure. Le fait d'« apprécier selon le contexte de l'affaire » si telle ou telle catégorie de documents a été définie avec suffisamment de précision relève du pouvoir d'appréciation fondamental de la Chambre de première instance. La première des deux catégories dont l'examen a été refusé en l'espèce, c'est-à-dire, selon les termes de la Défense, les pourrait s'étendre à toute pièce faisant quelque référence aux lieux où l'accusé se serait trouvé en 1994 et, partant, à nombre de documents qui, n'ayant qu'un rapport accessoire avec le choix de celui-ci de témoigner ou non à son procès, ne seraient pas nécessaires à sa défense. La seconde catégorie est également vague en ce qu'elle recouvre des documents qui pourraient s'avérer nécessaires à la préparation de la Défense, mais aussi quantité d'autres qui ne le seraient probablement pas. La Chambre estime que la certification du recours envisagé contre sa décision de refuser l'examen de ces grandes catégories de documents au motif qu'elles étaient par trop vagues et mal définies ne ferait pas concrètement progresser la procédure[5]

5. Assurément, certains documents relevant des deux catégories refusées pourraient avoir de l'importance pour la préparation de la Défense. Il n'en résulte pas pour autant que l'examen de ces catégories prises dans leur globalité, sans autre précision, est une question « susceptible de compromettre sensiblement l'équité et la rapidité du procès ». En effet, rien n'empêche la Défense de faire valoir, au moment du contre-interrogatoire de l'accusé, que tel ou tel document tombe sous le coup de la communication au sens de l'article 66 (B) du Règlement. La Chambre a déjà, à une occasion, empêché que ne soient posées des questions relatives à un document non communiqué, alors qu'une requête en vertu de l'article 66 (B) du Règlement avait été dûment formée à cette fin[6]. Si un tel cas se présente lors du contre-interrogatoire de l'accusé en l'espèce, la Défense pourra soulever une objection et, si elle n'est pas satisfaite de la décision de la Chambre, saisir celle-ci d'une demande de certification d'appel. Une telle demande, portant sur un document précis dont l'importance est concrètement mesurable, pourrait effectivement toucher une question susceptible de compromettre sensiblement l'équité du procès et de faire concrètement progresser la procédure. La Défense n'a cependant pas montré en quoi ces deux conditions étaient remplies dans le cas des catégories visées, telles que les définit la décision contestée.

[4] Ibid., par. 9.

[5] Les appels interlocutoires ne peuvent être autorisés que s'ils concernent des arguments et thèses présentés en première instance. Or, certaines des conclusions orales présentées par la Défense en l'espèce vont au-delà de l'argumentation que sa requête initiale développait relativement aux deux catégories visées de documents, révélant une prétention beaucoup plus ambitieuse, exprimée en ces termes à l'audience : « ... nous avons donc le droit de savoir à quoi nous attendre…» (Compte rendu de l'audience du 11 décembre 2006, p. 9) (projet). La requête initiale se fondait sur des arguments plus limités, à savoir le caractère nécessaire des catégories de documents définies par la Défense. Pour décider de l'opportunité d'autoriser un appel interlocutoire, la Chambre se doit de considérer les seuls arguments et questions soulevés dans la requête initiale. Voir Le Procureur c. Bagosora et consorts, Decision on Request for Certification Concerning Sufficiency of Defence Witness Summaries, Chambre de première instance, 21 juillet 2005, par. 5 et 6 («Le fait d'autoriser un appel à titre interlocutoire sur la base d'arguments que les parties n'ont pas fait valoir dans le cadre de leurs requêtes initiales ouvrirait la porte à la multiplication des contestations et pourrait par ailleurs amener la Chambre d'appel à se prononcer sur des questions qui n'auraient pas fait l'objet d'un examen au fond en première instance. S'il est loisible à la Chambre de première instance saisie d'une demande de certification d'analyser à nouveau la substance de sa décision, elle ne procédera de la sorte qu'au regard des critères énoncés à l'article 73 (B) du Règlement. La demande de certification ne saurait valablement servir à introduire une nouvelle argumentation. Une certification accordée sur de telles bases risquerait de prendre la partie adverse par surprise et de court-circuiter la procédure régissant l'examen au fond des requêtes. » [traduction]).

[6] Compte rendu de l'audience du 28 septembre 2006, p. 24 et 25 (témoin KVB-19).

6. Le caractère nécessaire que pourraient revêtir ces deux catégories de documents est d'autant moins probable que, selon le Procureur, certaines des pièces qu'elles recouvrent auraient déjà été communiquées. Il en serait notamment ainsi de toutes les déclarations préalables et photographies de l'accusé[7]. Qui plus est, maintes pièces relevant de la seconde catégorie – journaux, passeports et agendas personnels – sont déjà soumises à l'obligation de communication en ce sens que la décision contestée prescrit l'examen des « documents saisis chez l'accusé » [traduction]. N'ayant pas exclu de ces catégories des pièces qui lui avaient déjà été communiquées et ayant formulé sa requête en des termes généraux, la Défense a placé la Chambre, qui aurait pour le moins dû être informée du type particulier de documents dont il s'agissait, dans l'impossibilité d'en apprécier le caractère nécessaire.

7. La Chambre conclut que la Défense n'a pas montré en quoi l'appel envisagé pourrait concrètement faire progresser la procédure, ni en quoi il toucherait des questions susceptibles de compromettre sensiblement l'équité et la rapidité du procès, ou son issue.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

REJETTE la demande.

CONSIDERING that the Appellant has not shown that a status conference would facilitate expeditious proceedings on appeal at the present stage[10];

FINDING, therefore, that there is no need to convene a status conference in this case on 8 February 2006;

Statute, art. 24

International Case cited :

I.C.T.R. : Trial Chamber, The Prosecutor v. Ferdinand Nahimana et al., Judgement and Sentence, 3 December 2003 (ICTR-99-52)

THE APPEALS CHAMBER of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States, between 1 January 1994 and 31 December 1994 ("Appeals Chamber" and "ICTR", respectively),

BEING SEIZED OF the "Appellant Hassan Ngeze's Request for the Appeal [sic] Chamber to Take Appropriate Steps to Rectify the Differential and Unequal Treatment between the ICTR and ICTY in Sentencing Policies and Other Rights" filed by Hassan Ngeze ("Appellant") on 28 November 2005 ("Motion");

NOTING that the Office of the Prosecutor of the ICTR ("Prosecution") has not filed a response to the Motion;

NOTING that the Appellant submits that there are "explicit differences" in the operation of the ICTR as compared to the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia ("ICTY") in different areas "from indictment to sentencing", leading the Appellant to conclude that

"those accused by the ICTR do not receive the same level of judicial propriety and fairness as their counterparts in the ICTY",[1] and requests the Appeals Chamber to

"take adequate measures to rectify the differential and unequal treatment of the [A]ppellant Hassan Ngeze besides others, in its sentencing policies and other rights in comparison to the treatment of accused/s and convicts of the ICTY";[2]

NOTING that, with regard to the Appeals Chamber's jurisdiction, the Appellant argues that, due to the novelty and exceptional nature of his request,[3] the Appeals Chamber should consider the Motion for the sake of "principles of equity and fairness"[4] and "as a measure to develop and strengthen international criminal law jurisprudence",[5] despite the fact that the Motion "cannot be based on a discernable rule";[6]

NOTING that, the Appellant contends that he has locus standi to bring such a request because (a)

"the Trial Chamber's judgment against the Appellant is one of the decisions that the Memorandum refers to in its statistics analysis" and he, thus, has "interest in the review requested";[7] and (b)

"as an individual member of the global community [he] also has an obligation [sic] to expect efficacy and transparency";[8]

NOTING that the main differences between the ICTR and ICTY alleged by the Appellant relate to the following elements: conditions of detention;[9] presumption of innocence and burden of proof beyond reasonable doubt;[10] impartiality of the Trial Chambers;[11] verdicts and sentencing;[12] hierarchy of the crimes provided for by the respective Statutes of the ICTR and ICTY;[13] and selectiveness of prosecutions;[14]

CONSIDERING that Article 24 of the Statute of the ICTR provides that the Appeals Chamber has jurisdiction to hear "appeals from persons convicted by the Trial Chambers or from the Prosecution" on the grounds of

"(a) [a]n error on a question of law invalidating the decision; or (b) [a]n error of fact which has occasioned a miscarriage of justice"

with the view to "affirm, reverse or revise the decisions taken by the Trial Chambers";

CONSIDERING that, pursuant to Article 24 of the ICTR Statute, an accused or appellant cannot seize the Appeals Chamber of a general matter without alleging that there has been an error of law or

CONSIDERING that the Appellant had the possibility to raise, in his Notice of Appeal[15] and Appellant's Brief,[16] all issues pertaining to alleged errors of law and of fact in the Trial Judgement rendered in the present case;[17]

FINDING that the Motion does not set forth an error that the Appeals Chamber has jurisdiction to consider;

Juvénal Kajelijeli, Judgement, 23 May 2005 (ICTR-98-44A)

THE APPEALS CHAMBER of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law

Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States Between 1 January and 31 December 1994 ("Appeals Chamber" and "Tribunal", respectively) ;

NOTING the "Decision on Appellant Hassan Ngeze's Six Motions for Admission of Additional Evidence on Appeal and/or Further Investigation at the Appeal Stage", issued confidentially on 23 February 2006 ("Decision"), in which the Appeals Chamber found that the "Prosecutor's Response to 'Appellant Hassan Ngeze's Motion for the Approval of Further Investigation of the Specific Information Relating to the Additional Evidence of Witness AEU'" ("Prosecution's Response to the Fourth Motion") had been filed one day late and consequently did not consider in its disposing of "Appellant Hassan Ngeze's Motion for the Approval of Further Investigation of the Specific Information Relating to the Additional Evidence of Witness AEU" filed on 16 June 2005 ("Fourth Motion");[1]

CONSIDERING that the Appeals Chamber based such finding on the fact that the front page of the Prosecution's Response to the Fourth Motion was stamped as confidentially filed on 28 June 2005 ;

BEING SEIZED OF the "Prosecutor's Motion for Reconsideration of the Appeals Chamber's Decision Regarding the Timeliness of the Filing of the Prosecutor's Response to 'Appellant Hassan Ngeze's Motion for the Approval of Further Investigation of the Specific Information Relating to the Additional Evidence of Witness AEU'", filed on 3 March 2006 ("Motion"), in which the Prosecution submits that the date recorded in the registry's stamp on the front page of the Prosecution's Response to the Fourth Motion is wrong and should have been dated one day earlier and requests the Appeals Chamber to reconsider the aforementioned finding,[2] to recognize the Prosecution's Response to the Fourth Motion as timely filed on 27 June 2005,[3] and to correct the record accordingly ;[4]

NOTING that in its Motion, the Prosecution specifies that it "does not request the Appeals Chamber to examine the Appellant's Motion and the Response afresh";[5]

NOTING that Appellant Hassan Ngeze did not file any response to the Motion ;

CONSIDERING that, after it rendered its Decision, the Appeals Chamber received a memorandum from the Registry dated 30 June 2005, which specifies that, with regard to the Prosecution's Response to the Fourth Motion, "the filing date should read 27 June 2005 and not 28 June 2005" and attaches the confidentially filed Prosecution's Response to the Fourth Motion bearing the Registry Stamp of 27 June 2005";

CONSIDERING that the Appeals Chamber has an inherent discretionary power to reconsider its own previous interlocutory decisions of the existence of a clear error or reasoning has been demonstrated or if it is necessary in order to prevent an injustice ;[6]

CONSIDERING that on the basis of the documents before it at the time it rendered its Decision, the Appeals Chamber did not err in finding that the Prosecution's Response to the Fourth Motion was untimely filed ;

CONSIDERING that in its Decision, the Appeals Chamber dismissed the Fourth Motion and the Prosecution, as the prevailing party, was in no way prejudiced by the mistake made concerning the date of the filing of the Prosecution's Response to the Fourth Motion, and that the timeliness issue is therefore moot;

CONSIDERING that reconsideration of an Appeals Chamber's interlocutory decision is "exceptional"[7] and that the Prosecution has provided no reason that this step should be taken other than "in order to correct the record" concerning a confidential decision by the Appeals Chamber ;

FINDING therefore that the Prosecution has failed to demonstrate that this is an exceptional case meeting discretionary reconsideration; it has not demonstrated a "clear error" in the Appeals Chamber's reasoning, nor the necessity of reconsideration to prevent an injustice;[8]

On the basis of the foregoing, hereby DISMISSES the Motion.

1. The Appeals Chamber of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States Between 1 January and 31 December 1994 ("Appeals Chamber" and "Tribunal", respectively) is seized of "The Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Motion for Leave to Present Additional Evidence (Rule 115)" ("Rule 115 Motion") confidentially filed by Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza ("Appellant") on 28 December 2005, in which he requests the Appeals Chamber to admit twelve pieces of additional evidence on appeal.

2. The Prosecution responded to the Rule 115 Motion on 9 January 2006 requesting the Appeals Chamber to dismiss it in its entirety.[1] The Appellant filed two different versions of his reply on 16 and 17 January 2006.[2]

I. Procedural Background

3. Trial Chamber I rendered its Judgement in the present case on 3 December 2003.[3] The Appellant filed a first Notice of Appeal on 22 April 2004,[4] which was amended on 27 April 2004.[5] The initial Appellant's Brief was filed by him on 25 June 2004.[6]

4. The proceedings in relation to the Appellant were stayed from 19 May 2004[7] through 26 January 2005,[8] pending the assignment of a new lead counsel. The current Lead Counsel was assigned to the Appellant by the Registrar on 30 November 2004, and on 19 January 2005, the Appeals Chamber dismissed the Appellant's challenge to this assignment.[9] The Appellant's request for reconsideration of the Decision of 19 January 2005 was dismissed by the Appeals Chamber on 4 February 2005.[10]

5. As per the decisions of 17 May 2005[11] and 6 September 2005,[12] both his "Amended Notice of Appeal" and "Amended Appellant's Brief" were filed by the Appellant on 12 October 2005.

II. Preliminary Matters

6. The Appeals Chamber recalls the Pre-Appeal Judge's decision of 23 January 2006 in the present case, which granted both the Appellant's and Prosecution's requests for extension of the page limit for the Rule 115 Motion and Response thereto respectively, and which found the filing of both versions of the Rule 115 Reply to be untimely and frivolous, accordingly ordering that they be expunged from the record ("Decision of 23 January 2006").[13] Pursuant to the same decision, the

Prosecution's submission referred to as its "sur-reply"[14] was found invalidly filed and moot,[15] and was also expunged from the record.[16]

A. Appellant's Request for Clarification of the Decision of 23 January 2006

7. On 31 January 2006, the Appellant seized the Appeals Chamber with a request for clarification of the Decision of 23 January 2006.[17] The Appellant

> "specifically request[s] [the Appeals Chamber] to make an order permitting the re-filing of a [r]eply to the [p]rosecution [r]esponse".[18]

The Prosecution has not responded to the Motion for Clarification.

8. The Appeals Chamber considers that the Appellant's request for clarification is in fact a motion for reconsideration of the Decision of 23 January 2006 and finds that none of the arguments raised by the Appellant establish cause for reconsideration.[19] As to the Appellant's argument that the Rule 115 Reply contained "arguments and submissions of law and fact which are currently not before the Appeals Chamber",[20] this does not constitute a valid cause to be relieved from the failure to file a reply in time. In addition, the Appeals Chamber recalls that a reply should be limited to arguments contained in the response and that, to the extent the Rule 115 Reply included any completely new submission of law or fact, it was improper.[21]

9. In his Motion for Clarification, the Appellant also requests the Appeals Chamber to order an oral hearing to consider the Appellant's Motion for Additional Evidence to enable "a full argument as to the admissibility of the proposed additional evidence", given "both the gravity and complexity of the issues" set out in the Rule 115 Motion and Response thereto.[22] Pursuant to Rule 115 (C) of the Tribunal's Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("Rules"), the Appeals Chamber may decide a motion for leave to present additional evidence on appeal "with or without an oral hearing". Generally, the granting of an oral hearing is a matter for the discretion of a Chamber and may legitimately be regarded as unnecessary when the information before the Chamber is sufficient to enable it to reach an informed decision.[23] In the instant case, the Appeals Chamber finds that the Appellant has not put forward any convincing reasons justifying that written submissions are inadequate to put forward his arguments in relation to the Rule 115 Motion and thus, does not consider that the efficient conduct of the present proceeding requires an oral hearing prior to rendering its decision on the Rule 115 Motion.[24]

10. On the basis of the foregoing, the Appeals Chamber dismisses the Motion for Clarification. Moreover, the Appeals Chamber considers the Motion for Clarification as frivolous and, pursuant to Rule 73 (F), imposes sanctions against the Appellant's Counsel in the form of non-payment of fees and costs associated with it.

B. Annexes to the Rule 115 Motion

11. Due to the apparent inconsistencies of the Rule 115 Motion with the formal requirements set out in Paragraph 7 of the Practice Direction on Formal Requirements for Appeals from Judgement ('Practice Direction"),[25] the Pre-Appeal Judge ordered the Appellant to "re-file, no later than 30 January 2006, appendices to the Rule 115 Motion which should be copies of the evidence that he is applying to present before the Appeals Chamber in strict accordance with the precise list of such evidence already contained in his Rule 115 Motion".[26]

12. In "[t]he Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Extremely Urgent Corrigendum to the Rule 115 Motion Filed 28 December 2005, pursuant to the Order of the Pre-Appeal Judge of 23 January 2006" filed on 31 January 2006 ("Corrigendum to Rule 115 Motion"),[27] the Appellant requests the Appeals Chamber to accept an "amended list of annexed documents referred to in the contents of the Rule 115 Motion itself"[28] and provides as annexes "all the documents referred to in the body of the Appellant's Rule 115 Motion".[29]

13. The Appeals Chamber accepts the documents annexed to the Corrigendum to Rule 115 Motion only inasmuch as they correspond to the pieces of evidence mentioned in the Rule 115 Motion itself but omitted from its annexes. Indeed, the Corrigendum to Rule 115 Motion cannot be used to widen the scope of the Rule 115 Motion.

C. Prosecution Request of 10 February 2006 and Reply Thereto

14. On 10 February 2006,[30] the Prosecution filed the "Prosecutor's Request to File a Response Limited to Fresh Additional Evidence Appended to 'The Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Extremely Urgent Corrigendum to the Rule 115 Motion Filed 28 December 2005, Pursuant to the Order of the Pre-Appeal Judge of 23 January 2006'" ("Prosecution Request of 10 February 2006"), in which the Prosecution requests the Appeals Chamber to consider its response to "fresh matters

[26] Decision of 23 January 2006, p. 7.

[27] It appears that the Appellant sent the Corrigendum to Rule 115 Motion to the Registry by e-mail on 30 January 2006, and the Appeals Chamber will thus consider it as timely filed.

[28] Corrigendum to Rule 115 Motion, para. 3. The Appellant contends that "[t]he original list of annexes should be expunged from the record as an inaccurate and incomplete list of documents" (para. 2) and that the corrections are "administrative and typographical" and properly reflect the substance of the Rule 115 Motion (para. 4) appearing in the Corrigendum" to the Rule 115 Motion.[31] The Appellant replied on 16 February 2006, submitting that the Prosecution Request of 10 February 2006 should be expunged from the record as "an inappropriate use of the Rules" of the Tribunal.[32]

[29] Corrigendum to Rule 115 Motion, para. 2.

[30] The distribution to the parties by the Registry took place on 13 February 2006.

15. The Appeals Chamber notes that both the Prosecution Request of 10 February 2006 and the Appellant's reply thereto contain arguments on the merits of the Rule 115 Motion which in substance, constitute a response and a reply to the Corrigendum to Rule 115 Motion. In that respect, the Appeals Chamber considers both the Prosecution Request of 10 February 2006 and the Appellant's reply thereto as validly filed. However, the Appeals Chamber will only take into account arguments pertaining to documents referred to in the Rule 115 Motion but not initially annexed to it or to alleged changes between the documents filed with the Rule 115 Motion and those filed with the Corrigendum to Rule 115 Motion. The Appeals Chamber notes that the Prosecution Request of 10 February 2006 and the reply thereto may not be used indirectly as a vehicle to make new submissions that should have been made in the Response to Rule 115 Motion or in a timely reply to it. In conformity with this principle, the Appeals Chamber also denies the Appellant's request to file "a full reply given that the original reply has been expunged from the record".[33]

D. Prosecution's Request to Submit a Fuller Response

16. In its Response to Rule 115 Motion, the Prosecution requested the authorization to submit, at a later stage, a fuller response to certain matters raised by the Appellant in his Rule 115 Motion.[34] The Appeals Chamber notes the Prosecution's submission that this is necessary because of the voluminous and unorganized annexes attached to the Rule 115 Motion.[35] The Appeals Chamber does not agree. Because (1) the Decision of 23 January 2006 ordered the Appellant to re-file the annexes; (2) the Appellant did so through his Corrigendum to Rule 115 Motion and, (3) the Appeals Chamber has already stated[36] that it will consider the arguments in the Prosecution Request of 16 February 2006 as long as they are really in response to "fresh matters appearing in the Corrigendum", the Appeals Chamber is of the view that the Prosecution need not be authorized to submit another response to the Rule 115 Motion.

E. Appellant's Motion of 29 March 2004

17. Lastly, in his Rule 115 Motion, the Appellant submits that he considers his motion filed on 29 March 2004[37] as still pending before the Appeals Chamber.[38] As the Appellant notes himself,[39] the Pre-Appeal Judge ordered him "to notify the Appeals Chamber of his intention to pursue or abandon the Motion for Additional Evidence no later than 21 February 2005".[40] Since the Appellant failed to do so,[41] the Appeal Chamber considers that he waived his right to pursue the Motion of 29 March 2004. The Appeals Chamber notes that this does not prejudice the Appellant in any way, as the requests contained in the Motion of 29 March 2004 are reiterated in the current Rule 115 Motion.[42] The Appeals Chamber is also of the view that, while the Motion of 29 March 2004 was abandoned by the Appellant, this does not amount to a general waiver of the Appellant's right to pursue the admission of additional evidence on appeal.[43]

III. Discussion

A. Materials Submitted by the Appellant for Admission as Additional Evidence on Appeal

18. The Appeals Chamber recalls that a party seeking the admission of additional evidence on appeal must provide the Appeals Chamber with the evidence sought to be admitted.[44] For the sake of clarity and in light of the Appeals Chamber's findings above,[45] the Appeals Chamber notes that not all of the materials referred to in the Rule 115 Motion and/or contained in the Annexes thereto can in fact be considered as meeting the formal requirements for submission of additional evidence to be considered for admission on appeal.

19. In particular, pursuant to Article 7 of the Practice Direction,[46] the following documents should fall out of the consideration by the Appeals Chamber since they were either not annexed to the Rule 115 Motion and not later submitted with the Corrigendum or were annexed to the Rule 115 Motion but not listed therein and the Rule 115 Motion thus contains no arguments as to their admissibility: "Affidavit from Dr. Shimamungu Eugène, Expert in Kinyarwanda language and in political speech on the use of certain terms imputed to the Appellant"[47]; "Fax of 6 February 1994 on the election of JBB as President of Gisenyi";[48] "CDR Internal Rules".[49] Similarly, the Appeals Chamber notes that Annexes 1[50] and 2[51] to the Rule 115 Motion are referred to by the Appellant as relevant to the respective request for leave to submit additional evidence on appeal in respect of Judge Bruguière's Report. While he admits that these two documents "fall within the generic description" contained in the Rule 115 Motion,[52] he persists that they "should be considered as evidence which may undermine the convictions"[53] but does not make any argument as to their admissibility in his Rule 115 Motion.[54] The [41] The Appeals Chamber notes that the first time that the Appellant referred to his Motion of 29 March 2004, since the Order of 26 January 2005, was in his current Rule 115 Motion, justifying the delay by the fact that the current counsel for the Appellant only "started effectively his work" in April 2005 and that "no coherent or reasoned decision could be taken in relation to the motion for additional evidence until the Appeal Brief had been filed" (Rule 115 Motion, paras 5 – 6). The Appeals Chamber is not convinced by these arguments.

[45] See paras 13 and 15-16 above.
[46] Pursuant to this provision, a motion applying to present additional evidence shall contain:
"(a) a precise list of the evidence the party is seeking to have presented;
(b) an identification of each ground of appeal to which the evidence relates and, where applicable, a request to submit any additional grounds of appeal based on such evidence;
(c) arguments in relation to the requirements of non-availability at trial, relevance and credibility;
(d) arguments in relation to the requirement that the admission of the additional evidence could have been a decisive factor in reaching the decision made by the Trial Chamber to which the additional evidence is directed;
(e) an appendix with copies of the evidence the party is applying to present before the Appeals Chamber".

[53] Ibid., para. 11.

Appellant re-filed these documents in his Corrigendum to the Rule 115 Motion despite a clear indication of the discrepancy between the contents of his Rule 115 Motion and Annexes thereto made to him by the Pre-Appeal Judge.[55] Therefore, the Appeals Chamber does not consider Annex 1 and Annex 2 as documents tendered as additional evidence on appeal.

20. With regard to the report allegedly issued by the French juge d'instruction Bruguière on the results of the investigation with regard to the President Habyarimana's plane crash on 6 April 1994, the Appellant affirms that he "cannot succeed in obtaining" it by himself and prays the Appeals Chamber to request the said report from the French authorities under Article 28 of the Statute of the Tribunal "or summon Judge Bruguière to appear as a witness before the Appeals Chamber".[56] The Appeals Chamber recalls that it has "the authority to summon a witness, in appropriate circumstances, to testify before the Chamber so as to facilitate the effective conduct of appeal proceedings, and especially Rule 115's power to admit additional evidence."[57] Similarly, the Appeals Chamber has the power to request a State to provide judicial assistance by producing certain evidence under Article 28 (2) (b) of the Statute of the Tribunal. However, the purpose of Rule 115 is to deal with the situation

> "where a party is in possession of material that was not before the court of first instance and which is additional evidence of a fact or issue litigated at trial."[58]

The Rule does not permit a party to merely request a particular person to be summoned as a witness to give evidence or that a State be requested to produce certain documentation.[59] In this case, the Appellant has failed to provide material in his possession that would be admissible as additional evidence directed to a specific finding of fact of the Trial Chamber.[60] Therefore, the Appellant's request falls out of the scope of a motion filed pursuant to Rule 115.

21. Finally, the Appellant tenders a number of documents (all referred to in the Rule 115 Motion but not attached as Annexes),[61] which were in fact already admitted into evidence at trial and therefore do not constitute "additional evidence" to be admitted in this case. The Appeal Chamber notes that it is consequently not necessary to examine them in considering the Rule 115 Motion.[62]

B. Late Filing of the Rule 115 Motion

22. As to the remainder of the material tendered as additional evidence on appeal, under Rule 115 (A) of the Rules, a motion to present additional evidence on appeal must be filed "not later than seventy-five days from the date of the judgement", which in this case was 16 February 2004, "unless good cause is shown for further delay."

23. The Appellant submits that his current Lead Counsel could only start his work effectively in April 2005, that the Defence team only became complete with the appointment of the legal assistant on 13 June 2005, and that the legal assistant could only start working on documents in Kinya-rwanda language around 20 August 2005.[63] He adds that by the time the Defence team became familiarised with the case and the Tribunal's procedures, the priority had to be given to the preparation of the Amended Notice of Appeal and Amended Appellant's Brief.[64] It was in the course of preparation of these filings, that the Appellant could identify "numerous materials of exculpatory nature which were not put before the Trial Chamber and which could have had great impact on its findings and its judgement and sentence for the benefit of the accused".[65] Finally, he requests that the Rule 115 Motion be considered as validly filed in the interests of justice.[66]

24. The Prosecution asserts that the explanation provided by the Appellant is unsatisfactory and unconvincing given, in particular, the "Appellant's knowledge of his own case and appeal strategy" and the fact that the delay in the appointment of the Lead Counsel is "attributable to the Appellant's opposition to it".[67]

25. The Appeals Chamber considers that the Appellant has failed to show good cause for the late filing of his Rule 115 Motion. In the first place, he fails to establish why his current Lead Counsel was only able to begin effective work in this case in April 2005 although he had been appointed in November 2004, the stay on proceedings in this case was lifted on 26 January 2005, and the appointment of Lead Counsel was confirmed by the Appeals Chamber on 4 February 2005. Furthermore, the Appellant fails to provide a convincing explanation for why the legal assistant was only able to begin working on documents in Kinyarwanda at the end of August 2005 even though appointed in June 2005, and why the Appellant himself was not able to assist his Lead Counsel in dealing with such documents.

26. Even if the Appeals Chamber were to count the seventy-five days period from the date on which the Appellant claims that the current Defence team was complete (13 June 2005), such that the deadline for filing the Rule 115 Motion would have been 27 August 2005, the Rule 115 Motion would still have been filed 123 days late. The Appeals Chamber reiterates that

> "a Counsel, when accepting assignment as Lead Counsel in a case before the Tribunal, is under an obligation to give absolute priority to observe the time limits as foreseen in the Rules."[68]

The Appeals Chamber is not convinced by the Appellant's argument that the Defence team could not file a timely motion for admission of additional evidence under Rule 115 because it had to focus on preparation of the Amended Notice of Appeal and Amended Appellant's Brief. The Appeals Chamber recalls that the Appellant was granted generous extensions of time for filing these submissions as early as May 2005, such that both were accepted as timely filed on 12 October 2005.[69] The additional time allowed for preparing the Amended Notice of Appeal and Amended Appellant's Brief should have allowed for the Appellant to work with his Defence team to prepare a timely motion pursuant to Rule 115.

27. On the basis of the foregoing, the Appeals Chamber finds that the Appellant has not shown good cause for the delay.

IV. Disposition

28. For the foregoing reasons, the Appeals Chamber DISMISSES the Motion for Clarification in its entirety as frivolous and imposes sanctions on the Appellant's Counsel pursuant to Rule 73 (F) in the form of non-payment of fees and costs associated with it; FINDS that the Motion of 29 March 2004 was abandoned by the Appellant and dismisses it as such; and DISMISSES the Rule 115 Motion in its entirety.

Ferdinand Nahimana et al., Decision on Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Motion for Leave to Present Additional Evidence pursuant to Rule 115, 5 May 2006 (ICTR-99-52)

1. The Appeals Chamber of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States, between 1 January 1994 and 31 December 1994 ("Appeals Chamber" and "Tribunal", respectively) is seized of two motions filed by Appellant Hassan Ngeze ("Appellant"):

- "Appellant Hassan Ngeze's Motion for the Approval of Further Investigation of the Specific Information Relating to the Additional Evidence of Potential Witness – Jean Bosco Barayagwiza (Co-Appellant)" filed on 6 January 2006 ("First Motion");
- "Appellant Hassan Ngeze's Motion for the Approval of Further Investigation of the Specific Information Relating to the Additional Evidence of Potential Witness – the then Corporal Habimana" filed on 16 January 2006 ("Second Motion").

2. The Prosecution responded to the First and the Second Motions on 16 and 25 January 2006, respectively.[1] The Appellant's replies were filed on 26 and 30 January 2006, respectively.[2]

3. The Appeals Chamber notes that the Reply to the First Motion was filed by the Appellant six days late[3] and that no good cause has been shown for such delay. Accordingly, the Appeals Chamber will not consider the Reply to the First Motion.

I. Applicable law

4. The Appeals Chamber recalls that an appeal pursuant to Article 24 of the Statute of the Tribunal ("Statute") is not a trial de novo,[4] and cannot be viewed as an opportunity to remedy any "failures or oversights" by a party during the pre-trial and trial phases.[5] For these reasons, investigations should be carried out during the pre-trial and trial stages.[6]

5. Further, according to Rule 115 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the Tribunal ("Rules"), for additional evidence to be admissible on appeal, the following requirements must be met. The Appeals Chamber must find "that the additional evidence was not available at trial and is relevant and credible." When determining the availability at trial, the Appeals Chamber will be mindful of the following principles:

> [T]he party in question must show that it sought to make "appropriate use of all mechanisms of protection and compulsion available under the Statute and the Rules of the International Tribunal to bring evidence […] before the Trial Chamber." In this connection, Counsel is expected to apprise the Trial Chamber of all the difficulties he or she encounters in obtaining the evidence in question, including any problems of intimidation, and his or her inability to locate certain witnesses. The obligation to apprise the Trial Chamber constitutes not only a first step in exercising due diligence but also a means of self-protection in that non-cooperation of the prospective witness is recorded contemporaneously.[7]

[6] The Registrar generally does not fund investigations at the appeal stage (Decision on Appellant Ferdinand Nahimana's Motion for Assistance from the Registrar in the Appeals Phase, 3 May 2005 ("Decision on Assistance"), para. 2; Decision on Investigation, p. 3; Decision of 4 October 2005, p. 4; Decision on Six Motions, para. 5). However, in an exceptional case, the Appeals Chamber may order the Registrar to fund investigations at the appeal stage, if the moving party shows, for example, that it is in possession of specific information that needs to be investigated further in order to avoid a miscarriage of justice, and that this specific information was not available at trial through the exercise of due diligence (Decision on Assistance, para. 3; Decision on Six Motions, para. 5).

With regard to relevance, the Appeals Chamber will consider whether the proposed evidence sought to be admitted relates to a material issue. As to credibility, the Appeals Chamber will admit evidence at this stage only if it appears to be reasonably capable of belief or reliance. Admission of the evidence is without prejudice to the later determination of the weight that the new evidence will be afforded.[8]

6. Once it has been determined that the additional evidence meets these conditions, the Appeals Chamber will determine whether the evidence "could have been a decisive factor in reaching the decision at trial."[9] To satisfy this, the evidence must be such that it could have had an impact on the verdict, i.e. it, in the case of a request by a defendant, it could have shown that a conviction was unsafe.[10] Accordingly, the additional evidence must be directed at a specific finding of fact related to a conviction or to the sentence.

7. The Appeals Chamber has considered that, where the additional evidence is relevant and credible, but was available at trial, or could have been discovered through the exercise of due diligence, the evidence may still be admitted if the moving party establishes that its exclusion would amount to a miscarriage of justice, inasmuch as, had it been adduced at trial, it would have had an impact on the verdict.[11]

8. The Appeals Chamber recalls that, whether the additional evidence was available at trial or not, it must always be assessed in the context of the evidence presented at trial, and not in isolation.[12]

II. FIRST MOTION

9. In the First Motion, the Appellant requests the Appeals Chamber to "allow further investigation of the specific information in possession of the Appellant relating to the additional evidence of witness Jean Bosco Barayagwiza in order to avoid miscarriage of justice and enable him to file motion to present additional evidence of the potential witness Jean Bosco Barayagwiza which was not available at trial and could not have been discovered despite the exercise of due diligence".[13]

The Prosecution opposes this request and submits that the First Motion should be dismissed in its entirety.[14]

A. Submissions of the Parties

10. The Appellant submits that the new evidence that could be provided by Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza if the First Motion were granted, is crucial to the issue of conspiracy between the three co-Appellants in the present case, notably with regard to the Trial Chamber's finding that "the accused Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza acted as the lynchpin among the three Accused, collaborating closely both with Nahimana and Ngeze".[15] More specifically, he claims that Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza "is ready and willing to testify before the Appeals Chamber" and, if allowed to do so, would provide details and clarifications concerning his role in the CDR and the RTLM activities and thereby undermine the abovementioned finding of the Trial Chamber.[16] The Appellant further submits that this evidence is particularly relevant to the "Appellant's connection with the alleged criminal acts narrated by witness AHA" and would not only have an impact on the verdict but would also "have the effect of demolishing the credibility of the said witness AHA".[17]

11. The Appellant avers that this evidence was not available to him at trial and could not be obtained through the exercise of due diligence due to the "non accessibility" of Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza.[18] The Appellant requests the Appeals Chamber to authorize him to take a written statement of Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza with a view to filing a motion pursuant to Rule 115 of the Rules requesting the Appeals Chamber to summon Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza as a witness on appeal.[19] The Appellant affirms that such exercise would not result in any expenses to the Registry nor would it prejudice the Prosecution.[20]

12. The Prosecution responds that the First Motion does not meet the requirements that would justify the request for further investigation, in particular, because the Appellant has neither demonstrated the existence of exceptional circumstances, nor adequately addressed the "'specific information' to be further investigated".[21] According to the Prosecution, the First Motion suggests a "fishing expedition" since it is unclear what further investigation is requested, what information is sought, or, what is the source of such information.[22]

13. Further, the Prosecution submits that the alleged evidence is "neither credible nor reliable, nor could it or would it have any impact on the verdict under appeal".[23] It also argues that the Appellant has not demonstrated that the tendered evidence was not available at trial or was not discoverable through due diligence.[24] In particular, it points out that during the cross-examination by the Appellant's Counsel in November 2000, Witness AHA testified at length as to his relationship with the Appellant and Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza as well as about their positions in RTLM, CDR and Kangura.[25] The Prosecution also refers to the fact that the Appellant has had access to and discussions with Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza, the purported source of the additional evidence.[26] Thus, the requested investigation cannot result in identifying any new and specific information that was not known to the Appellant during the trial.[27]

14. Moreover, the Prosecution submits that compelling one co-accused to testify for another co-accused in the same case would constitute a breach of the accused's right to silence in terms of Article 20 (4) (g) of the Statute.[28] It concludes that it is a matter for Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza to decide whether he wishes to cooperate with the Appellant's Counsel and that the Appeals Chamber cannot compel him to do so.[29]

B. Discussion

15. As a preliminary matter, the Appeals Chamber notes that the subject of the First Motion is not clear.[30] The Appeals Chamber will only examine the Appellant's request for obtaining a written statement from Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza, since only that request is explicitly formulated in the First Motion. Also, the Appeals Chamber considers that the Appellant's Counsel does not need the Appeals Chamber's authorization or an order from the Appeals Chamber to obtain a statement from Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza. In this regard, the Appeals Chamber notes the Appellant's submission that Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza is prepared to provide a written statement to him,[31] as well as the fact that Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza is a detainee in the United Nations Detention Facility in Arusha, not subject to any restrictive or protective measures that would preclude the Appellant's Counsel from taking a statement from him. Furthermore, the Appeals Chamber notes that the Appellant submits that taking the statement from Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza would not result in any expenses for the Registry of the Tribunal.

16. In any event, noting that the Appellant seeks to obtain Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's statement with a view to seeking leave to present additional evidence, the Appeals Chamber recalls that under Rule 115 (A) of the Rules, a motion for admission of additional evidence on appeal must be filed within seventy-five days from the date of the trial judgement, unless good cause is shown for the delay. The Appeals Chamber understands the Appellant to submit that good cause for the delay of such a filing more than two years after the Trial Judgement[32] is that, in light of Jean-Bosco Baraygwiza's refusal to participate in the trial, there was no accessibility to him until recently, even through his own counsel.[33] However, the Appeals Chamber notes that the Appellant has not indicated how and when he was first able to gain access to Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza for evidence or information. Even if Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's absence during the trial were to be considered by the Appeals Chamber as justifying the fact that such evidence was neither available at trial nor could have been obtained through the exercise of due diligence, the Appellant has failed to show why such a request could not have been submitted in time during the appeals proceedings. In this regard, the Appeals Chamber notes that Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza has actively participated in the preparation of his own appeal since the beginning of the appeals proceedings in early 2004.

[32] The Appeals Chamber recalls that the Trial Judgement in this case was rendered on 3 December 2003.
[33] First Motion, paras 3-4.

17. The Appeals Chamber is also not persuaded by the Appellant's argument that the information referred to in the First Motion was only first obtained partly through issues raised in the confidential "Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Motion for Leave to Present Additional Evidence (Rule 115)" of 28 December 2005 ("Barayagwiza's Rule 115 Motion").[34] The paragraphs of the said motion referred to by the Appellant[35] only address general issues with regard to Witness AHA's testimony at trial and Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's potential testimony on appeal concerning his role in the events which occurred in Rwanda in 1990 – 1994. The Appeals Chamber considers that the Appellant has failed to establish that Barayagwiza's Rule 115 Motion contains new information pertinent for the Appellant's case that was unknown to the Appellant before the date on which it was filed, thereby preventing him from filing his First Motion until 6 January 2006. Therefore, the Appeals Chamber finds that the filing of Barayagwiza's Rule 115 Motion at the end of December 2005 also does not constitute good cause for the late submission of the First Motion.

18. In light of the findings above, the Appeals Chamber does not consider it necessary to address the other arguments made by the Appellant.

III. Second Motion

19. The Appellant requests the Appeals Chamber to authorize further investigation of information relating to

> "the additional evidence of potential witness Habimana in order to avoid miscarriage of justice and enable him to file motion to present additional evidence of the potential witness Habimana",[36] which he cannot do without conducting further interviews of Habimana and obtaining a written statement from him with the leave of the Appeals Chamber.[37] He further requests the Appeals Chamber to allow him to interview former Defence investigators Joseph Nzakunda and Augustine Tumwesige.[38] The Prosecution objects to the Second Motion and prays the Appeals Chamber to dismiss it in its entirety.[39]

A. Submissions of the Parties

20. The Appellant submits that he has "specific information" that the then Corporal Habimana informed the Appellant's former Defence investigators that he was now ready and willing to testify that

> "during the period between 6th April and 9th April 1994 while he was on duty as Corporal at the military camp at Gisenyi under the Command of the then Colonel Anatole Nsengiyumva, he witnessed […] the Appellant in military custody at the said camp during the said dates".[40]

The Appellant argues that such evidence would undermine the credibility of Prosecution Witnesses Serushago, EB and AHI, as well as impact the Trial Chamber's finding with regard to the Appellant's alibi.[41]

[40] Second Motion, para. 1.
[41] Ibid., paras 3, 4 with references to the Trial Judgement, paras 775, 812, 824 and 829.

21. The Appellant submits that this information was neither available to him earlier nor could it have been obtained through exercise of due diligence, since

> "the said Corporal Habimana had left the country [] when the RPF took over, and was presumed to have died during [c]holera epidemic in Congo".[42]

The Appellant argues that non-admission of such evidence would result in further miscarriage of justice.[43]

22. The Prosecution responds that in the Second Motion, the Appellant has not shown the existence of exceptional circumstances that would justify the request for further investigation.[44] It adds that no new and specific information that was unknown to the Appellant during his trial has been identified in the Second Motion as the Appellant submitted the same material allegation at trial through a number of witnesses and his own testimony.[45]

23. As to the reliability of the alleged information, the Prosecution asserts that it is incredible that > "more than 10 years after the events, one Corporal Habimana, who has been allegedly living outside Rwanda, […] would now be able to recall the precise dates and time he saw the Appellant in military custody, among other detainees".[46]

The Prosecution also notes that the purportedly new information had been collected by two former investigators of the Appellant who were dismissed from the case in February 2001, for dishonesty.[47]

24. It further argues that the

> "[p]urported evidence needs not be further investigated as it could and would not have any impact on the verdicts under appeal", but would rather add to the material inconsistencies found by the Trial Chamber.[48]

25. Finally, the Prosecution adds that the Second Motion "can only be understood as a request for approval to seek funding from the Registrar"[49] in order "to go out and verify what amounts to nothing more tangible than rumor and innuendo" and is thus framed to suggest a "fishing expedition"[50]. It insists that the

> "requested investigation would be redundant and a further waste of the time and resources of the Tribunal".[51]

26. The Appellant replies that he is not in possession of any more specific information with regard to his request and that is why he is seeking authorization to conduct a further investigation.[52] He adds that it was not possible for him to discover the information

> "until recently when the said potential witness expressed his wish to testify before the Appeals Chamber".[53]

The Appellant claims that, if authorized, the requested investigation will be carried out by the existing and available members of the Defence team and would not entail, at this stage, any funding from the Tribunal.[54] Finally, he argues that "any discussion about the application of Rule 115 at this stage is premature, irrelevant and ought not to be taken into consideration for the purpose of the present motion".[55]

B. Discussion

27. The Appeals Chamber first notes, as it did with the Appellant's First Motion, that generally, no authorization is needed for the Appellant's Counsel to contact potential witnesses with the view of obtaining written statements from them, unless any such witnesses are subject to specific protective measures. Since the Appellant neither requests any funding from the Registry of the International Tribunal for such "further investigation" nor justifies why his Counsel would be unable to collect such information on his behalf without intervention of the Appeals Chamber, there was no reason for the Appellant to seize the Appeals Chamber with such request at this stage.

28. Likewise, considering that the Appellant seeks in the Second Motion to obtain the potential witness' statement with a view to seeking leave to present additional evidence on appeal under Rule 115 of the Rules,[56] the Appeals Chamber finds it appropriate, as it did with the First Motion, to associate the request for further investigation with the requirements for timely filing of a motion under Rule 115.[57]

29. The Appeals Chamber notes that submission of the additional evidence that the Appellant seeks to obtain in the Second Motion would take place more than two years after the Trial Judgement was rendered, which makes the filing of the Second Motion untimely. The Appeals Chamber recalls that, in order to demonstrate that it was not able to comply with the time limit set in Rule 115 of the Rules for filing a motion for additional evidence within 75 days from the date of the rendering of the trial judgement, the moving party is required to demonstrate good cause for the delay and submit the motion in question "as soon as possible after it became aware of the existence of the evidence sought to be admitted".[58] The Appellant has failed to show that he has complied with these requirements.

30. In this regard, the Appeals Chamber considers that the Second Motion contains no indication as to how and when the Appellant was able to gain access to the purported information. Indeed, the Appellant contented himself with fairly general allegations as to unavailability of such information at earlier stages without specifying how, when and where the potential witness became available to the Appellant's former investigators or how such information was further transmitted to the Appellant and/or his counsel. Moreover, the Appeals Chamber reiterates that the relevant time is when the witness became available to give evidence to the moving party, and not when a witness statement was in fact taken.[59]

31. In light of the foregoing, the Appeals Chamber considers it unnecessary to address the remainder of the Appellant's arguments in his Second Motion.

[57] See Section I on Applicable Law; see also para. 17 above. It is furthermore recalled that, when seized with motions for funding of investigation in appeal, it is relevant for the Appeals Chamber to consider whether it is likely that the evidence thereby obtained would meet the requirements for subsequent admission under Rule 115 (Sylvestre Gacumbitsi v. The Prosecutor, Case N°ICTR-01-64-A, Decision on the Appellant's Rule 115 Motion and Related Motion by the Prosecution, 21 October 2005, para. 13).

THE APPEALS CHAMBER of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States, between 1 January 1994 and 31 December 1994 ("Appeals Chamber" and "Tribunal", respectively),

BEING SEIZED of "The Appellant Jean Bosco-Barayagwiza's [sic] Extremely Urgent Motion Requesting Privileged Access to the Appellant without the Attendance of Lead Counsel" filed on 31 July 2006 ("Appellant" and "Motion", respectively);

NOTING that the Prosecution has filed no response to the Motion;

NOTING that the Appellant is currently detained in the United Nations Detention Facility in Arusha, Tanzania ("UNDF");

NOTING that the Appellant requests the Appeals Chamber to grant his Legal Assistant privileged access to him in the UNDF, in the absence of the Lead Counsel, for a period of three weeks from 19 August 2006;[1]

FURTHER NOTING that the Appellant's Counsel submits that such privileged access is necessary in order to ensure that the reference books are prepared for the appeal, including a "collation of a number of legal articles, books and text references", "a task which need [not] be performed by Lead Counsel";[2]

NOTING that the Appellant's Counsel intends to visit his client in the UNDF for two weeks in August 2006, but submits that during this time, he will be working on the merits of the appeal, "particularly preparing for the oral hearing" and will not have sufficient time to work on reference books;[3]

ALSO NOTING that the Appellant maintains that similar requests have previously been denied by the Registry in the past, and that – in light of "the urgency of this situation" and the fact that "the President is currently in Norway" – "the only recourse available is to make a direct request to the Appeals Chamber itself";[4]

NOTING that Rule 65 of the Rules Covering the Detention of Persons Awaiting Trial or Appeal Before the Tribunal or Otherwise Detained on the Authority of the Tribunal ("Detention Rules")[5] governs privileged communications between the Appellant and his Counsel and that, in the absence of Lead or Co-Counsel, legal assistants are generally allowed non-privileged visitations under Rule 61 of the Detention Rules;[6]

[3] Ibid., para. 5.
[4] Ibid., para. 6.
[5] Adopted on 5 June 1998.
[6] Visits to the UNDF under Rule 65 are subject to the same security controls as are imposed under Rule 61 of the Rules of Detention. However, communications between the Counsel and the detainee under the privileged regime of Rule 65 are conducted "in the sight but not within the hearing, either direct or indirect, of the staff of the Detention Unit". Besides, the general policy of the Registrar of the Tribunal has been that Defence legal assistants visiting the detainees under Rule 61, are not allowed inter alia to bring and use a portable computer and other equipment. (Cf. Status Conference, T. 7 April 2006, pp 10-12).

RECALLING that, as has been repeatedly reiterated in the present case,[7] pursuant to Rule 3 of the Detention Rules, the Commanding Officer of the UNDF has primary responsibility for all aspects of the daily management of the Detention Unit, including communications and visitations, and that, pursuant to Rules 82 and 83 of the Detention Rules, when a detainee is not satisfied with the response of the Commanding Officer to a specific request in that regard, he or she has the right to make a written complaint to the Registrar who shall forward it to the President of the Tribunal;

RECALLING that the Appeals Chamber has the statutory duty to ensure the fairness of the proceedings on appeal[8] and, thus, has jurisdiction to review decisions of the Tribunal's Registrar and President under the Detention Rules where they are closely related to issues involving the fairness of proceedings on appeal but that such review is ordinarily available only after a detainee has followed the requisite complaints procedure in the Detention Rules;[9]

NOTING that the Defence Counsel and Detention Management Section of the Tribunal have informed the pre-appeal Judge in the present case that, normally in appeal proceedings, the Defence teams are authorized to travel to Arusha on a limited number of occasions; however, the Registrar, mindful of the fact that the Appellant is not represented by the same Defence team as at trial, has already allowed frequent visits of the Appellant's Lead Counsel, Co-Counsel and Legal Assistant to the UNDF;[10]

NOTING that the briefing on the merits in the present case is complete;

NOTING that no oral hearing has been scheduled by the Appeals Chamber in the immediate future;

CONSIDERING that the Appellant has neither explained why his Legal Assistant needs to start working on the reference books from 19 August 2006 nor why his request would not be treated fairly or in a timely manner by the competent authorities of the Tribunal under the Detention Rules such that it must be considered now, as an urgent matter, by the Appeals Chamber contrary to established procedure;

CONSIDERING, consequently, that because the Appellant has not exhausted the procedure made available to him under the Detention Rules for consideration of his request, the Appeals Chamber will not consider the merits of that request;

FINDING, accordingly, that the Motion is frivolous and abusive in the sense of Article 73 (F) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the Tribunal;

CONSIDERING that if, after having followed the established procedure, the Appellant considers that his right to fair proceedings has been infringed with regard to his request presented in the Motion at issue here, he can, at that time, raise the matter with the Appeals Chamber;

Vidoje Blagojević and Dragan Jokić, Decision on Motion of Dragan Jokić for Leave to File Third Amended Notice of Appeal and Amended Appellate Brief, 26 June 2006 (IT-02-60)

2. The Prosecution responded to the Motion on 16 March 2006 requesting the Appeals Chamber to dismiss it in its entirety and expunge it from the record.[3] The Appellant filed his reply out of time on 24 March 2006[4] without providing any reasons for the late filing.[5] Accordingly, the Appeals Chamber finds the Reply to have been filed untimely and will not consider the submissions contained therein.

3. The Appeals Chamber is also seized of "The Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Motion for Leave to Amend the Notice of Appeal in the Light of the Decision of the Appeals Chamber dated 14/11/2005" filed by the Appellant on 5 July 2006 ("Motion of 5 July 2006"), in which he seeks to have his Notice of Appeal amended by substituting it with the amended notice of appeal annexed to

The Appeals Chamber notes that the Prosecution gives no reason as to why the Response to Motion of 6 March 2006 or the present decision need to be confidential and finds that there is no apparent reason for the confidential classification of the Response to Motion of 6 March 2006, since no protected witnesses or materials are involved. Consequently, both the Response to Motion of 6 March 2006 and the present decision should be public.

[5] The Appeals Chamber notes that, pursuant to paragraph 12 of the Practice Direction on Procedure for the Filing of Written Submissions in Appeal Proceedings before the Tribunal of 16 September 2002, a reply to a motion submitted during the appeals from judgement must be filed "within four days of the filing of the response", which means that the Appellant's Reply should have been filed no later than 20 March 2006, unless good cause is shown for the delay.

the Motion of 5 July 2006.[6] The Prosecution filed its Response on 17 July 2006, requesting that the Motion of 5 July 2006 be dismissed and expunged from the record.[7] The Appellant did not file a reply.

4. Finally, the Appeals Chamber is seized of "The Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Corrigendum Motion Relating to the Appeal Brief of 12th October 2005" filed by the Appellant on 7 July 2006, in which he applies to bring corrections to the Appeal Brief of 12 October 2005 ("Motion of 7 July 2006"). The Prosecution did not file a response.

I. Procedural Background

5. Trial Chamber I rendered its Judgement in this case on 3 December 2003.[8] The Appellant filed a first notice of appeal on 22 April 2004,[9] which was amended on 27 April 2004.[10] His initial Appellant's brief was filed on 25 June 2004.[11]

6. The proceedings in relation to the Appellant were stayed from 19 May 2004[12] through 26 January 2005,[13] pending the assignment of a new lead counsel. The current Lead Counsel was assigned to the Appellant by the Registrar on 30 November 2004, and on 19 January 2005, the Appeals Chamber dismissed the Appellant's challenge to this assignment.[14] The Appellant's request for reconsideration of the Decision of 19 January 2005 was dismissed by the Appeals Chamber on 4 February 2005.[15]

7. Pursuant to the decisions of 17 May 2005[16] and 6 September 2005,[17] both his Notice of Appeal and Appellant's Brief were filed by the Appellant on 12 October 2005.

8. The Appeals Chamber recalls its Decision of 14 November 2005, by which it rejected the "Amended Notice of Appeal", "Corrections to Appeal Brief" and confidential "Appellant's Appeal Brief" filed on 7 November 2005, on the grounds that the Appellant had not properly sought leave to amend his grounds of appeal as prescribed by the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the Tribunal ("Rules"), and thus had not demonstrated good cause for the Appeals Chamber to authorize such amendments.[18] In light of that decision, the Appeals Chamber will not consider any arguments of the parties in relation to the contents of the rejected filings.

II. Applicable Law

9. Pursuant to Rule 108 of the Rules, the Appeals Chamber "may, on good cause being shown by motion, authorise a variation of the grounds of appeal" contained in the notice of appeal. Such motions should be submitted "as soon as possible after identifying the new alleged error"[19] of the Trial Chamber to be included in the notice of appeal or after discovering any other basis for seeking a variation to the notice of appeal. Generally,

> "a request to amend a notice of appeal must, at least, explain precisely what amendments are sought and why, with respect to each such amendment, the 'good cause' requirement of Rule 108 is satisfied".[20]

10. It has been held that the concept of "good cause" under this provision encompasses both good reason for including the new or amended grounds of appeal sought and good reason showing why those grounds were not included (or were not correctly phrased) in the original notice of appeal.[21] In its cases, the Appeals Chamber has relied upon a variety of factors in determining whether "good cause" exists, including (i) the fact that the variation is so minor that it does not affect the content of the notice of appeal; (ii) the fact that the opposing party would not be prejudiced by the variation or has not objected to it; and (iii) the fact that the variation would bring the notice of appeal into conformity with the appeal brief.[22] Where an appellant seeks a substantive amendment broadening the scope of the appeal, "good cause" might also, under some circumstances, be established.[23] In such instances, each amendment is to be considered in light of the particular circumstances of the case.[24]

11. The jurisprudence of the Tribunal establishes that the "good cause" requirement must be interpreted restrictively at late stages in the appeal proceeding when amendments would necessitate a substantial slowdown in the progress of the appeal – for instance, when they would require briefs already filed to be revised and resubmitted.[25] To hold otherwise, would leave appellants free to change their appeal strategy and essentially restart the appeal process at will (including after they have had the advantage of reviewing the arguments in a response brief), interfering with the expeditious administration of justice and prejudicing the other parties to the case.[26]

12. In the interest of protecting the right of convicted defendants to a fair appeal, the Appeals Chamber has, in limited circumstances, permitted amendments even where there was no good cause for failure to include the new or amended grounds in the original notice-that is, where the failure resulted solely from counsel negligence or inadvertence. In such instances, the Appeals Chamber has permitted amendments which are of substantial importance to the success of the appeal such as to lead to a miscarriage of justice if they were excluded.[27] In these exceptional cases, the Appeals Chamber has reasoned, the interests of justice require that an appellant not be held responsible for the failures of counsel.

13. In sum, variations to the notice of appeal will only be allowed (i) for good cause reasons within the meaning of Rule 108, as defined by the above-discussed principles; (ii) if they remedy the counsel's negligence or inadvertence and are of substantial importance to the success of the appeal; or (iii) if they otherwise correct ambiguity or error made by counsel and do not unduly delay the appeal proceedings, as, for example, in the case of minor and non-substantive modifications. With respect to the revisions to the appeal brief (or, in the alternative, supplemental briefing), they will be permitted only (i) as necessary to reflect the amendments to the notice of appeal; or (ii) as necessary to correct ambiguity or error in the counsel's filings, without unduly delaying the appeal proceedings.[28]

14. Finally, the Appeals Chamber notes that it is the Appellant's burden to demonstrate that each amendment should be permitted under the standards outlined above, including establishing lack of prejudice to the Prosecution.[29]

III. Discussion

A. Motion of 6 March 2006

Submissions of the Parties

15. The Appellant submits that the Motion of 6 March 2006 is filed in accordance with the Decision of 14 November 2005 and seeks leave to file new grounds of appeal in order to remedy "gaps identified in the manner in which the points of law and fact have been raised in the Appeals Brief".[30] He asserts that, after having conducted a review of all the material filed to date, it has become apparent to his Defence team that "there are new matters of law and fact that need to be covered in the new Grounds".[31] He further argues that it is > "a matter of fairness that he be given the opportunity to address those questions in writing, at least in their broad terms, before going into more details during the oral hearing".[32]

He concludes that if his request to submit the additional grounds is denied, "a miscarriage of justice is likely to occur".[33]

16. The Appellant argues that if leave is granted to file the new grounds of appeal, it is unlikely that any prejudice will be caused to the Prosecution because the oral hearing is not scheduled for the immediate future. He adds that the additional grounds contained in the Motion of 6 March 2006 would [30] Motion of 6 March 2006, para. 1. The Appeals Chamber understands the Appellant to submit that the Decision of 14 November 2005 "left the door open to the Appellant to file a motion requesting leave to present" additional grounds of appeal and not "additional evidence" as stated in his Motion of 6 March 2006 (emphasis added).

[33] Id.

facilitate the understanding of his case for "each and every party".[34] In addition, the Appellant seeks leave to amend the Notice of Appeal accordingly.[35]

17. The Prosecution objects to the Motion of 6 March 2006 and submits that the Appellant continues to misapply Rule 108 of the Rules by submitting the additional grounds without having previously sought leave to amend the Notice of Appeal.[36]

18. The Prosecution argues that even if the Motion of 6 March 2006 was to be treated as requesting leave to amend the Notice of Appeal, it would not meet the "good cause" requirement under Rule 108.[37] In this respect, it contends that the Appellant (i) is merely repeating his arguments already contained in his Notice of Appeal; (ii) "is not correcting any minor errors or providing a precise formulation of any ground of appeal"; and (iii) "is not seeking to remedy any inadvertence or negligence of his counsel".[38] The Prosecution adds that denial of the Motion of 6 March 2006 would not lead to a miscarriage of justice since the newly submitted grounds of appeal would either have no bearing on the Trial Judgement or they are already developed in the Notice of Appeal and the Appellant's Brief.[39]

Analysis

19. The Appeals Chamber notes that the Appellant does not request to amend any of his grounds of appeal in the Notice of Appeal and Appellant's Brief, but simply submits that the seven additional grounds should be included anew. The Appeals Chamber further notes that instead of seeking to demonstrate "good cause" for submitting the additional grounds of appeal at this late stage of the proceedings on appeal, the Appellant simply attaches the new grounds of appeal that he seeks to have admitted as part of the briefing.[40] With regard to the general assertion that it has been only recently that the Defence team realized that new issues of law and fact need to be addressed,[41] it is obvious that any amendment sought to any notice of appeal is the result of further analysis having been undertaken over the course of time and that this fact, taken alone, cannot constitute "good cause" for an amendment.[42] The Appellant merely suggests that a denial of the Motion of 6 March 2006 would result in a miscarriage of justice, without illustrating why this would happen or why he failed to include these arguments in his Notice of Appeal several months earlier. Therefore, it is apparent that the Motion of 6 March 2006 is devoid of any arguments in relation to the requirements prescribed by Rule 108 of the Rules and the jurisprudence of the Appeals Chamber. In this respect, the Appeals Chamber finds that the Motion of 6 March 2006 is frivolous.

20. However, in fairness to the Appellant, who should not be prejudiced because of any negligence or inadvertence by his Counsel in failing to include the submitted additional grounds,[43] the Appeals Chamber will examine them in order to determine whether they should be included because they are of substantial importance to the success of the appeal or are likely to otherwise correct ambiguity or error in the previous filings without unduly delaying the appeal proceedings.

21. As a preliminary matter, the Appeals Chamber notes that the Appellant seeks to have his Notice of Appeal modified only as a consequence of including the newly submitted grounds of appeal into his Appellant's Brief. Rule 108 of the Rules clearly applies to seeking a variation of the notice of appeal and, where leave is granted to amend the notice of appeal, the appellant may be granted leave to amend the appeals brief to reflect the amendment to the notice of appeal. Nevertheless, the Appeals Chamber will consider the Motion of 6 March 2006 as requesting the variation of grounds of appeal contained in both the Notice of Appeal and the Appellant's Brief simultaneously. Since the variations of the Appellant's Notice of Appeal sought by his Motion of 5 July 2006 are of a broader scope than the newly submitted grounds of appeal, the Appeals Chamber will address the former in a separate section of the present decision.[44]

Ground 1: Error in Law and Fact by Admitting Uncorroborated and/or Hearsay Evidence

22. The newly submitted Ground 1 refers to (i) allegedly erroneous admission of hearsay evidence not corroborated by direct evidence;[45] (ii) alleged "failure to be consistent in giving hearsay evidence more weight than direct testimonies in crucial areas of the evidence";[46] and (iii) allegedly erroneous admission of the testimony of a single un-corroborated witness.[47] The Prosecution responds that these issues are already dealt with in the Appellant's Brief.[48]

23. The Appeals Chamber notes that certain issues raised in the newly submitted Ground 1 are covered in the Appellant's Brief. For example, under his Grounds 8 and 9, the Appellant contests the Trial Chamber's reliance on the testimony of Witness AFX, including his evidence regarding a CDR meeting in 1993.[49] Ground 13 deals with the weight attached to the "single hearsay report" of the interview of Gaspard Gahigi conducted by Philippe Dahinden on the Appellant's role at the RTLM.[50] Ground 18 addresses the issue of reliance by the Trial Chamber on the "unsupported hearsay" "in the absence of any documentary evidence" with regard to the finding that the Appellant became President of the CDR without specifying the source of such hearsay evidence.[51] Ground 19 similarly contests the finding that the Appellant was President of CDR in Gisenyi prior to 1994 based "on nothing more than rumour and hearsay".[52] Under Ground 20, the Appellant argues that the finding of the Trial Chamber concerning the fact that the Appellant became "a member of the Executive Committee of CDR and more influential than President Bucyana" was based "entirely on rumour, or vague and unfounded information from dubious sources", including the testimony of Alison Des Forges, while the

[47] Motion of 6 March 2006, paras 13-14. authenticity of the only documentary evidence in this regard was not proved.[53] Further findings based on the testimony of Alison Des Forges are contested under Grounds 27 ("shouting match" with the US Ambassador Rawson) and 41 (the Appellant's role and influence within CDR).[54] Ground 23 includes arguments contesting the Trial Chamber's conclusion on the Appellant's participation in planning of the demonstration coordinated by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs based on the testimony of Witness AGK.[55] The reliance upon the uncorroborated testimony of Witness AHB with respect to the distribution of weapons in Mutura and Gisenyi is disputed under Ground 24.[56] The reliance on uncorroborated testimony of Witness ABC with regard to the Appellant's supervision of the roadblocks in Rugunga is argued under Ground 26.[57] Finally, with respect to the entire testimony of Witness FS, the Appellant generally suggests that it cannot be relied upon in determination of his guilt since this evidence was heard while the then Counsel did not engage in cross-examination or advance any submissions on his behalf.[58]

24. In this situation, where the newly submitted Ground 1 significantly overlaps with several existing grounds of appeal, the Appellant should have sought authorization to amend his existing grounds of appeal in order to specify or clarify them showing that previous pleadings failed to address these issues adequately and that correcting such failures will not unduly delay the proceedings on appeal or are necessary in order to avoid a miscarriage of justice.[59] In this respect, he should have identified with precision the new arguments that are of substantial importance to his appeal. The Appellant has not done so with respect to his allegedly new arguments as compared to the ones that are already before the Appeals Chamber. In looking at these arguments in the newly submitted Ground 1, which were already made in the Notice of Appeal and the Appellant's Brief, the Appeals Chamber does not conclude that there was any ambiguity or error, or otherwise negligence or inadvertence, in their original articulation.

25. Although the issue of the Trial Chamber's reliance on the testimony of Witnesses X, ABE, MK and AHB is not covered by the Appellant's Brief with respect to the certain specific findings referred to in the Motion of 6 March 2006, the Appeals Chamber does not consider that the addition of the newly submitted Ground 1 is of any substantial importance to the present appeal in this respect. In fact, without passing on the merits of the alleged error, which must be assumed for this purpose,[60] the newly submitted Ground 1 with regard to these witnesses, if successful, would not lead to reversal of the Appellant's convictions. Thus, failure to include this new ground in the Notice of Appeal and Appellant's Brief would not result in a miscarriage of justice for the Appellant. More specifically, the factual findings of the Trial Chamber on Barayagwiza having taken part in CDR meetings and demonstrations and supervised roadblocks,[61] which is the basis of its legal findings on genocide[62] and on direct and public incitement to commit genocide,[63] do not rely on the testimony of Witnesses X[64] and ABE with regard to the fact that the Appellant "sent away his wife" when he "learnt that she was of Tutsi ethnicity."[65] Rather, the Trial Chamber refers to the more relevant evidence of Witnesses AGK, AHI, AAM, AFX, and ABC.[66] Likewise, the factual finding of the Trial Chamber that the Appellant worked closely together with Ferdinand Nahimana and Hassan Ngeze in the management of

RTLM and in the CDR, respectively,[67] which is the basis of its legal finding on conspiracy to commit genocide,[68] does not rely solely on the testimony of Witness MK, but also on the evidence of Witnesses AGK and AHA, the testimony of the latter having been considered more significant.[69] Finally, with regard to Witness AHB's testimony concerning the date of the alleged delivery of arms at Kabari and Mizingo,[70] the respective factual finding of the Trial Chamber refers to the distribution of weapons in Gisenyi and, as noted above, is already dealt with in the Appellant's Brief.[71]

26. In light of the findings above, the request for leave to include the newly submitted Ground 1 in the Appellant's Brief and Notice of Appeal is denied.

Ground 2: Error in Failing to consider the Question of Credibility of Witnesses as Being Likely to be Affected by their Ethnicity, Political and or Ideological Motives

27. Under the newly submitted Ground 2, the Appellant submits that the Trial Chamber erred

> "in rejecting the arguments put forward by the accused that some witnesses gave biased evidence, and depositions and submitted partial expert reports because of their ethnic, political and/or […] ideological affiliations".[72]

The Prosecution responds that these issues are covered by the Appellant's Brief.[73]

28. Similar to the newly submitted Ground 1, the Appeals Chamber notes that, although the Notice of Appeal does not contain a ground that specifically bears on this issue, the newly submitted Ground 2 covers certain issues already argued in the Appellant's Brief. For instance, the Appeals Chamber notes that the fact that the majority of the members of the Ministry of Justice were Tutsi and/or closely allied to the RPF, including Witness François-Xavier Nsanzuwera, is argued under Ground 7 as undermining his credibility.[74] Ground 30 contains the general allegation that and thus cannot be deemed reliable.[75] The overall issue of the integrity and credibility of Prosecution witnesses (including a motivation to lie), notably ABE, EB, AEU, AGX, GO and François-Xavier Nsanzuwera, is addressed under Ground 40 in connection with the application of the burden of proof by the Trial Chamber.[76] The admission into evidence of "partisan and opinion evidence" of Alison Des Forges, Jean-Pierre Chrétien and Marcel Kabanda is contested under Ground 41.[77] The Appeals Chamber does not find, in the absence of any arguments from the Appellant to the contrary, that there was any ambiguity or error, or otherwise negligence or inadvertence, in the original articulation of these errors in the Notice of Appeal and the Appellant's Brief.

> "[t]he evidence was largely from a category of witnesses who sought to criminalize legitimate political aspirations of the Hutu"

[72] Motion of 6 March 2006, para. 15 with reference to the Trial Judgement, para. 73. The Appellant provides a number of examples of such allegedly biased witnesses, including the Expert Witnesses Marcel Kabanda and Alison Des Forges, Witnesses Jean-Pierre Chrétien, Philippe Dahinden, GO, FS, FX, Nsanzuwera, ABE, AFX, WD, AAJ, AAM, MK, AGR, A. Rangira, AEU, AGX, AES, BU, Th. Kamilindi, DM, AHB, EB, FY, A. Murebwayire, J. Kagabo (Motion of 6 March 2006, paras 15-17 with references to the Trial Judgement, paras 332, 712, 913).

[75] Ibid., para. 246.

29. Although the issue of the potential bias of Witnesses AAJ, AFX, WD, MK, WD, AGR, ABE, A. Rangira, AES, BU, Thomas Kamilindi, DM, AHB, FY, A. Murebwayire and J. Kagabo on the basis that they belong to the Tutsi ethnic group is not covered by the Appellant's Brief, the Appeals Chamber notes that the Motion of 6 March 2006 contains no arguments supporting this general assertion any further, since the Appellant merely states that these witnesses "were likely to be biased" and that the Trial Chamber

> "should have been cautious because of the possible desire for vengeance against Hutu leaders instilled inside the Tutsi community by the present RPF regime [and] propaganda disseminated through organisations of Tutsi survivals, notably IBUKA and AVEGA".[78]

In any case, the Appeals Chamber recalls that Witnesses AAJ, WD, and DM were found not credible by the Trial Chamber.[79] Accordingly, any challenge with respect to their potential bias is moot. The Appeals Chamber concludes that the addition of this issue under the newly submitted Ground 2 would not be of substantial importance for the present appeal. Moreover, the Appeals Chamber notes that no specific relief is sought under this new ground.

30. Consequently, the request for leave to include the newly submitted Ground 2 in the Appellant's Brief and Notice of Appeal is denied.

Ground 3: Error in Admitting, without Permitting any Challenge, the Interpretation of the History of Rwanda Made by Alison Des Forges in the Akayesu Case

31. The newly submitted Ground 3 refers to the allegedly erroneous admission of and reliance upon the "version of the History of Rwanda retained in the Akayesu case […] without subjecting it to any adversarial trial", which constitutes a violation of the Appellant's right to a fair trial and caused him "irreparable prejudice" in that it was "used as a basis for the determination of [his] culpability".[80] The Appellant further argues that the Trial Chamber also erred in "ignoring the fact that Mrs. Navanethem Pillay sat in the Chamber which rendered the Akayesu judgement" and would thus be biased in her judgement with regard to the Appellant.[81] The Prosecution contends that these issues are raised in the Appellant's Brief.[82]

32. The Appeals Chamber notes that the issues raised in the newly submitted Ground 3 simply reiterate the arguments already contained in the Appellant's Brief: the admission into evidence of Alison Des Forges's interpretation of the history of Rwanda in the Akayesu case is generally contested under Ground 41,[83] while the alleged bias and impartiality of Judge Pillay in connection with the fact that she "had previously sat in the determination of the Akayesu's trial", is argued specifically and at length in Ground 1.[84] In the view of the Appeals Chamber, these two grounds read together reveal the same issues as those contained in the newly submitted Ground 3. The Appeals Chamber finds that the newly submitted Ground 3 does not reveal any ambiguity or error, or otherwise negligence or inadvertence, in the articulation of these issues in the Notice of Appeal and the Appellant's Brief. The Appeals Chamber further notes that no specific relief is sought under this new ground.

33. Therefore, the Appellant's request for leave to include the proposed Ground 3 in the Appellant's Brief and Notice of Appeal is denied.

Ground 4: Error in Admitting that the CDR and the RTLM Issued or Broadcast Lists of People Suspected of Collaborations with the RPF on an Ethnic Basis

34. Under the newly submitted Ground 4, the Appellant argues that the Trial Chamber erred in concluding that the CDR and the RTLM distributed lists of people indicating their ethnicity, which led to their death.[85] According to the Appellant, the Trial Chamber erred in holding that > "the only common feature of persons appearing on those lists was their Tutsi ethnicity; and that the RTLM, Kangura and the CDR in its press releases, published those lists solely on that basis without any other substantive reason relating to the RPF or its supporters".[86]

he Appellant further contests both the authenticity and the contents of "Communiqué special N°5" presented at trial by the Prosecution, as well as the consequences of its release at the time of the events.[87] The Prosecution asserts that this issue is dealt with in the Appellant's Brief.[88]

35. The Appeal Chamber notes that most of these arguments are already addressed in the Appellant's Brief, in particular the Appellant's responsibility for the acts of the CDR and RTLM, as well the causal link between the RTLM broadcasts and/or the CDR activities and the extermination of the Tutsi before or after 6 April 1994. The Appellant's responsibility for RTLM broadcasts is extensively addressed in paragraph 107 and under Grounds 6 through 15, and his involvement in the CDR activities under Grounds 16 through 29.[89] Ground 33 is entirely devoted to the allegation that the broadcasts before or after 6 April did not encourage ethnic hatred.[90] The Appellant does not seek to establish that there was any ambiguity or error, or otherwise negligence or inadvertence, in previously articulating these arguments in the Notice of Appeal and the Appellant's Brief. In any event, the Appeals Chamber does not find this to be the case.

36. While it is true that the Appellant does not specifically refer to the issue of the lists in his Notice of Appeal and Appellant's Brief, and in particular the ones contained in the CDR Special Communiqué N°5 dated 22 September 1992, the Appeals Chamber considers that, in light of the issues already covered by the Appellant's Brief, the newly submitted Ground 4, which is in fact rather an amendment to the existing grounds, is not of such substantial importance to the present appeal that it would, if successful, require reversal of the Appellant's convictions. In this regard, the Appeals Chamber notes that the Trial Chamber found the Appellant criminally responsible for various activities of the RTLM and the CDR to conclude on his guilt for direct and public incitement to commit genocide pursuant to Article 6 (3) of the Statute.[91] The factual conclusion that these institutions "named and listed individuals suspected of being RPF or RPF accomplices"[92] is only one of those underlying the finding of guilt. At the same time, the CDR Special Communiqué N°5 of 22 September 1992[93] was not the only evidence considered by the Trial Chamber when it specifically concluded on "a pattern of naming people" by the RTLM and CDR.[94] The newly submitted Ground 4 is wholly unsubstantiated as to such other evidence taken into account by the Trial Chamber in reaching its respective conclusion. Moreover, since, as explained above, the Appellant already generally argues under his existing grounds of appeal that he was not in control of the RTLM and CDR activities and that, in any case, the killings that followed did not result from such messages, the Appellant's failure to include this new ground in the Notice of Appeal and Appellant's Brief would not result in a miscarriage of justice. In addition, as it is the case for the newly submitted Grounds 2 and 3, the new Ground 4 does not contain any explicitly formulated relief sought by the Appellant.

[89] Appellant's Brief, paras 107-240. More specifically, the Appellant argues that "[t]here was no basis for evidence for the interference that the Appellant was able to control the content of broadcasts" and that the Trial Chamber erred in concluding that "the killing of Tutsi civilians can be said to have resulted, at least in part, from the message of ethnic targeting for death that was clearly and sufficiently disseminated through RTLM, Kangura and CDR, before and after 6th April 1994" (Ibid., paras 167-168). He further asserts that what is required to have been proven, but has not, is "a direct link between specific speeches, writings and partly political policy and the killings" (Ibid., para. 195).

37. In light of the foregoing, the Appeals Chamber rejects the request for leave to include the newly submitted Ground 4 in the Appellant's Brief and Notice of Appeal.

Ground 5: Failure to Give Adequate and Full Grounds as a Basis for the Judgment

38. The Appellant asserts that the Trial Chamber

> "erred in basing its judgement on many findings which are not founded or insufficiently founded, thus violating the Appellant's right to a fair trial and undermining his ability to adequately prepare his appeal".[95]

According to the Prosecution, this issue is dealt with in the Appellant's Brief.[96]

39. Indeed, the issue of providing adequate and full grounds for judgement with respect to various findings of the Trial Chamber has been previously addressed by the Appellant. In particular, under his newly submitted Ground 5 (a) he refers to the > "absence of evidential grounds for finding that the Appellant supervised and controlled members of the CDR".[97]

The Appeals Chamber notes that this argument is discussed at length under Grounds 18 through 24 dealing with the issue of the Appellant's superior responsibility in the context of CDR activities, including the alleged error of fact with regard to the distribution of arms.[98] With respect to the newly submitted Ground 5 (b) alleging the > "absence of evidential grounds that the Appellant perpetrated acts with the intention of destroying, in all or in part, the Tutsi ethnic group"[99] and the alleged "failure to specify which precise acts or omission proved that the Appellant acted 'ruthlessly' towards the Tutsi" addressed under the newly submitted Ground 5 (c),[100] the Appeals Chamber notes that the existing Grounds 6 through 11 dealing, in particular, with the Trial Chamber's [97] Motion of 6 March 2006, para. 27 with reference to the Trial Judgement, para. 954. The Appellant argues, without further substantiation, that, on one hand, the question of supervision and control of the CDR members and Impuzamugambi "was not set out clearly against the counts of the indictment that he was convicted of", and, on the other hand, that the Trial Chamber failed to determine the elements of the Appellant's superior responsibility, notably erring in finding, in the absence of any direct evidence", that he played the "leadership role" by distributing the weapons.

[99] Motion of 6 March 2006, paras 28-29 with reference to the Trial Judgement, paras 969 and 1053-1054. The Appellant also mentions the fact that the issues raised in the Trial Chamber's respective findings were not "introduced by the Prosecution and thus was not the subject of adversarial debate at the time of the trial", but does not substantiate his claim any further concentrating this sub-ground of appeal on the absence of evidence.

[100] Motion of 6 March 2006, paras. 30-37 with reference to the Trial Judgement, paras 345-348, 736-742, 967.

legal and factual findings on the Appellant's dolus specialis for the crime of genocide, cover the same allegations.[101] The issue of the alleged failure to make > "any specific ground for the finding that the Appellant acted as the 'lynchpin' for conspiracy between the three co-accused",[102]

raised in the newly submitted Ground 5 (d), is expressly addressed under the existing Ground 30.[103] Similarly, the newly submitted Ground 5 (e) regarding the alleged failure

> "to set out the constituent elements of the crimes of extermination and persecution against the Appellant",[104]

is already dealt with, in much greater detail, under existing Grounds 34 through 38.[105] Finally, the alleged failure "to provide [g]rounds for the sentence imposed",[106] raised in the newly submitted Ground 5 (f), is substantiated under existing Grounds 45 through 50.[107]

40. The Appeals Chamber finds that the issues raised under the newly submitted Ground 5 are already dealt with in greater detail and with more precision under the above-mentioned existing grounds. Therefore, in the absence of any arguments to the contrary, it cannot conclude that there is any ambiguity or error, or otherwise negligence or inadvertence, in the Notice of Appeal and the Appellant's Brief with respect to these issues. The request for leave to include the newly submitted Ground 5 in the Appellant's Brief and Notice of Appeal is consequently denied in its entirety.

Ground 6: Error in Law by Judging Non-Physical Persons

41. Under the newly submitted Ground 6, the Appellant amalgamates his statement that the Trial Chamber exercised its power ultra vires in extending its jurisdiction to legal persons with his previous arguments concerning the lack of challenge with regard to the findings of fact in the Akayesu case.[108] He claims that, as a consequence, "[t]he findings and the convictions relating to the CDR policy" as well as the "findings attributable to the Appellant based on the culpability of the CDR as a party should be quashed" and that he "should be acquitted of those matters".[109] While the Prosecution concedes that this issue "is not dealt with in the Appellant's Brief, in the same way as it is now being presented in the Motion", it submits that "the substantive argument, in relation to the Appellant's role and responsibility in RTLM and CDR has already been made" by the Appellant.[110] The Prosecution further argues that the matter of the Tribunal's jurisdiction ratione personae is irrelevant for the purposes of the present appeal.[111]

42. The Appeal Chamber notes that the lack of jurisdiction of the Tribunal to try non-natural persons is not explicitly raised in the Appellant's Brief, except under the existing Ground 35 with regard to "[e]rrors of fact and law concerning the existence of large scale massacre" attributable to the Appellant[112]. However, in light of the absence of any substantiation of such arguments in the Motion of

The Appellant argues that the Trial Chamber's respective conclusions were not based on any evidential basis and the issues addressed therein were "not even part of the [P]rosecution case and did not appear in the Prosecution's indictment of October 23, 1997 as modified on April 11, 2000" (Motion of 6 March 2006, para. 40).

6 March 2006, notably with respect to any findings of the Trial Chamber that allegedly "judg[e] the CDR policy and that of the RTLM broadcasts",[113] the Appeals Chamber fails to see how the omission of this ground of appeal would result in a miscarriage of justice for the Appellant. Consequently the request for leave to include the newly submitted Ground 6 in the Appellant's Brief and Notice of Appeal is denied.

Ground 7: Error in Considering as Aggravating Factors the Positions Held by the Appellant in the CDR and the RTLM

43. Under the newly submitted Ground 7, the Appellant contends that the Trial Chamber

> "erred in determining [his] sentence […] on the basis of positions which he allegedly held within the CDR and the RTLM whereas the Prosecution did not provide the evidence beyond reasonable doubt that the Appellant actually held those positions attributed to him".[114]

The Appellant further reiterates his challenge to the Trial Chamber's finding that he was the "lynchpin" between the three co-accused and concludes that, having held him responsible for both his own acts and omissions as well as those of his subordinates, the Trial Chamber "exposed him to double jeopardy" by considering "merely occupying such positions as an aggravating factor".[115] In addition, the Appellant argues that the Trial Chamber erred "by declaring that there were no mitigating circumstances"[116] and by imposing a "disproportionate" sentence.[117] The Prosecution submits that these issues are "dealt with at length" in the Appellant's Brief.[118]

44. The Appeals Chamber notes that existing Grounds 42 through 51 already cover the issues of sentencing, including the alleged error of the Trial Chamber in finding no mitigating circumstances in the Appellant's case,[119] as well as the argument that the "pronounced sentence is excessive and disproportionate".[120] The Appeals Chamber does not find, in the absence of any submissions from the Appellant to the contrary, that there was any ambiguity or error, or otherwise negligence or inadvertence, in raising them previously in the Notice of Appeal and the Appellant's Brief.

45. As for the allegation of "double jeopardy", the Appellant seems to reiterate his arguments with respect to the Trial Chamber's findings on his superior responsibility under Article 6 (3) of the Statute of the Tribunal addressed above[121] instead of addressing its specific considerations relevant to the aggravating factors in terms of sentencing.[122] There are no substantiated arguments with references to the Trial Chamber's findings concerning the Trial Chamber's alleged double-counting of the Appellant's command role in the crimes when considering his sentencing in addition to its evaluation of the form and degree of his participation in the crimes. Therefore, the Appeals Chamber does not find that inclusion of this argument would be of substantial importance to the success of this appeal.

46. In light of the foregoing, the Appeals Chamber denies the Appellant's request to include the proposed Ground 7 in the Notice of Appeal and the Appellant's Brief.

B. MOTION OF 5 JULY 2006

Submissions of the Parties

47. The Appellant submits that good cause for amending his Notice of Appeal exists[123] since the proposed amendments (i) do not involve any substantive change to the grounds of appeal set out in the Appellant's Brief and in the Motion of 6 March 2006;[124] (ii) are designed to ensure that the Notice of Appeal complies with the requirements of Rule 108 of the Rules,[125] and thus (iii) "are intended to facilitate the work of the Appeals Chamber".[126] He explains that his Notice of Appeal did not indicate the substance of the alleged errors due to significant time pressure and constraints.[127] Finally, he maintains that the amendments will not prejudice the Prosecution or the co-Appellants.[128]

48. In its Response to Motion of 5 July 2006, the Prosecution objects to the proposed amendments and argues that the Appellant has failed to demonstrate any good cause, pursuant to Rule 108, justifying his request at this late stage of the proceedings, or to show that the denial thereof would lead to a miscarriage of justice.[129] More specifically, the Prosecution notes that the proposed amendments basically, with the exception of Ground 4, consist in merely cutting certain paragraphs from the Appellant's Brief and pasting them into his proposed new notice of appeal.[130] With respect to the newly amended Ground 4, the Prosecution underlines that the Appellant's assertion concerning the Judges' alleged bias and promise "to the highest Rwandan authorities that there would be no more incidents such as the release of Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza" is not pleaded in the Appellant's Brief, amounts to a significant variation of this ground and would thus prejudice the Prosecution in having had no opportunity to respond to these allegations.[131]

49. Furthermore, the Prosecution notes that neither the Appeals Chamber nor the Prosecution itself made any remark or complaint with regard to the existing Notice of Appeal.[132] At the same time, it submits that the notice of appeal annexed to the Motion of 5 July 2006 does not satisfy the requirements of Rules 108 and of paragraph 1.c) of the Practice Direction on Formal Requirements for Appeal from Judgements of 16 September 2002 ("Practice Direction"), since it still fails to identify, for each ground of appeal, the alleged errors of law or facts and the precise references to the challenged findings.[133] The Prosecution finally prays the Appeals Chamber to formally sanction the Appellant's Counsel, pursuant to Rules 46 and 73 (F) of the Rules for this frivolous filing.[134]

50. The Appeals Chamber recalls that both the Notice of Appeal and the Appellant's Brief were filed by the Appellant on the same date, almost ten months ago, after he had benefited from generous extensions of time granted by the Appeals Chamber following the change to his Defence team,[135] but notes that he is still complaining about "significant pressure of time"[136] and has repeatedly tried to obtain additional time for his filings on the same grounds.[137] Despite the fact that the Notice of Appeal clearly did not conform to the criteria established for such filings under the provisions of Rule 108 and the Practice Direction,[138] the Appeals Chamber accepted that Notice of Appeal as validly filed in the particular circumstances of the case. The Appeals Chamber was mindful of significant delays and multiple previous filings in this case, as well as of the fact that the Prosecution had not opposed the filing in question. In this respect, the Appeals Chamber adds that the purpose for setting forth the grounds, as provided for under Rule 108 of the Rules, is, inter alia,

> "to focus the mind of the Respondent, right from the day the notice of appeal is filed, on the arguments which will be developed subsequently in the Appeal brief" and "to give details of the arguments the parties intend to raise in support of the grounds of appeal".[139] The Notice of Appeal and the Appellant's Brief, having been filed simultaneously, allow for the Prosecution to sufficiently understand the Appellant's grounds of appeal and thus, the Appeals Chamber considered that it was in the interests of judicial economy to accept the deficient Notice of Appeal.[140]

51. The Appeals Chamber also wishes to emphasize that it strongly disagrees with the Appellant's claim that his full notice of appeal "could only be completed once the Appeals Brief itself was in its final form".[141] This assertion goes against the logical order of the appeal procedure before the Tribunal, where a notice of appeal is filed shortly after the impugned judgement, while the Appellant's brief is to be filed within seventy-five days after the notice of appeal. The Appeals Chamber reiterates that unjustified amendments would result in appellants being free to change their appeal strategy after they have had the advantage of reviewing the arguments in a response brief, interfering with the expeditious administration of justice and prejudicing the other parties to the case,[142] which is unacceptable. In this sense, the Appeals Chamber finds the Motion of 5 July 2006 frivolous.

52. As explained above,[143] variations to a notice of appeal can be allowed if they are minor and non-substantive modifications that would correct an ambiguity or error made by the counsel in the previous filings and would not unduly delay the appeal proceedings. However, the Appeals Chamber finds that the newly submitted notice of appeal does not correct any such ambiguity or error since, save for Ground 4,[144] it merely reiterates the arguments already developed in the Appellant's Brief.[145]

[136] Motion of 5 July 2006, para. 5.
[137] See, e.g., Decision on Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Motion for Leave to Present Additional Evidence Pursuant to Rule 115, 5 May 2006, paras 22-26. The Appeals Chambers also notes that the same argument is raised by the Appellant in his several pending motions.
[138] The Notice Appeal consists of a simple list of grounds of appeal and indicates neither the relief sought nor the challenged findings of the Trial Chamber.
[139] The Prosecutor v. Ignace Bagilishema, Case N°ICTR-95-1A-A, Decision on Motion to Have the Prosecution's Notice of Appeal Declared Inadmissible, 26 October 2001, p. 3.
[140] This approach is not inconsistent with the Appeals Chamber's findings in para. 46 of The Prosecutor v. Clément Kayishema and Obed Ruzindana, Case N°ICTR-95-1-A, Judgement (Reasons), 1 June 2001, stating that "an appeal, which consists of a Notice of Appeal that lists the grounds of Appeal but is not supported by an Appellant's brief, is rendered devoid of all the arguments and authorities". As the Appeals Chamber found in the cited judgement, this would only be the case if the deficient notice of appeal is not followed by a comprehensive Appellant's brief providing detailed arguments. This is clearly not the case in the present appeal.
[141] Motion of 5 July 2006, para. 10.
[142] See supra, para. 11.
[143] See supra, para. 13.
[144] With regard to the newly proposed Ground 4, the Appeals Chamber notes that the first eight lines of the amended wording contain new allegations, which the Prosecution has not had the opportunity to respond to. Their inclusion at the present stage

The Appeals Chamber further finds that the newly submitted notice of appeal does not fully conform to the provisions of Rule 108 and the Practice Direction in the sense that, for most Grounds, it still fails to identify with precision the nature of alleged errors, any references to the challenged findings or the relief sought. In addition, in the Annexed Notice of Appeal, the Appellant adds, in certain Grounds, some elements that were specified in the Appellant's Brief under different grounds,[146] which might be even more confusing. It would thus not be in the interests of justice to allow for these amendments, and the denial thereof will not result in a miscarriage of justice for the Appellant.

53. For the foregoing reasons, the Appellant's request to amend the Notice of Appeal is denied. At the same time, the Appeals Chamber notes that Ground 46 is absent from the Notice of Appeal, while Ground 45 is entitled "Lack of the Grounds Founding the Sentence because of Judgment with an Excessive Delay" and is followed by Ground 47. The Appellant's Brief has both Ground 45 "Lack of the Grounds Founding the Sentence" and Ground 46 "Reduction of the Sentence because of Judgment with an Excessive Delay". The same structure is presented in the Motion of 5 July 2006. The Appeals Chamber proprio motu considers that Ground 46 was inadvertently omitted in the Notice of Appeal and that it should be understood as a technically separate ground of appeal.

C. MOTION OF 7 JULY 2006

54. The Appellant also seized the Appeals Chamber with a request to make corrections of "typing error[s] or obvious error(s) of grammar" into his Appellant's Brief that would not amount to any substantial amendments thereto.[147] The Appeals Chamber recalls that

> "a party may, without requesting leave from the Appeals Chamber, file a corrigendum to their previously filed brief or motion whenever a minor or clerical error in said brief or motion is subsequently discovered and where correction of the error is necessary in order to provide clarification".[148]

Consequently, while the Appeals Chamber is cognizant of the lateness of such filing, there was no need for the Appellant to seize it with a Motion in this respect.

of proceedings might thus prejudice the responding party, unless additional filings further delaying the advancement of the case are allowed. Moreover, the Appeals Chamber notes that the Appellant has not sought leave for this more significant variation of his respective ground of appeal generally arguing that none of the proposed amendments involve any substantive change to the grounds of appeal fully argued in the Appeal Brief. Subsequently, the Appeals Chamber cannot allow for this variation.

[145] For example, para. 9 of the newly submitted notice of appeal largely corresponds to para. 46 of the Appellant's Brief; para. 10 of the newly submitted notice of appeal corresponds to para. 67 of the Appellant's Brief; para. 11, with the exception of lines 2-8, of the newly submitted notice of appeal corresponds to para. 99, lines 3-7 of the Appellant's Brief; para. 12, lines 2-5 of the newly submitted notice of appeal corresponds to para. 101, lines 11-12 of the Appellant's Brief; para. 13 of the newly submitted notice of appeal corresponds to paras 109-110 of the Appellant's Brief; para. 14, lines 3-5 of the newly submitted notice of appeal corresponds to para. 124, lines 1-3 of the Appellant's Brief; para. 18, lines 1-4 of the newly submitted notice of appeal corresponds to para. 134, lines 1-4 of the Appellant's Brief; para. 21, lines 1-4 and 6-10 of the newly submitted notice of appeal corresponds to para. 67, lines 1-5 and 10-13 of the Appellant's Brief; para. 22 of the newly submitted notice of appeal corresponds to paras 168, lines 1-2, and 169 of the Appellant's Brief; para. 23 of the newly submitted notice of appeal corresponds to paras 171, lines 1-6, and 172 of the Appellant's Brief; para. 29, lines 5-10 of the newly submitted notice of appeal corresponds to para. 195 of the Appellant's Brief; paras 40-41 of the newly submitted notice of appeal corresponds to paras 263 and 279 of the Appellant's Brief; 46 of the newly submitted notice of appeal corresponds to para. 313 of the Appellant's Brief.

[146] For example, the "blatant political interference" and the "lack of impartiality" of Judges Pillay and Møse alleged under Ground 4, para. 11, of the newly submitted notice of appeal, are not evoked under Ground 4 of the Appellant's Brief but under Ground 1, at paras 22-41. The lack of "effective representation" alleged under ground 5, para. 12 of the newly submitted notice of appeal, does not appear under Ground 5 of the Appellant's Brief but under Ground 4, at paras 68-99. Under Ground 44, para. 51 of the newly submitted notice of appeal, the Appellant argues that "[t]he Trial Chamber failed to give precise and details grounds to explain its decision to sentence the Appellant to 35 years", whereas this allegation is made under Ground 45 of the Appellant's Brief.

[148] The Prosecutor v. Željko Mejakić et al., Case N°IT-02-65-AR11*bis*.1 Decision on Joint Defense Motion for Enlargement of Time to File Appellants' Brief, 30 August 2005, p. 3.

55. Having reviewed the proposed corrections, the Appeals Chamber notes that most of the submitted amendments indeed correct grammatical or typing errors, or inaccurate references. While corrections 5, 11, 15, 29, 54, 65, 66, 76 seem to go slightly beyond clerical corrections, the Appeals Chamber considers that they, while usefully providing clarifications to the respective sentences, do not amount to any substantial changes of the Appellant's Brief and can thus be equally permitted.

IV. Disposition

56. For the foregoing reasons, the Appeals Chamber DISMISSES the Motion of 6 March 2006 and Motion of 5 July 2006 in their entirety, FINDS both Motions to be frivolous[149] and imposes sanctions against the Appellant's Counsel, pursuant to Rule 73 (F), in the form of non-payment of fees associated with both Motions; and GRANTS the Motion of 7 July 2006.

NOTING that the Appellant submits that the proposed corrections are meant to correct typing errors or obvious errors of grammar "making a factual correction not amounting to a substantial amendment of the [Reply Brief]";[2]

RECALLING that

> "a party may, without requesting leave from the Appeals Chamber, file a corrigendum to their previously filed brief or motion whenever a minor or clerical error in said brief or motion is subsequently discovered and where correction of the error is necessary in order to provide clarification";[3]

CONSIDERING, consequently, there was no need for the Appellant to seize it with a Motion in this respect;[4]

FINDING that the submitted amendments indeed correct grammatical or typing errors, or inaccurate references, and do not amount to any substantial changes of the Reply Brief;

FINDING, therefore, that the Reply Brief should be read in accordance with the amendments proposed by the First Motion and allowed by the present decision;

BEING ALSO SEIZED OF "The Appellant Jean Bosco Barayagwiza's Corrigendum Motion Concerning the French Translation of the Appellant's Reply to the Respondent's Consolidated Brief" filed by the Appellant on 5 July 2006 ("Second Motion"), proposing corrections to be made in the French translation of the Reply Brief;[5]

CONSIDERING that, in light of the remarks and explanations contained in the Registrar's Submission, the Appellant's submissions do not raise doubt as to the accuracy of the translation,[7] save for his objection 1 and, partly, objection 6;[8]

FINDING, consequently, that the title of paragraph 5 of the French Translation of the Reply Brief should read "Critères généraux de l'impartialité judiciaire (par. 17 à 20)", and that the third sentence of paragraph 28 of the same document should read as follows:

> "Cet article n'était pas appliqué au TPIR, mais celui-ci n'était pas fondé en droit à juger un accusé en son absence, et ce, jusqu'à l'adoption de l'article 82 bis du Règlement à la session plénière des 26 et 27 mai 2003."

BEING SEIZED OF "The Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Motion for Leave to Permit an Extension of Page Limits to the Pending Motion for Additional Evidence pursuant to the ICTR Rules of Procedure and Evidence and the Practice Directions of 16th September 2002, and Paragraph 1 C 5 of 15 May 2006 [sic]" filed by Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza on 27 September 2006 ("Appellant" and "Motion", respectively), seeking "[a]n extension of pages for the Appellant's Motion for Additional Evidence relating to the evidence of witness AGK to 30 pages";[2]

NOTING that the Prosecutor has not filed a response to the Motion;

NOTING that the Appellant specifies that the Motion

> "is made in light of the pending Motion for Additional [Evidence] which involves the newly discovered material from the Alchemy file relating to notes and memorandums concerning Ambassador Rawson", i.e. the material which allegedly calls into question the testimony and credibility of Witness AGK "concerning a demonstration where he attributes a significant role to the Appellant";[3]

NOTING that the Appellant states that he "will in due course request the admission of these newly discovered pieces of evidence" in order to impugn the findings of the Trial Chamber;[4]

NOTING that in his Motion of 8 September 2006, currently pending before the Appeals Chamber, the Appellant applied for leave to submit two notes of Ambassador Rawson as additional evidence on appeal;[5]

NOTING that the Appellant appears to submit in the present Motion that the extension of page limit for his contemplated motion would be warranted on the grounds that it will have to show that Ambassador Rawson's messages undermine Witness AGK's credibility and could have been a decisive factor at trial, and also examine the evidence of other witnesses having testified as to personal activities of the Appellant;[6]

NOTING that the Appellant adds that he cannot analyze each of those testimonies in order to show that they are not credible, based on facts beyond the Tribunal's jurisdiction or not mentioned in the indictments, within the prescribed page limit;[7]

NOTING finally that the Appellant asserts that his request should be granted in the interest of judicial economy because otherwise he would be forced to file several motions which would duplicate the work of the Appeals Chamber and be a wasteful use of resources of the Tribunal;[8]

CONSIDERING that, in accordance with paragraph 3 of the Practice Direction on the Length of Briefs and Motions on Appeal,[9] motions filed before the Appeals Chamber shall not exceed ten pages or 3,000 words, whichever is greater;

CONSIDERING that, in conformity with paragraph 5 of the Practice Direction, a party seeking authorization to exceed the page limit "must provide an explanation of the exceptional circumstances that necessitate the oversized filing";

[7] Motion, para. 8.
[8] Motion, para. 2.
[9] Practice Direction on the Length of Briefs and Motions on Appeal, 16 September 2002, as amended ("Practice Direction").

FINDING that the present Motion does not clearly specify the nature and amount of material that the Appellant plans to submit as additional evidence, especially in light of the pending Motion of 8 September 2006, and that it could be dismissed on this basis alone;[10]

CONSIDERING that the Appellant's contemplated motion for leave to submit additional evidence pertaining to Witness AGK would be a second motion submitting documents from the same sources, allegedly discovered by the Appellant in July and August 2006 upon receipt of the electronic file "Alchemy" and/or through the Electronic Disclosure Suite;

CONSIDERING therefore that the Appellant has already opted for the piece-meal approach that he purportedly tried to avoid by requesting the extension of the page limit;

CONSIDERING that the Appellant has not shown that the prescribed page limit is insufficient to argue issues pertaining to the credibility of one witness, even if analyzed in the context of other witnesses' testimonies;

FINDING consequently that the Appellant has not demonstrated the existence of exceptional circumstances that would justify an oversized filing;

EMPHASIZING that the effectiveness of a submission does not depend on its length but on the clarity and persuasiveness of the arguments;[11]

FOR THE FOREGOING REASONS,

DISMISSES the Motion in its entirety.

Miroslav Bralo, Decision on Motions for Access to Ex Parte Portions of the Record on Appeal and for Disclosure of Mitigating Material, 30 August 2006 (IT-95-17)

1. The Appeals Chamber of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighboring States, between 1 January and 31 December 1994 ("Appeals Chamber" and "Tribunal", respectively) is seized of "The Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Motion Requesting that the Prosecution Disclosure of the Interview of Michel Bagaragaza Be Expunged from the Record" filed by Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza ("Appellant") on 5 July 2006 ("Motion"). The Prosecution filed its response on 17 July 2006.[1] The Appellant has not filed a reply.

2. On 4 April 2006, the Prosecution disclosed to the Appellant extracts from the statement provided by Michel Bagaragaza interviewed by the Tribunal's investigators for the purposes of the Prosecutor v. Protais Zigiranyarazo Case N°ICTR-2001-73-I ("Zigiranyarazo case").[2]

A. Submissions of the Parties

3. In the Motion, the Appellant submits that the Impugned Disclosure represents a misuse of the procedures provided for by Rules 68 and Rules 75 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the Tribunal ("Rules") because (i) while Rule 68 imposes a duty on the Prosecutor to disclose exculpatory material, the Impugned Disclosure was not sought by the Appellant and contains "little or no exculpatory material, but instead contains considerable additional evidence in support of the Prosecution case";[3] and (ii) the Rule 75 (F) requirement, under which

> "the Prosecutor notifies the Defence to whom the disclosure is being made of the nature of the protective measures in the first proceedings", has not been met.[4] The Appellant argues that the sole purpose of the Impugned Disclosure was to undermine the Appellant's case on appeal, since the disclosed interview

> "represented a sustained attempt by the Prosecution to obtain evidence in support of various [contested] aspects of the case" and to place

> "incriminating evidence before the Appeals Chamber, without affording the Appellant an opportunity to test or challenge the evidence".[5]

4. The Appellant claims that the Impugned Disclosure does not contain any exculpatory material[6] and argues that the filing of the Impugned Disclosure with the Registry is calculated to influence the Appeals Judges' assessment of the Appellant's political beliefs and activities.[7] He concludes that such conduct by the Prosecution is contrary to the interests of justice and would deserve sanctioning under Rule 46 (A) of the Rules.[8]

[2] The "Prosecutor's Disclosure Pursuant to Rule 75 (F) of the Rules, of the Relevant Parts of the Interview with Witness Michel Bagaragaza Conducted by ICTR Investigators between 29 September 2004 and 06 January 2005" filed confidentially by the Office of the Prosecutor ("Prosecution") on 4 April 2006 ("Impugned Disclosure").
[3] Motion, paras 4-5, 13. The Appellant's arguments in paras 6 through 12 of the Motion relate to the merits of the present appeal. In light of the reasoning provided hereinafter, the Appeals Chamber does not need to address these arguments in the present decision.
[4] Ibid., para. 3.
[5] Ibid., paras 5, 16.
[6] Ibid., paras 14-16.
[7] Ibid., para. 16.
[8] Ibid., paras 16-17.

5. The Prosecution does not oppose the Appellant's request to have the Impugned Disclosure expunged from the record in the present case but submits that the allegation of misconduct and bad faith should be dismissed by the Appeals Chamber and the Appellant's request for sanctions rejected.[9] It contends that the Impugned Disclosure was made because it appeared to be, on its face, material subject to disclosure pursuant to Rule 68 of the Rules.[10] It adds that the reference therein to Rule 75 (F) is meant to provide the Appellant with the requisite warning to maintain the confidentiality of the communicated documents pertaining to the then protected witness Michel Bagaragaza.[11] The Prosecution further avers that the content of the disclosed interview was considered by the Prosecution as relevant, since the answers to questions 93 and 231 specifically pertain to the Appellant's case, while the rest of the references "provide the overall context within which the witness referred to the Appellant".[12] It finally points out that the Impugned Disclosure is neither a Prosecution submission, nor additional evidence.[13]

B. Discussion

6. The Appeals Chamber recalls that the Prosecution's obligation under Rule 68 of the Rules is positive and continuous,[14] and that the determination of what material meets Rule 68 disclosure requirements is primarily a fact-based judgement made by and under the responsibility of the Prosecution.[15] The Prosecution

> "is under no legal obligation to consult with an accused to reach a decision on what material suggests the innocence or mitigates the guilt of an accused or affects the credibility of the Prosecution's evidence".[16]

Therefore, the Appeals Chamber would not intervene in the exercise of the Prosecution's discretion, unless it is shown that the Prosecution abused it and, where there is no evidence to the contrary, will assume that the Prosecution is acting in good faith.[17]

[9] Response, para. 2.
[11] Ibid., paras 3-6. The Prosecution specifies that the issue of confidentiality is currently moot "since the witness subsequently waived his right to the witness protection order on 13 June 2006, and testified, on his own name, in Prosecutor v. Zigiranyarazo".

7. The Impugned Disclosure has not been admitted by the Appeals Chamber as additional evidence under Rule 115 of the Rules, and is thus not part of the case record pending before the Appeals Chamber. Therefore, the Appeals Chamber will not consider the contents of the Impugned Disclosure absent its formal admittance into the appeal record. For the foregoing reasons, the Appeals Chamber sees no need to declare it invalid or, a fortiori, to expunge it from the record.

8. The Appeals Chamber also notes that it was unnecessary for the Prosecution to file the Impugned Disclosure before the Appeals Chamber. The appropriate procedure for disclosure of materials under Rule 68 of the Rules when a case is before the Appeals Chamber is to serve the Defence with such material.[18] Where the Prosecution files its disclosure with the Registry for purposes of keeping it in the Registry archives, the Prosecution shall do so without copying the Appeals Chamber. Where the Prosecution considers it necessary to advise the Appeals Chamber of its further disclosures of Rule 68 material to the Defence, it may file a status report before the Appeals Chamber informing them of the fact and date but not the nature of that disclosure or the communicated material.

9. Finally, with respect to the Appellant's submission that the Impugned Disclosure was done in violation of Rule 75 (F) of the Rules, the Appeals Chamber recalls that under Rule 75 (F) (ii), the Prosecution, in discharge of its disclosure obligations, should notify the Defence to whom the disclosure is being made of the nature of the applicable protective measures. The Appeals Chamber notes that such notification was included by the Prosecution in the Impugned Disclosure.[19] Consequently, the Appeals Chamber finds the Appellant's contention that the Prosecution failed to meet its Rule 75 (F) obligation irrelevant and in any case moot in light of Michel Bagaragaza's open session testimony in the Zigiranyirazo case on 13 June 2006.

10. In light of the above findings, the Appeals Chamber need not address the Appellant's request to impose sanctions under Rule 46 (A) of the Rules.

C. Disposition

11. For the foregoing reasons, the Appeals Chamber DISMISSES the Motion in its entirety.

12. The Appeals Chamber hereby INSTRUCTS the Prosecution to follow the procedure described in paragraph eight above for its future disclosures under Rule 68 of the Rules. The Appeals Chamber also INSTRUCTS the Registry to ensure that any copies of disclosures filed with it by the Prosecution are to be kept in its records without communicating the disclosed material to the Appeals Chamber.

Suspension of Extension of the Briefing Schedule, and Additional Filings, 18 May 2001, p. 4; Blaškić 26 September 2000 Decision, para. 39.

[18] In this respect, the Appeals Chamber recalls its recent decision, in which it held that the Prosecution's obligation under Rule 68 (A) of the Rules "extends beyond simply making available its entire evidence collection in a searchable format", since it "cannot serve as a surrogate for the Prosecution's individualized consideration of the material in its possession". (Prosecutor v. Édouard Karemera et al., Case N°ICTR-98-44-AR73.7, Decision on Interlocutory Appeal Regarding the Role of the Prosecutor's Electronic Disclosure Suite in Discharging Disclosure Obligations, 30 June 2006, para. 10). The Appeals Chamber also found that the EDS does not make documents "reasonably accessible as a general matter", nor does it allow to assume that the Defence knows about all material included therein, to the extent that the Prosecution could be relieved of its Rule 68 obligation. (Ibid., para. 15). In this sense, it has been suggested that the Prosecution should either "separate[] a special file for Rule 68 material or draw[] the attention of the Defence to such material in writing and permanently update[] the special file or the written notice". (Id.) See also Bralo Decision, para. 35.

[19] Impugned Disclosure, para. 3: "Mr. Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza is therefore reminded of his obligation to maintain the strict confidentiality of the disclosed statements. Mr. Michel Bagaragaza is a protected witness as exemplified in the attached Trial Chamber decisions in The Prosecutor v. Protais Zigiranyirazo".

1. The Appeals Chamber of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States Between 1 January and 31 December 1994 ("Appeals Chamber" and "Tribunal", respectively) is seized of "The Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Motion Contesting the Decision of the President of 24th August 2006 Refusing to Review and Reverse the Decision of the Registrar Dated 27th March 2006 Relating to the Withdrawal of Co-Counsel" filed by Lead Counsel for Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza ("Lead Counsel" and "Appellant", respectively) on 22 September 2006 ("Motion"), requesting the Appeals Chamber to reverse the Decision of the President of the Tribunal,[1] order the Registrar to withdraw Co-Counsel, Ms. Tanoo Mylvaganam, from the present case, and appoint a new Co-Counsel.[2]

2. The Prosecution responded to the Motion on 22 September 2006.[3] The Appellant replied on 26 September 2006.[4]

I. Procedural Background

3. Trial Chamber I rendered its Judgement in this case on 3 December 2003.[5] The Appellant filed his notice of appeal on 22 April 2004,[6] which was amended on 27 April 2004.[7] His Appellant's brief was filed on 25 June 2004.[8] Pursuant to the Decisions of 17 May 2005[9] and 6 September 2005,[10] the Appellant filed a revised Notice of Appeal and a revised Appellant's Brief on 12 October 2005 ("Notice of Appeal" and "Appellant's Brief", respectively). The filings of written briefs on appeal with respect to the Appellant's appeal were completed on 12 December 2005.[11]

4. The Appeals Chamber recalls that, following a request for withdrawal of counsel,[12] the appellate proceedings in relation to the Appellant were stayed from 19 May 2004[13] through 26 January 2005,[14] pending the assignment of a new counsel. The current Lead Counsel was assigned to the Appellant by the Registrar on 30 November 2004, and on 19 January 2005, the Appeals Chamber dismissed the Appellant's challenge to this assignment.[15] The Appellant's request for reconsideration of the Decision of 19 January 2005 was dismissed by the Appeals Chamber on 4 February 2005.[16] On 23 May 2005, following Lead Counsel's request, Ms. Tanoo Mylvaganam was assigned as Co-Counsel.[17]

5. On 17 February 2006, the Appellant's Lead Counsel requested the Registrar to terminate the assignment of Ms. Mylvaganam.[18] Following a request from the Registrar,[19] Ms. Mylvaganam communicated her position on the matter confirming the existence of a difference in legal reasoning and strategy and thus not opposing her withdrawal.[20] On 27 March 2006, the Registrar dismissed the Request for Withdrawal on the grounds that Lead Counsel had neither demonstrated the existence of exceptional circumstances nor submitted any specific allegations, referring simply to differences in views that resulted in the breach of trust between the Appellant and his Co-Counsel.[21]

6. On 4 May 2006, the Appellant requested the President to review the Registrar's decision.[22] On 17 May 2006, the Registrar filed related submissions pursuant to Rule 33 (B) of the Tribunal's Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("Rules").[23] On 29 August 2006, the President dismissed the Motion for Review on the ground that the Appellant had not shown that the exercise of discretion by the Registrar was unfair or unreasonable.[24]

II. Discussion

A. Submissions of the Parties

7. The Appellant requests the Appeals Chamber to reverse both the Registrar's Decision and the President's Decision, and to order the Registrar to remove the current Co-Counsel from the case and to appoint a new co-counsel in accordance with the wishes of the Appellant and the agreement of Lead Counsel and Co-Counsel.[25] First, he alleges irreconcilable differences in approach in legal strategy between himself and his Co-Counsel, and contends that the Registrar's order to his Counsel to ensure resolution of the conflict is "unrealistic" and "impossible".[26] Second, to counter the Registrar's argument relating to the paucity of information concerning the breakdown of trust with Co-Counsel, the Appellant argues that he should not be expected to provide more details in this respect because (a) this is privileged information and (b) the proof of this breakdown "can be presumed from the joint expert view of both lead and co-counsel."[27] He submits that the breakdown of trust is both a subjective and an objective matter to assess, and that the consensus on this matter within the Defence team should exclude all "speculation" from the Registrar and the President.[28] Third, the Appellant contends that it is contrary to both common sense and Article 19 of the Directive on the Assignment of Defence

[22] The Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Urgent Motion for the President of the ICTR to Review the Decision of the Registrar Relating to the Continuing Involvement of Co-Counsel, filed confidentially on 4 May 2006 ("Motion for Review").
[23] [Confidential] Registrar's Submission under Rule 33 (B) in Respect of the Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Urgent Motion for the President of the ICTR to Review the Decision of the Registrar Relating to the Continuing Involvement of Co-Counsel, 17 May 2005 ("Registrar's Submissions"). The Registrar submitted inter alia that « a difference of opinion that leads to a breakdown of trust and confidence between the Appellant and Co-Counsel at the late stage of Appellate proceedings that has been reached in this case d[id] not constitute exceptional circumstances" (para. 6) and thus did not justify the withdrawal of the Co-Counsel. The Registrar also referred to such factors as quality and importance of the Co-Counsel's work, costs implied by the nomination of a new Co-Counsel, the Registrar's discretionary powers, etc. (paras 5, 7, 9-12).
[24] President's Decision, para. 9.
[25] Motion, paras 1-2, 14, p. 9.
[26] Ibid., paras 4, 8. At paragraph 17, the Appellant submits that even if there was some doubt concerning an eventual reconciliation at the time of the Registrar's Decision, the passage of time clearly demonstrates that such reconciliation is not possible anymore.
[27] Ibid., para. 5.
[28] Ibid., para. 14.

Counsel[29] to maintain Ms. Mylvaganam as Co-Counsel in his case because she is not receiving his instructions, does not carry his trust and confidence, and has not been allowed to play any part in the conduct of the defence since January 2006.[30] Fourth, he asserts that any reliance on budgetary constraints should be dismissed,

> "as being contrary to the principle of ensuring a fair appeal and providing for adequate representation of the Appellant."[31]

Fifth, the Appellant argues that the President's reference to the risk of delaying the proceedings is flawed, maintaining that the withdrawal will have no impact if a new Co-Counsel is appointed without further delay.[32] Finally, the Appellant maintains that the President's Decision and the Registrar's Decision are contrary to the jurisprudence of both this Tribunal and that of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia ("ICTY"), including previous decisions of the Registrar allowing the withdrawal of counsel in cases of a breakdown of trust.[33]

8. In its Response, the Prosecution submits "that no change in the Appellant's legal representation for the appeal should be permitted to be used as a reason to cause any delay to the scheduling of the oral hearing in this case."[34] In his Reply, the Appellant reiterates that the withdrawal of Co-Counsel will not cause any delay in the appellate proceedings and that "the appointment of a new co-counsel would enable the timetable to be adhered to far more easily."[35]

B. Discussion

9. The Appeals Chamber has inherent power to review decisions of the Tribunal's President concerning withdrawal of counsel where such decisions are closely related to issues involving the fairness of proceedings on appeal and if the procedure provided by Article 19 of the Directive has been followed.[36] However, such review is neither a rehearing, nor an appeal, nor is it in any way similar to the review which a Chamber may undertake of its own judgement in accordance with Rule 119 of the Rules.[37] The Appeals Chamber recalls that judicial review of an administrative decision in relation to legal aid under the Directive is primarily concerned with the regularity of the procedure by which the Registrar and/or the President reached the impugned decision.[38] The decision will be quashed if the Registrar or the President:

(a) failed to comply with the legal requirements of the Directive, or
(b) failed to observe any basic rules of natural justice or to act with procedural fairness towards the person affected by the decision, or
(c) took into account irrelevant material or failed to take into account relevant material, or
(d) reached a conclusion which no sensible person who has properly applied his mind to the issue could have reached (the "unreasonableness" test).[39]

The Appeals Chamber also specified that

> "[t]hese issues may in the particular case involve, at least in part, a consideration of the sufficiency of the material before the Registrar [or President], but (in the absence of established unreasonableness) there can be no interference with the margin of appreciation of the facts or merits of that case to which the maker of such an administrative decision is entitled".[40]

Finally, in the review, the party contesting the administrative decision bears the onus of persuasion and must show that (a) an error of the nature described has occurred, and (b) that such error has significantly affected the impugned decision to his detriment.[41]

10. It has been repeatedly emphasized that the right to legal assistance financed by the Tribunal does not confer the right to counsel of one's choosing.[42] When deciding on the assignment of counsel, some weight is accorded to the accused's preference, but such preference may be overridden if it is in the interests of justice to do so.[43] The Appeals Chamber further recalls that an indigent accused does not have a right to a co-counsel, but, where appropriate and at the request of the lead counsel, the Registrar may appoint a co-counsel to assist the assigned lead counsel.[44] Accordingly, where co-counsel has been appointed and subsequently withdrawn, there is no guarantee that the co-counsel will be replaced.[45] Finally, the Appellant's personal preferences are irrelevant to assignment or withdrawal of co-counsel.[46]

11. Under Article 19 (A) (ii) of the Directive the Registrar may, in exceptional circumstances and at the request of lead counsel, withdraw the assignment of co-counsel.[47] The burden of proof of existence of such circumstances squarely lies on lead counsel.[48] The Appeals Chamber emphasizes that each case must be considered on its own and that what constitutes exceptional circumstances justifying a request for withdrawal may vary from one case to another. In addition, exceptional circumstances justifying withdrawal of a co-counsel might be substantially different from those applicable to withdrawal of a lead counsel.

12. The Appeals Chamber considers that the alleged conflict between the Appellant and his Co-Counsel on issues of legal strategy does not constitute an exceptional circumstance justifying a withdrawal of Co-Counsel. The Appeals Chamber notes that, in most decisions holding that a breakdown of trust between the accused and his legal representatives constituted an exceptional circumstance justifying the withdrawal of assignment, the breach of trust was attributable to one or more of the following circumstances: alleged incompetence or lack of knowledge of the Rwandan context and history; a lack of initiative in the defence of the accused; an exceptional workload incompatible with other professional commitments; a breach of professional responsibilities, including the obligation to communicate with the client; and misconduct or manifest negligence.[49] No allegations of this kind were made against Co-Counsel in the present case. Therefore, the Appeals Chamber is not convinced that the Registrar's Decision and the President's Decision contradict the Tribunal's jurisprudence.

13. The Appeals Chamber recalls that, according to the jurisprudence of both the Tribunal and the ICTY, an accused's refusal to cooperate with his lawyers does not constitute an exceptional circumstance warranting the Registrar's withdrawal of assigned counsel.[50] More precisely, an accused does not have the right to unilaterally destroy the trust between himself and his counsel, or to claim a breakdown in communication through unilateral actions, in the hope that such actions will result in the withdrawal of his counsel by the Registrar.[51] A lack of trust in counsel based on disagreements in approach to one's defence strategy is distinguishable from a lack of trust due to a breach by counsel in fulfilling his professional and ethical responsibilities in the course of representation.[52] Thus, a divergence of opinion as to the defence strategy cannot in itself justify that there is a loss of trust in the counsel's abilities or commitment to the case. It is even more so when the divergence is between an appellant and a co-counsel, whose mandate is to assist the lead counsel.[53]

14. In the present case, Lead Counsel did not provide the Registrar with any specific complaints regarding the performance of Co-Counsel that may have warranted her disqualification on the grounds of ineffective assistance or breach of professional duties. The Appeals Chamber rejects the Appellant's

[47] The Appeals Chamber notes that Article 20 (A) of the ICTY Directive on the Assignment of Defence Counsel N°1/94, IT/73/REV.11 does not contain the requirement of "exceptional circumstances" and instead refers to "the interests of justice". This difference should be born in mind when making parallels between the jurisprudence of the two Tribunals.

argument that it is sufficient "to state in broad terms" that the trust and confidence have broken down[54] and, consequently, finds that it was open to the Registrar and the President to conclude that the Appellant's request for withdrawal was not justified.[55]

15. Moreover, the Appeals Chamber is satisfied that the Registrar and the President properly took into account other particular circumstances of the case, such as the potential delay in the proceedings as well as the proper use of the Tribunal's resources.[56] Indeed, in the circumstances where no misconduct or manifest professional negligence on the part of the counsel is established, factors such as the efficient management of resources are directly relevant to the decision not to permit withdrawal of counsel.[57] The Registrar noted that

> "Ms. Mylvaganam submitted claims for 346.43 hours of work [during the months of May, June and July 2005], which were approved and duly paid",[58]

> "has claimed an additional 395.26 hours for the months of August-December 2005. These hours will be paid up to a maximum of 350 hours, making a total of hours paid to Co-Counsel 700 hours."[59]

The Registrar submitted that if Ms. Mylvaganam was withdrawn and a new co-counsel appointed,

> "this would require additional hours over the 700 hours already committed, and […] this may be a precedent that will have substantial implications for the Legal Aid Programme".[60]

The Appeals Chamber notes that Lead Counsel has explained that the remaining work on appeal will amount to at least 150 additional hours.[61]

16. Furthermore, the Appeals Chamber notes that proceedings in this appeal have been delayed for a significant time,[62] notably as a result of changes in the representation of the Appellant.[63] The Appeals Chamber also notes that the request for withdrawal of Co-Counsel came at a late stage of the proceedings, after the Appellant has filed his Reply Brief. At this stage, the introduction of a new co-counsel, unfamiliar with the case, will inevitably result in undue delay,[64] given that this person will require some time to get familiar with the case and its documents.[65] An unnecessary replacement of the current Co-Counsel who is thoroughly familiar with the case and who has already dedicated hundreds of hours to the Appellant's appeal would be detrimental to the Appellant's right to be tried fairly and expeditiously.[66] The Appeals Chamber thus finds that the Registrar and the President did not err in taking these factors into account.[67]

17. The Appeals Chamber is satisfied that the Appellant suffered no prejudice as a result of the Registrar's and the President's Decisions.[68] The Appellant is a long-time beneficiary of the Tribunal's legal aid system. As noted above, the Appellant appears to have received substantial assistance from the current Co-Counsel throughout the appellate proceedings. The alleged breakdown in trust dates to 16 February 2006,[69] that is, after the filing of the Appellant's Brief and the Reply Brief. The Appeals Chamber reiterates that no allegations of incompetence, negligence or any other breach of professional conduct were made against Co-Counsel and Lead Counsel has been fully satisfied with her performance.[70] In addition, the retention of the Co-Counsel would protect the Appellant's right to be tried fairly and expeditiously.[71] It was thus reasonable for the Registrar and the President to find that there was no basis for Lead Counsel, and a fortiori for the Appellant, to be dissatisfied with the quality of legal representation afforded by the Co-Counsel, and that there is no basis for the lack of trust in those abilities.[72] The Appeals Chamber finally notes that Co-Counsel's professional obligations to represent the Appellant remain.[73]

18. In light of the findings above, the Appeals Chamber concludes that there is no reason to quash either the Registrar's Decision or the President's Decision.

III. Disposition

19. For the foregoing reasons, the Appeals Chamber DISMISSES the Motion in its entirety.

- "Appellant Hassan Ngeze's Motion to Order The Prosecutor to Disclose Material and/or Statement/s of Witness EB Which Might Have Come in his Possession Subsequent to the Presentation of Forensic Expert's Report on Witness EB's Recanted Statement [sic]", filed confidentially by Hassan Ngeze ("Appellant") on 19 June 2006 ("Motion of 19 June 2006"), in which the Appellant requests the Appeals Chamber to order the Prosecutor to disclose material connected with the investigations conducted by the Special Counsel to the Prosecutor in relation with the alleged perjury committed by Witness EB;[1]

- "Appellant Hassan Ngeze's Urgent Motion for Leave to Present Additional Evidence (Rule 115) of Witness ABC1 as per Prosecutor's Disclosure of Transcript of Defence Witness ABC1's Testimony in *The Prosecutor v. Filed on 22nd June 2006 Pursuant to Rule 75 (F) (ii) and Rule 68 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence", filed confidentially on 13 July 2006 ("Response to the Motion of 4 July 2006") and Reply to the Prosecutor's Response to "the Appellant Hassan Ngeze's Urgent Motion for Leave to Present Additional Evidence (Rule 115) of Witness ABC1 as per Prosecutor's Disclosure of Transcript of Defence Witness ABC1's Testimony in The Prosecutor v. Bagosora et al. Filed on 22nd June 2006 Pursuant to Rule 75 (F) (ii) and Rule 68 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence", filed confidentially on 20 July 2006 ("Reply to the Response to the Motion of 4 July 2006"). The Appeals Chamber notes that the Response to the Motion of 4 July 2006 was served on the Appellant's Counsel by hand-delivery on 17 July 2006. Therefore, the Appeals Chamber considers the Reply to the Response to the Motion of 4 July 2006 to be filed timely.

[3] This Motion had initially been filed by the Appellant in person on 3 July 2006 but was returned to him as deficiently filed in light of the Order Concerning Filings by Hassan Ngeze dated 24 May 2004 and Order to the Registrar dated 26 November 2004. On 14 July 2006, the said Motion was forwarded to the Appeals Chamber by the Appellant's Counsel. On 21 September 2006, following the Appeals Chamber's Decision on Hassan Ngeze's Motions Concerning Restrictive Measures of Detention of 20 September 2006, the Appellant's Counsel requested the Registrar (with copy to the Presiding Judge in the present case) to "treat all filings of Hassan Ngeze's Motion in person and forwarded by [Counsel] as having been withdrawn". On 25 September 2006, the Registrar requested the Appellant's Counsel to address to the Registrar and the Appeals Chamber a precise list of motions that he wishes to withdraw. Up to date, no communication in this regard has been received from the Appellant's Counsel. In these circumstances and in light of the Practice Direction on Withdrawal of Pleadings, the Appeals Chamber considers the Motion of 14 July 2006 withdrawn. (See Prosecutor v. Edouard Karemera et al., Case N°ICTR-98-44-AR72.7, Decision on Prosecution Motion to Withdraw Appeal Regarding the Pleading of Joint Criminal Enterprise in a Count of Complicity in Genocide, 25 August 2006, para. 4, and *Prosecutor v. The Appellant has not filed a reply to the Response to the Motion of 28 August 2006.

- "Prosecutor's Motion Pursuant to Rule 115 to Admit the Envelopes in Which Copies of the Letter Purporting to Be a Statement From Witness EB Were Received", filed confidentially by the Prosecutor on 7 September 2006 ("Motion of 7 September 2006"), in which the Prosecution seeks admission of the envelopes in which copies of the alleged recantation statement of Witness EB were received by the Office of the Prosecutor as additional evidence.

I. Procedural background

2. Trial Chamber I of the Tribunal ("Trial Chamber") rendered its Judgement in this case on 3 December 2003.[5] The Appellant filed his Notice of Appeal on 9 February 2004,[6] amended on 9 May 2005,[7] and the Appellant's Brief on 2 May 2005.[8] The Prosecution filed its Respondent's Brief on 22 November 2005.[9] The Appellant replied on 15 December 2005.[10]

3. By its Decision of 23 February 2006,[11] the Appeals Chamber admitted as additional evidence on appeal handwritten and typed copies of Witness EB's purported recantation statement dated April 2005 ("Recantation Statement")[12] and the Forensic Report of Mr. Antipas Nyanjwa, an expert in handwriting, who assessed the authenticity of Witness EB's statement,[13] pursuant to Rule 115 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the Tribunal ("Rules"), and ordered that Witness EB be heard by the Appeals Chamber, pursuant to Rules 98 and 107 of the Rules.[14]

4. On 14 June 2006, the Appeals Chamber dismissed the Prosecution's request for an order to the Appellant to produce the original handwritten and typed versions of Witness EB's purported Recantation Statement, and ordered Witness EB to appear, as a witness of the Appeals Chamber, at an evidentiary hearing, pursuant to Rule 115 of the Rules.[15] By the same decision, the Appeals Chamber modified the protective measures applicable to Witness EB and prohibited the parties, their agents or any person acting on their behalf from contacting Witness EB, unless expressly authorized by the Appeals Chamber.[16]

5. On 20 June 2006, the Prosecution disclosed extracts from the [REDACTED] Gacaca Record Book, dated [REDACTED], which it asserts to be relevant to Witness EB's testimony.[17] The Appeals Chamber recalls that this material cannot currently be considered as tendered into evidence and will therefore not address its contents at the present stage.[18] On 22 June 2006, pursuant to Rules 75 (F) (ii) and 68 of the Rules, the Prosecution disclosed the transcript of Witness ABC1's testimony in the Bagosora et al. case dated 13 June 2006.[19]

6. On 3 August 2006, the Prosecution informed the Appellant and the Appeals Chamber that it received, on 6 July 2006, a copy of the statement purportedly written by Witness EB dated 15 or 16 December [year illegible] "affirming his earlier recanted statement" ("Additional Statement").[20] The copy of the said document (in Kinyarwanda with a translation into French) was transmitted by the Prosecution to the Appellant on 17 August 2006.[21] The English translation was transmitted to the Appellant on 22 August 2006.[22]

7. On 13 September 2006, the Appellant requested the Prosecution to transmit to him the transcript of Witness WFP10 [DW20] testimony in The Prosecutor v. Casimir Bizimungu et al., Case No. ICTR-99-50-T ("Bizimungu et al. case") dated 1 through 4 September 2006, partly given in closed session, which, in the Appellant's belief,

> "contains exculpatory evidence and is relevant to the evidentiary hearing of the witness EB before the Appeals Chamber".[23]

On 4 October 2006, the Prosecution responded that it was not in a position to accommodate this request because it is too general.[24] The Prosecution also affirmed that, upon review of both the closed and open session transcripts of Witness WFP10's testimony in the Bizimungu et al. case, it "has not found any exculpatory material within the meaning of Rule 68 (A) of the Rules", specifying that the only mention of Witness EB was made in open session and is thus available to the Appellant.[25]

II. Motion of 19 June 1999

8. The Appellant requests the Appeals Chamber to order the Prosecution to disclose material related to investigations into the alleged perjury committed by Witness EB which may have come into its possession after the filing of the Forensic Report.[26] The Appellant submits that such material is necessary for the preparation of his defence and cross-examination of Witness EB during the evidentiary hearing.[27] He suggests that the Appeals Chamber can order the production of additional evidence from either party under Rule 98 of the Rules.[28]

9. The Prosecution responds that the Motion of 19 June 2006 should be dismissed. First, the Prosecution contends that it is well aware of its ongoing obligations under Rule 68 of the Rules and has acted in full compliance with them, notably by making its Disclosures of 20 and 22 June 2006, and will continue to do so.[29] Second, it maintains that since the Motion of 19 June 2006 does not refer to any specific document, it amounts to a "fishing expedition".[30] Third, the Prosecution submits that any material uncovered by the Special Counsel during her investigation is privileged and protected by the provisions of Rule 70 (A) of the Rules and thus, will not be disclosed, except if it falls within the scope of Rule 68.[31]

10. The Appellant replies that he is not asking for any material relating to the Special Counsel's report, but for "the material or statement related to the witness EB only",[32] and notes that "it is not clear from the Prosecutor's response as to whether the Prosecutor has got any further statement from the witness EB or not".[33] He assumes that investigators, who were in contact with Witness EB after the filing of the Forensic Report and before the Appeals Chamber's prohibition of contact, might have received further material from Witness EB.[34] Finally, he affirms that, given the circumstances, he is unable to give further description of the materiel required.[35]

11. The Appeals Chamber recalls that the Prosecution has a positive and continuous obligation[36] under Rule 68 of the Rules to,

> "as soon as practicable, disclose to the Defence any material which in [its] actual knowledge […] may suggest the innocence or mitigate the guilt of the accused or affect the credibility of Prosecution evidence".

Determining what material is subject to disclosure under Rule 68 falls within the Prosecution's discretion and its initial assessment of such exculpatory material must be done in good faith.[37] However, Rule 68 (A) does not impose an obligation on the Prosecution to search for material which it does not have knowledge of, nor does it entitle the Defence to embark on a "fishing expedition".[38] Indeed, when an accused requests a Chamber to order the production of material, the accused's request

> "has to be sufficiently specific as to the nature of the evidence sought and its being in the possession of the addressee of the request".[39]

At the same time, such request is not required to be "as specific as to precisely identify which documents should be disclosed".[40] Finally, if an accused wishes to show that the Prosecution is in breach of these obligations, he/she must identify the material sought, present a prima facie showing as to its probable exculpatory nature, and prove the Prosecution's custody or control thereof.[41] Even when the Defence satisfies the Chamber that the Prosecution has failed to comply with its Rule 68 obligations, the Chamber will examine whether the Defence has actually been prejudiced by such failure before considering whether a remedy is appropriate.[42]

12. Under Rule 70 (A) of the Rules,

> "reports, memoranda, or other internal documents prepared by a party, its assistants or representatives in connection with the investigation or preparation of the case, are not subject to disclosure or notification"

under Rules 66 and 67. Pursuant to Rule 70 (B), with respect to information provided to the Prosecution on a confidential basis and used "solely for the purpose of generating new evidence", the Prosecution shall not disclose it to the Defence unless it obtains the consent of the person or entity providing such information and, in any event, cannot tender it into evidence without prior disclosure to the Defence.

13. The Appeals Chamber recalls that on 7 July 2005, the Prosecution confidentially filed the "Prosecutor's Additional Submissions in Response to 'Appellant Hassan Ngeze's Urgent Motion for Leave to Present Additional Evidence (Rule 115) of Witness EB'", in which it disclosed certain results of the investigations with respect to Witness EB.[43] These submissions were taken into account by the Appeals Chamber when assessing the prima facie credibility of Witness EB's additional evidence.[44] On 7 April 2006, the Prosecution specified that, although it was not in the position to provide a date for conclusion of the investigations, it was taking the necessary measures in order to ensure the communication of the results as soon as possible.[45] The Appeals Chamber notes that the Prosecution continually refers to issues related to Witness EB in its submissions concerning the restrictive measures applicable to the Appellant, notably "in the context of the ongoing investigations, led by the Special Counsel to the Prosecutor".[46] It notes, inter alia, that such measures are still necessary,

> "including in light of the recent letter, purportedly written by witness EB, with multiple copies mailed, from both Rwanda and Tanzania, to three Prosecution's Investigators".[47]

Further, on 4 September 2006, the Prosecution claimed that the Additional Statement

"can only be construed as further evidence that the restrictive measures are appropriate and should even be strengthened, particularly in light of the upcoming Rule 115 evidentiary hearing".[48]

In a Memorandum dated 11 September 2006, the Prosecution reasserted that there was a continuing campaign, involving the Appellant, to interfere with Witness EB.[49]

14. With respect to the Special Counsel's investigations, the Appeals Chamber has already stated that (i) the material produced in the course of these investigations is likely to fall under the scope of Rule 70 (A) of the Rules, and (ii) no existing orders or decisions obliged the Prosecution to communicate to the Appellant a report that could be prepared by the Special Counsel following her investigations.[50] At the same time, the Appeals Chamber specifically recalls its jurisprudence on distinctions to be made between witness statements and internal documents falling under Rule 70 (A).[51] In any event, neither Rule 70 nor the Decision on Special Counsel should in any way be interpreted as lessening the scope of the Prosecution's Rule 68 obligations described above.[52]

15. The Appeals Chamber takes note of the Prosecution's statement that it is "is well aware of its ongoing disclosure obligations, particularly through Rule 68" and "will continue […] to honour its disclosure obligations."[53] It also notes that, according to the Prosecution, the Disclosures of 20 and 22 June 2006 were not made in response to the Motion of 19 June 2006, but rather as part of its obligations to disclose exculpatory or other relevant material.[54] Finally, the Prosecution has specified that it did not provide copies of the Additional Statement to the Appellant prior to his request of 15 August 2006, since the document was at the same time addressed to the Appellant and his Counsel.[55] In these circumstances, although the Appeals Chamber accepts the Appellant's argument that in the present circumstances he cannot identify with more precision the nature of the material to which he seeks access, it finds that the Appellant has provided no indication of any failure of the Prosecution to comply with its disclosure obligation. Therefore, for lack of evidence to the contrary, the Appeals

In its last Memorandum dated 16 November 2006, the Prosecution makes a request for strengthening the restrictive measures in light of the upcoming appeals hearing "in order to safeguard, as much as possible, the integrity and fair outcome of the whole proceedings, as well as the rights to privacy and security of protected witnesses, including Witness EB" [REDACTED].

"34. Questions that were put to a witness – thus being part of the witness statement – have to be distinguished from "internal documents prepared by a party", which are not subject to disclosure under Rule 70 (A) of the Rules, as an exception to the general disclosure obligation pursuant to Rule 66 (A) (ii) of the Rules. A question once put to a witness is not an internal note any more; it does not fall within the ambit and thereby under the protection of Rule 70 (A) of the Rules. If, however, counsel or another staff member of the Prosecution notes down a question prior to the interrogation, without putting this question to the witness, such a question is not subject to disclosure. Similarly, any note made by counsel or another staff member of the Prosecution in relation to the questioning of the witness is not subject to disclosure, unless it has been put to the witness.

35. […] The Prosecution is obliged to make the witness statement available to the Defence in the form in which it has been recorded. However, something which is not in the possession of or accessible to the Prosecution cannot be subject to disclosure: nemo tenetur ad impossibile (no one is bound to an impossibility)." [53] Response to the Motion of 19 June 2006, para. 3.

[54] Disclosure of 20 June 2006, para. 4 (the Appeals Chamber notes that the Prosecution did not specify whether this disclosure was made under Rule 68 of the Rules); Disclosure of 22 June 2006. para. 2 (it is mentioned in para. 1 that the disclosure is made pursuant to Rules 68 and 75 (F) (ii)).

[55] Motion of 7 September 2006, para. 13.

Chamber considers that the Prosecution is acting in good faith.[56] In light of the above, there is no need for the Appeals Chamber to order the Prosecution to comply with its Rule 68 obligations, since

> "[o]nly where the Defence can satisfy a Chamber that the Prosecution has failed to discharge its obligations should an order of the type sought […] to be contemplated".[57]

16. In addition, while the parties do not refer to Rule 66 (B) of the Rules, the Appeals Chamber notes that the Appellant's request appears to fall under this provision since he is seeking access to documents that would be material to the preparation of his defence with respect to the cross-examination of Witness EB at the evidentiary hearing or might be intended for use by the Prosecution as evidence on that occasion. It has already been clarified that Rule 66 (B) applies to appellate proceedings and that, consequently, the Prosecution, on request of the Defence, "has to permit the inspection of any material which is capable of being admitted on appeal or which may lead to the discovery of material which is capable of being admitted on appeal".[58] In this respect, the Appeals Chamber recalls that "purely inculpatory material is not necessarily immaterial for the preparation of the Defence" and that the Prosecution should instead consider "(a) whether the issues to which the material relates are subject of a ground of appeal" or

> "(b) whether the material could reasonably lead to further investigation by the Defence and the discovery of additional evidence admissible under Rule 115 of the Rules".[59]

Therefore, the Appeals Chamber proprio motu directs the Prosecution to apply the above-mentioned criteria in order to determine whether it is in possession of any documents that are material to the preparation of the Defence, with the exception of Rule 70 material as discussed above, and then return, if necessary, to the Appeals Chamber for permission to withhold any information provided by these sources under Rule 66 (C) of the Rules.

17. Finally, the Appeals Chamber reiterates that, in compliance with its Decision of 14 June 2006, not only the parties, but also their agents or any other persons on their behalf, are prohibited from contacting or interfering with Witness EB.

III. Additional evidence

A. Applicable Law

18. The Appeals Chamber recalls that according to the jurisprudence of the Tribunal and that of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia ("ICTY"), an appeal pursuant to Article 24 of the Statute of the Tribunal (Article 25 of the Statute of the ICTY) is not a trial de novo and is not an opportunity to remedy any "failures or oversights" by a party during the pre-trial and trial phases.[60]

19. Rule 115 of the Rules provides for a corrective measure on appeal, and its purpose is to deal > "with the situation where a party is in possession of material that was not before the court of first instance and which is additional evidence of a fact or issue litigated at trial".[61]

According to this provision, for additional evidence to be admissible on appeal, the following requirements must be met. First, the motion to present additional evidence should be filed

> "not later than thirty days from the date for filing of the brief in reply, unless good cause or, after the appeal hearing, cogent reasons are shown for further delay".[62]

Second, the Appeals Chamber must find "that the additional evidence was not available at trial and is relevant and credible." When determining the availability at trial, the Appeals Chamber is mindful of the following principles:

> [T]he party in question must show that it sought to make "appropriate use of all mechanisms of protection and compulsion available under the Statute and the Rules of the International Tribunal to bring evidence […] before the Trial Chamber." In this connection, Counsel is expected to apprise the Trial Chamber of all the difficulties he or she encounters in obtaining the evidence in question, including any problems of intimidation, and his or her inability to locate certain witnesses. The obligation to apprise the Trial Chamber constitutes not only a first step in exercising due diligence but also a means of self-protection in that non-cooperation of the prospective witness is recorded contemporaneously.[63]

With regards to relevance, the Appeals Chamber will consider whether the proposed evidence sought to be admitted relates to a material issue. As to credibility, the Appeals Chamber will only refuse to admit evidence at this stage if "it is devoid of any probative value in relation to a decision pursuant to Rule 115"[64], without prejudice to a determination of the weight to be afforded.[65]

20. Once it has been determined that the additional evidence meets these conditions, the Appeals Chamber will determine whether the evidence "could have been a decisive factor in reaching the decision at trial."[66] To satisfy this, the evidence must be such that it could have had an impact on the verdict, i.e. it could have shown that a conviction was unsafe.[67] Accordingly, the additional evidence must be directed at a specific finding of fact related to a conviction or to the sentence.

21. Although Rule 115 of the Rules does not explicitly provide for this, the Appeals Chamber has considered that, where the evidence is relevant and credible, but was available at trial, or could have

B. MOTION OF 4 JULY 2006

Submissions of the Parties

23. In his Motion of 4 July 2006, the Appellant seeks the admission of evidence from Witness ABC1 which, he contends, shows that (i) testimony provided by other Prosecution Witnesses was false;[70] and (ii) the Appellant was not a party to the killings which occurred on 7 April 1994 in Gisenyi.[71] The proffered evidence consists of transcripts of Witness ABC1's testimony on 13 June 2006 in the Bagosora et al. case, including testimony given in closed session.[72] The Appellant also prays the Appeals Chamber to call the witness to testify in the present case.[73]

24. The Appellant submits that this evidence became available to him only after the Disclosure of 22 June 2006,[74] despite the exercise of due diligence.[75] He submits that it is relevant to the issue relating to his innocence,[76] since it does not implicate him in the killings of 7 April 1994 in Gisenyi, which is in "complete contradiction" with Witness EB's testimony of 15-17 May 2001.[77] In consequence, according to the Appellant, if accepted, this new evidence will "belie the prosecution's story narrated by PWs [sic] AGX, Serushago, and AHI" and overturn the Trial Chamber's factual findings at paragraphs 812, 836 and 837 of the Trial Judgement,[78] thus affecting the verdict.[79] Stressing that the finding of credibility of Witness EB was "based upon false evidence", the Appellant avers that the non-admission of Witness ABC1's testimony will result in a miscarriage of justice.[80]

25. The Prosecution opposes the Motion of 4 July 2006 and submits that it does not meet the threshold criteria for admission of additional evidence pursuant to Rule 115 of the Rules.[81] First, the Prosecution argues that the Appellant has not shown that the material was unavailable at trial. It contends that Witness ABC1 and the Appellant knew each other and the Appellant thus could have sought to contact [this person] as a potentially useful witness in support of his alibi defence.[82] Second, the Prosecution maintains that the evidence is not relevant to a material issue, since Witness ABC1 only testified [as to not having seen] the Appellant at [Barnabé Samvura's] house on the morning of 7 April 1994, and not about the Appellant's activities outside that house on that day, in and around Gisenyi.[83] The Prosecution adds that "whether or not a meeting actually took place is not materially relevant to the facts underpinning the Appellant's conviction",[84] the material issue, as presented by Witness EB, being the fact that the Appellant spoke through a loudspeaker, in the street, inciting Interahamwe to kill Tutsis.[85] Third, the Prosecution contests the credibility of Witness ABC1 and submits that there is evidence in the Bagosora et al. case that contradicts [the] testimony [provided by this witness].[86] Finally, the Prosecution submits that, in any event, the Appellant does not demonstrate that the evidence would or even could have affected the verdict at trial.[87] It points out that the Appellant does not explain why the Trial Chamber would have preferred Witness ABC1's evidence to that of Witness EB[88] or to that of other witnesses concerning his participation in the genocide.[89]

26. In his Reply to the Response to the Motion of 4 July 2006, the Appellant underlines that the Prosecution's contention that the proffered evidence is irrelevant contradicts the fact that it was disclosed to him under Rule 68 as exculpatory and relevant.[90] He maintains that there is no reason to doubt Witness ABC1's credibility, who is an eyewitness and the "most natural witness to describe the true facts which occurred on 7th April, 1994, at [Samvura's] house".[91] He adds that any reference to the evidence of Witness EB is not appropriate at this stage in light of the upcoming evidentiary hearing.[92] Finally, the Appellant concludes that even if another eyewitness' (Witness EB) testimony gave a different version of the incidents of 7 April 1994, Witness ABC1's evidence "is relevant as in that situation according to the principle of evidence neither of the version[s] could be accepted as true".[93]

Discussion

27. As a preliminary matter, the Appeals Chamber considers that there is good cause for the late filing of the Motion of 4 July 2006. Witness ABC1's testimony in the Bagosora et al. case, dated 13 June 2006, was made, in the relevant parts, in closed session. The Prosecution disclosed the corresponding transcript on 22 June 2006 and the Motion of 4 July 2006 was filed soon thereafter. The Appeals Chamber therefore recognizes the Motion of 4 July 2006 as timely.

28. However, with respect to the availability of the proffered evidence at trial, the Appeals Chamber agrees with the Prosecution that the Appellant failed to exercise the due diligence required for the evidence to be admissible on appeal. The Appeals Chamber recalls that > "the mere fact that [a witness] gave evidence in another case and that the Appellant was not aware that [the witness was] in possession of this information until then does not in itself suffice to demonstrate unavailability of the evidence at trial."[94]

[83] Ibid., paras 7-8. According to the Prosecution, the Appellant's interpretation of the scope of Witness ABC1's testimony is grossly exaggerated and can only stand for the proposition that she did not see the Appellant at [Samvura's] house that morning, a fact that has no relevance to the Appellant's conviction.

The Appellant must demonstrate that the "proffered evidence was not available to him at trial in any form" and that he had made use of all mechanisms of protection and compulsion available under the Statute and the Rules to bring the evidence before the Trial Chamber.[95] In the present case, the Appellant has not shown why he could not call [Witness ABC1] [REDACTED] as a Defence witness at trial in order to refute the evidence provided by Witness EB stating that, on the morning of 7 April 1994, he saw the Appellant go into the compound of Samvura's house together with many Interahamwe. Therefore, the Appeals Chamber is not satisfied that this evidence was unavailable at trial.

29. As to the relevance and credibility of the proffered evidence, the Appeals Chamber is satisfied that the prima facie requirements have been met. The testimony of Witness ABC1 in the Bagosora et al. case is, on its face, in contradiction with the testimony on the same events given by some of the Prosecution witnesses in the present case, and that of Witness EB in particular. The evidence in question thus appears to have some relevance to the Trial Chamber's findings on the credibility of these witnesses as well as to its factual findings with respect to the Appellant's participation in the killings that took place in Gisenyi on the morning of 7 April 1994.[96] Without prejudice to the Trial Chamber's findings in the Bagosora et al. case as to the credibility of Witness ABC1 and considering the fact that the testimony was given under solemn oath, the Appeals Chamber is satisfied that the proffered evidence is prima facie reasonably capable of belief or reliance.[97]

30. Having found that the evidence of Witness ABC1 was available at trial and could have been discovered at trial through the exercise of due diligence, the Appeals Chamber must determine whether the non-admission of the additional evidence would amount to a miscarriage of justice.

31. The Appellant claims that Witness ABC1's testimony in the Bagosora et al. case would have affected the Trial Chamber's findings as to the credibility of Prosecution Witnesses AHI, EB, AGX and Omar Serushago,[98] hence calling into question the findings of fact made by the Trial Chamber concerning the events in Gisenyi on the basis of the evidence given by those witnesses. The Appeals Chamber notes that, in the Bagosora et al. case, Witness ABC1 expressly affirmed that, on the morning of 7 April 1994, there was no meeting held at Samvura's place and that the Appellant was not present in [that] house.[99]

32. The relevant factual findings of the Trial Chamber in the present case appear to be made on the basis of evidence provided by Witness Serushago that the Appellant was transporting weapons on the morning of 7 April 1994[100] corroborated by the evidence of Witness EB that he saw the Appellant "on the morning of 7 April in a red taxi with a loudspeaker".[101] The Trial Chamber also took into account that Witness AHI saw the Appellant early in the morning that day "in military gear, carrying a gun" and that Witness AGX saw him at around 2:30 p.m.

by asserting that an attempt had been made before or during the trial to ascertain from such prospective witnesses what evidence they could give, but that the prospective witnesses had either failed or declined to co-operate. However, before additional evidence will be admitted pursuant to Rule 115, the defence is obliged to demonstrate not only that the evidence was not available at trial but also that the evidence could not have been discovered through the exercise of due diligence […]. This obligation of due diligence is therefore directly relevant to the procedures of the Tribunal (in particular, Rule 54) both before and during trial, as well as on appeal." "passing by on the road in a vehicle with Interahamwe and Impuzamugambi, armed with different kinds of weapons and speaking through a megaphone, calling on the public to flush out the enemy and enemy accomplices".[102]

Finally, the Trial Chamber noted, on the basis of evidence provided by Witness EB, that

"[w]eapons were distributed from a central location, Samvura's house, where Witness EB saw the Interahamwe picking them up".[103]

On these grounds, the Trial Chamber concluded that

Hassan Ngeze ordered the Interahamwe in Gisenyi on the morning of 7 April 1994 to kill Tutsi civilians and prepare for their burial at the Commune Rouge. Many were killed in the subsequent attacks that happened immediately thereafter and later on the same day. […] The attack that resulted in these and other killings was planned systematically, with weapons distributed in advance, and arrangements made for the transport and burial of those to be killed.[104]

The Appeals Chamber notes that the Trial Chamber considered that Omar Serushago's testimony was not consistently reliable and accepted it "with caution, relying on it only to the extent that it [was] corroborated".[105] The testimony of Witnesses AHI, AGX and EB was, however, found to be credible.[106]

33. Witnesses AHI and AGX did not specifically testify to the fact that there had been a meeting in Samvura's house on the morning of 7 April 1994, or that the Appellant attended that meeting or participated in the distribution of arms that day.[107] Therefore, their testimony and/or credibility would not be affected by the evidence provided by Witness ABC1 in the Bagosora et al. case.[108] However, the Appeals Chamber agrees that the account given by Witness ABC1 can be interpreted as contradicting the testimony of Witness EB in the present case, in particular, when he stated that, on 7 April 1994, at around 07:00 a.m., he saw the Appellant going towards the house of Barnabé Samvura.[109] The same morning, he also saw other people go into the compound of Samvura's house and, thirty minutes later, he heard the Appellant speak through his loudspeaker, telling the Interahamwe to kill the Tutsi and that some of them should go to the Commune Rouge to dig pits. According to Witness EB, when coming out of Samvura's house, the Interahamwe carried nail-studded clubs, rifles and grenades, and the attacks started around 01:00 p.m.[110]

[107] Witness AHI testified that he saw the Appellant on the morning of 7 April in a military outfit accompanied by his bodyguards (T. 4 September 2001, p. 51 l. 13-17 and p. 69 l. 17-25; T. 10 September 2001, p. 17 l. 18-20 and p. 92 l. 17-22). Witness AHI referred to distribution of arms by Colonel Anatole Nsenigyumva on 7 April 1994, but specified that the Appellant was present at a meeting held on 8 April 1994 (T. 4 September 2001, p. 58 l. 7-9 and p. 60 l. 11-19).
Witness AGX saw the Appellant in the afternoon of 7 April 1994 "passing by on the road in a vehicle aboard which were Interahamwe as well as Impuzamugambi of the CDR" (T. 11 June 2001, p. 39; T. 13 June 2001, p. 39; T. 14 June 2001, pp 40-42).
[108] The Appeals Chamber notes that Witness ABC1 also testified that there was no meeting with Anatole Nsengiyumva held in Samvura's house on 7 April 1994 and no distribution of weapons took place there (Bagosora et al. case, T. 13 June 2006 (closed session), p. 11 l. 34-35, p. 12 l. 29-31, p. 27 l. 16-18 and 26-31). Witness AHI referred to a meeting of MRND and CDR officials held on 8 April 1994 followed by distribution of weapons (T. 4 September 2001, pp 55-62) and Witness AGX testified that Colonel Nsengiyumva spoke in Gisenyi on 7 April 1994 around 10:00 a.m. saying that the President had been killed by enemies, adding that there were about two hundred people there (T. 11 June 2001, pp 34-39). Consequently, the Appeals Chamber concludes that the three witnesses were referring to different events and no flagrant contradiction affecting their credibility could reasonably be drawn from these accounts.

34. The fact that there had been a meeting held at Samvura's house on the morning of 7 April 1994 involving the Appellant and distribution of arms is not in itself decisive for the Trial Chamber's conclusion as to the Appellant's responsibility for killings of the Tutsi civilians in Gisenyi. In fact, the Trial Chamber concluded that there was no evidence that the Appellant was present during the killings of 7 April 1994[111] and that, on that morning, the Appellant ordered the Interahamwe to kill the Tutsi and to prepare graves in Commune Rouge.[112] Consequently, the principal issue is whether, should the Trial Chamber have had the benefit of hearing the testimony of Witness ABC1, it would have disbelieved Witness EB with respect to the events that took place on the morning of 7 April 1994. In the presence of contradictory accounts of the two witnesses, the Trial Chamber would have had to determine which of the accounts was reliable and, in light of evidence provided by Witness ABC1 in the Bagosora et al. case and the fact that [REDACTED], the Appeals Chamber is not satisfied that a reasonable trier of fact would have found this witness credible to the detriment of the account provided by Witness EB. Moreover, Witness ABC1 in the Bagosora et al. case only testified to the fact that the Appellant was not at [Samvura's] house that morning and that there was no meeting there. The mere fact that [Witness ABC1] did not witness or hear him ordering the killings does not mean that this could not have occurred.[113] The Appeals Chamber notes to this extent that Witness EB testified that the Appellant ordered the killing through a loudspeaker from his vehicle and not during the meeting at Samvura's house.[114] Consequently, and in light of the findings above concerning Witnesses AHI and AGX, the Appeals Chamber is not satisfied that the exclusion of the proffered additional evidence would amount to a miscarriage of justice inasmuch as, had it been adduced at trial, it would not have had an impact on the verdict.

C. Motion of 28 August 2006

35. is Motion of 28 August 2006, the Appellant prays the Appeals Chamber to admit the Additional Statement of Witness EB purportedly affirming his Recantation Statement of April 2005.[115] The Appellant contends that this evidence is credible and relevant to the evidentiary hearing insofar as, if accepted, it "will clear the doubts of the Prosecution regarding the truthfulness of witness 'EB' [sic] first recanted statement".[116] He notes that this evidence, not available at trial, could not have been discovered through the exercise of due diligence, and its exclusion would amount to a miscarriage of justice.[117]

36. The Prosecution does not object to the Motion of 28 August 2006, acknowledging the relevance of the Additional Statement in light of the evidentiary hearing of Witness EB.[118] Nevertheless, it points out that the "agreement on the admissibility of this statement relates only to the actual admissibility of the statement, and not to the merits, that is, the reliability or credibility, of the contents of the document."[119] Furthermore, the Prosecution specifies that the admission of copies of the envelopes in which copies of this letter were received by the Office of the Prosecutor would be necessary.[120]

[114] At the same time, the Appeals Chamber recalls that the credibility of Witness EB, the only witness to have testified to the ordering of the killings by the Appellant (the only relevant part of Omar Serushago's testimony that was considered corroborated by the Trial Chamber, and thus reliable, referred to the fact that the Appellant "was transporting arms in a red Hilux vehicle on the morning of 7 April 1994" but not the fact that he ordered that attack), is yet to be re-assessed on the basis of his testimony at the appeals hearing to the subject of his purported Recantation Statement.

Discussion

37. The Appeals Chamber notes that in the Additional Statement, Witness EB purportedly states that the reason for this new statement is that after having sent his Recantation Statement, he > "learned that officials from the Office of the Prosecutor who had come to see [him] at [his] home had submitted [his] statement to the [Tribunal]" and that

> "[t]hese employees of the Tribunal, who would usually meet [him] at the Ubumwe Hotel threatened [him], asking [him] why [he] had written to the Tribunal to announce [his] recantation".

Since he was

> "annoyed by their threats, and in order to get rid of them, [he] told them the document containing [his] recantation did not come from [him], even though [he] was indeed the one who had written it".

According to the Additional Statement, Witness EB met the "employees of the Tribunal" once more when they came back to confirm that he was the author of the Recantation Statement but had not heard from them ever since. Therefore, he decided to write the Additional Statement to confirm that both Recantation Statements of 5 and 27 April 2005 were written and signed by him. In addition to the information contained in Witness EB's purported original Recantation Statement, the Additional Statement specifies that, contrary to his testimony adduced at trial, he never saw the Appellant on 6-9 April 1994 in Gisenyi [REDACTED]. According to the Additional Statement, it was well known to the inhabitants of Gisenyi that the Appellant was arrested following President Habyarimana's death and remained in detention until 9 April 1994; besides, they also knew that the vehicle equipped with megaphones belonged to Hassan Gitoki from Commune Rouge and not to the Appellant. Finally, in the Additional Statement, Witness EB refers to the Prosecution Witness AFX who allegedly also falsely testified against the Appellant.

38. The Appeals Chamber considers that there is good cause for the late filing of the Motion of 28 August 2006, since, as explained above, the Appellant only received a copy the Additional Statement in August 2006.[121] For the reasons explained in the Ngeze Decision on Additional Evidence,[122] the Appeals Chamber finds that the proffered evidence was unavailable at trial and could not be obtained through the exercise of due diligence. The Appeals Chamber is equally satisfied that the tendered Additional Statement is prima facie credible and relevant.[123] Finally, the Appeals Chamber finds that the Additional Statement could have been a decisive factor in concluding upon the Appellant's responsibility for the events that took place in Gisenyi on 7-9 April 1994.[124] The Appeals Chamber emphasizes that the above findings pertain strictly to the admissibility and not to the merits of the proffered additional evidence.[125]

39. For the foregoing reasons, the Appeals Chamber finds that the Additional Statement is admissible as additional evidence on appeal.

D. MOTION OF 7 SEPTEMBER 2006

40. In its Motion of 7 September 2006, the Prosecution seeks admission of the envelopes containing copies of the Additional Statement as additional evidence on appeal for the purposes of the evidentiary hearing of Witness EB.[126] The Prosecution claims that the information on the envelopes is relevant to the issue of determining the authenticity of the Additional Statement,

> "which in turn is relevant to the issues [of] the oral hearing, whether EB is recanting his trial testimony or whether the recantation statement is a product of the Appellant['s] efforts to interfere with and suborn the testimony of witnesses".[127]

It contends that

> "[t]he circumstances surrounding the receipt and timing of the letter […] are suspicious and lead to the inference that someone associated with the Appellant, or at least someone other than EB, has manufactured the letter".[128]

The Prosecution, being in the process of obtaining the originals of the envelopes, also seeks direction from the Appeals Chamber as to whether it ought to retain the originals until the evidentiary hearing or whether they should be filed immediately upon their receipt.[129] The Appellant did not respond to the Motion of 7 September 2006.

41. The Appeals Chamber recalls that, pursuant to Rule 115 of the Rules, motions for additional evidence on appeal must be directed towards the contested specific finding of fact made by the Trial Chamber. The Appeals Chamber recalls that, while the Rule itself does not expressly prohibit a party from seeking the admission of additional evidence to bolster challenged factual findings, in the practice of this Tribunal, as well as that of the ICTY,

> "motions for additional evidence are directed towards supporting an argument of factual error, and if additional evidence is sought to be admitted in support of a factual finding, it is admitted as rebuttal material to that additional evidence admitted in support of a factual error".[130]

The Prosecution has not appealed the Trial Judgement and is not, in the circumstances of the instant case, in a position to seek admission of additional evidence. Rather, it should have applied for admission of rebuttal material.

42. The Appeals Chamber finds that it is in the interests of justice to examine proprio motu whether the material tendered by the Prosecution in its Motion of 7 September 2006 can be admitted

[128] Ibid., para. 6. According to the Prosecution, several copies of the Additional Statement – and not the original – were sent to the offices of the ICTR in Arusha and Kigali, to two investigators and an interpreter from OTP, in June 2006, from Tanzania and Rwanda (paras 7-8). According to the Prosecution, "it would seem highly improbable that the date of the Appellant's Motion [of 19 June 2006], seeking admission of an additional statement received from Witness EB, is purely coincidental with the mailing of this letter" (paras 9-11, with reference to para. 3 of the Motion of 19 June 2006, in which the Appellant affirms that "the Prosecutor might have collected or received some material and/or statements from witness EB[…]") The Prosecution maintains that the fact that the Additional Statement was allegedly written in December 2005 but only posted in June 2006 militates for a conclusion that Witness EB may have written it under some duress or that the letters were manufactured by someone else (para. 11). It adds that it "is suspicious that a letter purporting to come from Witness EB, an indigent person living in Rwanda, was mailed from Tanzania and Rwanda", the only plausible explanation being that someone other than Witness EB posted several copies to several persons from several places in order to ensure that the letter was received by the Tribunal (para. 12).

as rebuttal evidence on appeal. It has been well established by the jurisprudence that rebuttal material is admissible if it directly affects the substance of the additional evidence admitted by the Appeals Chamber[131] and, as such, has a different test of admissibility from additional evidence under Rule 115 of the Rules.[132] In light of its findings above with respect to the admissibility of the Additional Statement, the Appeals Chamber finds that copies of envelopes in which the copies of the Additional Statement were purportedly sent to various addressees within the Office of the Prosecutor are directly relevant to the issue of the authenticity of the Additional Statement and a fortiori that of the Recantation Statement. Therefore, the Appeals Chamber is satisfied that the proffered material affects the substance of the admitted additional evidence and is thus admissible as rebuttal evidence on appeal.

43. The Appeals Chamber emphasizes that it is highly desirable to have the originals of the said rebuttal evidence, as well as of the Recantation Statement and the Additional Statement, filed and available at the evidentiary hearing.

IV. DISPOSITION

44. For the forgoing reasons, the Appeals Chamber DISMISSES the Motion of 19 June 2006; CONSIDERS the Motion of 14 July 2006 to be WITHDRAWN by the Appellant's Counsel; DISMISSES the Motion of 4 July 2006; GRANTS the Motion of 28 August 2006 and ADMITS the Additional Statement as additional evidence on appeal; DISMISSES the Motion of 7 September 2006. The Appeals Chamber proprio motu ADMITS as rebuttal evidence on appeal the copies of envelopes annexed to the Motion of 7 September 2006.

45. The Appeals Chamber INSTRUCTS the Registrar to provide the following material so far admitted into evidence on appeal with corresponding exhibit numbers:

- copy of the typed statement purportedly signed by Witness EB, index numbers 2223A-2220-A;
- Forensic Report, including the copy of the purported handwritten Recantation Statement, index numbers 3442/A-3413/A;
- copy of the Additional Statement in Kinyarwanda, as well as its translations into English and French, index numbers 8121A-8112/A
- copies of envelopes, index numbers 8183/A-8175/A.

THE APPEALS CHAMBER of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighboring States, between 1 January and 31 December 1994 ("Appeals Chamber" and "Tribunal", respectively),

RECALLING the "Scheduling Order for Appeals Hearing and Decision on Hassan Ngeze's Motion of 24 January 2006" rendered on 16 November 2006 ("Scheduling Order"), by which the Appeals Chamber ordered that the appeals hearing in the present case shall take place on 16, 17 and 18 January 2007 ("Appeals Hearing"), allowing each of the three co-Appellants two hours and thirty minutes time for their oral submissions on the merits, including arguments in reply, plus ten minutes each for a personal address to the Appeals Chamber;

BEING SEIZED OF "The Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Motion Concerning the Scheduling Order for the Appeals Hearing" filed on 23 November 2006 ("Motion"), requesting that "more time be set aside for the presentation of oral arguments and if necessary an extension of the date for hearing to include Friday 19th January 2007" and "[i]n the event that a co-counsel is not available that the proceedings be adjourned for one calendar month";[1]

NOTING the "Prosecutor's Response to 'The Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Motion Concerning the Scheduling Order for the Appeals Hearing'" filed by the Office of the Prosecutor ("Prosecution") on 28 November 2006 ("Response"), in which the Prosecution: (i) objects to any adjournment of the Appeals Hearing to a later date;[2] (ii) requests to be accorded additional time for its oral arguments in response should the Appellant's requests for additional time for his oral arguments be granted by the present decision;[3] (iii) contends that "the Appellant's boycott of his trial does not entitle him to more time for a personal address to the Appeals Chamber";[4] and (iv) submits that it reserves its right to object to the filing of skeleton arguments during the hearing should they contain new arguments;[5]

NOTING that the Appellant did not file a reply to the Response;

NOTING that in the Motion, the Appellant provides reasons in support of his argument that the Appeals Hearing should be scheduled for a later date than provided in the Scheduling Order including, inter alia, his intention to file a new motion under Rule 115 of the Tribunal's Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("Rules") as well to invite the Bar Counsel of England and Wales Human Rights Committee to attend and observe the Appeals Hearing;[6]

CONSIDERING that under Rule 115 (A) of the Rules, the parties may file motions for admission of additional evidence on appeal after the appeal hearing, provided that cogent reasons are shown for such a delay;

[1] Motion, para. 1; see also paras 18, 23 and 24 whereby the Appellant requests that his Counsel be permitted to address the Appeals Chamber for a time of three hours plus one hour and half for a reply to the Prosecution's arguments, as well as that he be given thirty minutes for the personal address.

[3] Response, para. 9.
[4] Response, para. 11.
[5] Response, para. 12.
[6] Motion, paras 2 and 3.

CONSIDERING that a party's intention to invite a third-party observer to the appeals hearing and the availability of that third-party on certain dates are not factors that the Appeals Chamber is required to take into consideration when setting the date for an appeals hearing;

CONSIDERING that since the Appeals Chamber's Decision of 23 November 2006[7] upheld the President's decision to refuse the withdrawal of the Appellant's Co-Counsel, the arguments in the Motion in relation to the absence of the Co-Counsel[8] are moot;

CONSIDERING that in light of the amendments to the Rules, which entered into force on 10 November 2006, the Appellant's arguments with respect to logistical problems in relation to the preparation of the Appeal Books on or before 18 December 2006[9] are moot, since the Rules no longer place such an obligation on the parties;[10]

FINDING therefore that the Appellant has failed to establish good cause for the Appeals Chamber delaying the Appeals Hearing as set in the Scheduling Order;

NOTING that the Appellant contends that the time allotted for oral submissions on the merits at the Appeals Hearing is inconsistent with the applicable provisions and jurisprudence of the Tribunal and is inadequate with respect to the complexity of the present case;[11]

NOTING further that the Appellant submits that he would need additional time for oral submissions due to a number of factors, inter alia (i) the fact "that neither the Appellant nor the current legal team participated in the original trial"; (ii) the nature of the charges and the seriousness of the sentence; (iii) the large number of pre-trial issues of law and fact; (iv) the length of the trial and the amount of evidence involved; (v) the need to cross-reference facts "as between the oral testimony and documentary exhibits which could not be set out in the Appeals Brief"; and (vi) the fact that he was not allowed to surpass the page-limit applicable to his Appeals Brief or to add "any annexes summarizing the position of either party";[12]

CONSIDERING that there exists no provision in the Tribunal's Statute, Rules or Practice Directions as to the exact time to be allocated for the parties' oral submissions on appeal, and that such decisions are taken by the Appeals Chamber on a case-by-case basis;

RECALLING that the parties are to focus their oral arguments on the grounds of appeal raised in their briefs[13] and that the appeals hearing is not the occasion for presenting new arguments on the merits of the case;

RECALLING further that, during the hearing of an appeal, the parties are expected

> "to prepare themselves in such a way as not simply to recount what has been set out in their written submission, but to confine their oral arguments to elaborating on points relevant to this appeal that they wish to bring to the Appeals Chamber's attention";[14]

CONSIDERING that the Scheduling Order was issued by the Appeals Chamber under Rule 114 of the Rules in full consideration of the particular circumstances and complexity of the present case in accordance with the practice of the Tribunal;

FINDING therefore that the Appellant has failed to demonstrate any need, in the interests of justice, for the Appeals Chamber to allow more time than that allotted for the parties' oral submissions on the merits at the Appeals Hearing in the Scheduling Order;

NOTING that the Appellant also seeks to be permitted to present "a skeleton argument summarizing the oral submissions", as well as to make the following written submissions on the first day of the appeal hearing, namely

> "(a) a schedule of witness inconsistencies and contradictions (b) a schedule setting out the various standards of proof used to make findings of credibility and (c) a schedule setting out the identification evidence against the appellant together with the findings of the Trial Chamber";[15]

CONSIDERING that parties may use and/or formally present skeleton arguments, slides or schedules to the Appeals Chamber in support of their oral arguments, provided that they contain no new arguments on the merits of the case and that the opposing party does not object;[16]

CONSIDERING, however, that the Appeals Chamber is not in a position to decide whether the use of the documents referred to by the Appellant shall be allowed, since they were not presented with the Motion;

NOTING that the Appellant finally requests an extension of time of up to thirty minutes for his personal address to the Appeals Chamber on the grounds that (a) "there is no other jurisdiction where a personal address is short as to amount almost to an afterthought within the context of the proceedings" and (b) that the "Appellant did not attend his trial and had imposed counsel";[17]

CONSIDERING that no statutory or regulatory provision of the Tribunal allows for the "right" of an appellant who is represented by counsel to personally address the Appeals Chamber[18] but that the Appeals Chamber has, in practice, allowed for such an option as a matter of courtesy to appellants;

FINDING that the Appellant has failed to demonstrate in the Motion that it is in the interests of justice to allow the Appellant to surpass the time allocated to him by the Scheduling Order for the personal address;

ON THE BASIS OF THE FOREGOING, HEREBY DISMISSES the Motion.

1. To review for accuracy the audio-tapes of the testimonies given before the Trial Chamber by Witnesses AAM, AFB, AGK and X as follows:

- Testimony of Witness AAM of 12 February 2001, to determine whether the Witness declared "they[6] were shouting – they were singing tuzatsembatsembe, let me spell ; T-U-Z-A-T-S-E-M-B-A-T-S-E-M-B-E[7], in other words, let's exterminate them" – as quoted from the English transcripts and in the Judgement – [8] or whether the witness stated "Barayagwiza portait une casquette de la CDR, et il[9] chantait, disait tuzitsembatsembe. Je vais épeler : T-U-Z-I-T-S-E-M-B-A-T-S-E-M-B-E[10]" – as indicated in the French transcript.[11]
- Testimony of Witness AFB of 6 March 2001, to ascertain which Kinyarwanda terms were used by the witness and translated into English[12] and French[13] by the words "we shall exterminate them" and "nous les exterminerons", respectively;
- Testimony of Witness AGK of 21 June 2001, to verify whether the witness used the terms "tubatsembatsembe" or "tuzitsembambe";[14]
- Video-conference testimony of Witness X of 18 February 2002, to ascertain whether the witness used the term "tubatsembatsembe" as indicated in the Judgement.[15]

2. To confirm the English and French translations of the following purported Kinyarwanda terms mentioned in Barayagwiza's Appeal Brief and Barayagwiza's Reply,[16] and in the Judgement:[17]

Gutsembatsemba
Tuzazitsembatsemba
Tuzitsembatsembe

3. To review for accuracy the translation – contained in Exhibit P105/2B – of the section of Ferdinand Nahimana's interview of 25 April 1994 with Radio Rwanda, where the Kinyarwanda verb "gufatanya" is allegedly used.[19]

1. The Appeals Chamber of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States Between 1 January and 31 December 1994 ("Appeals Chamber" and "Tribunal", respectively) is seized of five motions by the Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza ("Appellant"):

- "The Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Motion Giving Notice of the Further Delay in the Filing of the Motion for Additional Evidence Relating to Alison Des Forges, Pursuant to the Decision of 26 May 2006" filed on 26 June 2006 ("Motion Giving Notice of Delay");[1]
- "The Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Motion for Leave to Present Additional Evidence (Rule 115)" filed on 7 July 2006 ("First Rule 115 Motion");[2]
- "The Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Corrigendum Motion Relating to the Appellant's Reply to the Prosecutor's Response to the Appellant's Motion for Leave to Present Additional Evidence (Rule 115) Dated 20th July 2006" filed on 31 July 2006 ("Corrigendum Motion");[3]
- "The Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Motion for Leave to Present Additional Evidence (Rule 115)" filed on 13 September 2006 ("Second Rule 115 Motion");[4]

[1] The Prosecution did not file a response to the Motion Giving Notice of Delay.

[2] The Prosecution filed the "Prosecutor's Response to 'The Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Motion for Leave to Present Additional Evidence (Rule 115)'" on 17 July 2006 ("Response to the First Rule 115 Motion"). The Appellant filed "The Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Reply to the Prosecutor's Response to 'The Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Motion for Leave to Present Additional Evidence (Rule 115)'" on 21 July 2006 ("Reply to the First Rule 115 Motion").

[3] The Prosecution did not file a reponse to the Corrigendum.

[4] The Prosecution filed the "Prosecutor's Response to 'The Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Motion for Leave to Present Additional Evidence (Rule 115)'" on 22 September 2006 ("Response to the Second Rule 115 Motion"), and the Appellant

- "The Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Motion for Leave to Present Additional Evidence (Rule 115)" filed on 14 November 2006 ("Third Rule 115 Motion").[5]

2. In the First Rule 115 Motion, the Appellant requests the Appeals Chamber to admit twelve pieces of additional evidence on appeal to support his allegation that Alison Des Forges, who testified as an expert witness at trial, was biased against the Appellant. The Motion Giving Notice of Delay and the Corrigendum Motion are ancillary to the First Rule 115 Motion. In the Second Rule 115 Motion, the Appellant seeks admission of three documents related to his role within the "Coalition pour la Défense de la République" ("CDR") as additional evidence on appeal. In the Third Rule 115 Motion, the Appellant requests the Appeals Chamber to admit two documents which, in his view, show that the testimony of Witness AGK, who testified at trial, was unreliable.

3. Trial Chamber I rendered its Judgement in this case on 3 December 2003.[6] Pursuant to the decisions of 17 May 2005[7] and 6 September 2005,[8] the Appellant filed both his Notice of Appeal and his Appellant's Brief on 12 October 2005 ("Notice of Appeal" and "Appellant's Brief", respectively). The briefing with respect to the Appellant's appeal was completed on 12 December 2005.[9]

Applicable law

4. The Appeals Chamber recalls that under the jurisprudence of the Tribunal and that of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia ("ICTY"), an appeal pursuant to Article 24 of the Statute of the Tribunal (Article 25 of the Statute of the ICTY) is not a trial de novo[10] and is not an opportunity for a party to remedy any "failures or oversights" made during the pre-trial and trial phases.[11] Rule 115 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the Tribunal ("Rules") provides for a mechanism to address "the situation where a party is in possession of material that was not before the court of first instance and which is additional evidence of a fact or issue litigated at trial".[12] filed "The Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Reply to the Prosecutor's Response to the 'Motion for Leave to Present Additional Evidence (Rule 115)'" on 28 September 2006 ("Reply to the Second Rule 115 Motion").

[5] The Prosecution filed the "Prosecutor's Response to 'The Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Motion for Leave to Present Additional Evidence (Rule 115)'" on 22 November 2006 ("Response to the Third Rule 115 Motion") and the Appellant filed confidentially "The Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Reply to the Prosecutor's Response to 'The Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Motion for Leave to Present Additional Evidence (Rule 115)'" ("Reply to the Third Rule 155 Motion") on 30 November 2006. The Appeals Chamber notes that the Appellant gives no reason as to why the Reply to the Third Rule 115 Motion or the present decision need to be confidential and finds that there is no apparent reason for the confidential classification of the Reply to the Third Rule 115 Motion. Consequently, both the Reply to the Third Rule 115 Motion and the present decision should be public.

5. According to Rule 115, for additional evidence to be admissible on appeal, the following requirements must be met: first, the motion to present additional evidence should be filed "not later than thirty days from the date for filing of the brief in reply, unless good cause or, after the appeal hearing, cogent reasons, are shown for a delay.[13] Second, the Appeals Chamber must find "that the additional evidence was not available at trial and is relevant and credible".[14] When determining the availability at trial, the Appeals Chamber will consider whether the party tendering the evidence has shown that it sought to make "appropriate use of all mechanisms of protection and compulsion available under the Statute and the Rules of the International Tribunal to bring evidence […] before the Trial Chamber."[15] In this respect, the Appeals Chamber has held that

> Counsel is expected to apprise the Trial Chamber of all the difficulties he or she encounters in obtaining the evidence in question, including any problems of intimidation, and his or her inability to locate certain witnesses" and that "[t]he obligation to apprise the Trial Chamber constitutes not only a first step in exercising due diligence but also a means of self-protection in that non-cooperation of the prospective witness is recorded contemporaneously.[16]

With regards to relevance, the Appeals Chamber will consider whether the proposed evidence sought to be admitted relates to a material issue. As to credibility, the Appeals Chamber will only refuse to admit evidence at this stage if it does not appear to be reasonably capable of belief or reliance, without prejudice to a determination of the weight to be afforded.[17]

6. Once it has been determined that the additional evidence meets these conditions, the Appeals Chamber will determine whether the evidence "could have been a decisive factor in reaching the decision at trial."[18] To satisfy this requirement, the evidence must be such that it could have had an impact on the verdict, i.e. it could have shown that a conviction was unsafe.[19] Accordingly, the additional evidence must be directed at a specific finding of fact related to a conviction or to the sentence.[20] Although Rule 115 of the Rules does not explicitly provide for this, where the evidence is relevant and credible, but was available at trial, or could have been discovered through the exercise of due diligence, the Appeals Chamber may still allow it to be admitted on appeal provided the moving party can establish that the exclusion of it would amount to a miscarriage of justice. That is, it must be demonstrated that had the additional evidence been adduced at trial, it would have had an impact on the verdict.[21]

7. The Appeals Chamber recalls that, whether the additional evidence was or was not available at trial, the additional evidence must always be assessed in the context of the evidence presented at trial, and not in isolation.[22]

The Motion Giving Notice of Delay

8. As a preliminary matter, the Appeals Chamber turns to the Motion Giving Notice of Delay. The Appellant states that he wishes to notify the Pre-Appeal Judge of the necessity of delaying his motion for additional evidence relating to Alison Des Forges and the reasons for this delay.[23] He thereby requests that, in considering the admissibility of his future Motion for Additional Evidence, the Appeals Chamber recognizes the efforts he made to obtain the additional evidence.[24]

9. As recalled above, the time-limit for the filing of a motion to admit additional evidence is thirty days from the date for filing of the brief in reply, unless good cause is shown for delay.[25] The Appeals Chamber understands that through the Motion Giving Notice of Delay, the Appellant seeks to show good cause for the delayed filing of his First Rule 115 Motion. The Appeals Chamber notes that where arguments are made demonstrating good cause for a late filing after the filing deadline has passed, as a matter of practice, that showing is normally made as part of the Rule 115 motion itself with a request that the motion be recognized as validly filed. Thus, the Appeals Chamber will consider the arguments contained in the Motion Giving Notice of Delay when disposing of the Appellant's submissions concerning good cause for the late filing of his First Rule 115 Motion as follows.

The First Rule 115 Motion

A. Submissions of the Parties

10. In the First Rule 115 Motion, the Appellant requests the admission of twelve documents as additional evidence on appeal,[26] which, he claims, show that Alison Des Forges, by instigating a civil suit in the New York District Court, "actively pursued the Appellant […] to neutralize him and undermine the efforts of the Rwandan Interim Government to get support from the United Nations".[27] In addition, the Appellant argues, Alison Des Forges did not disclose her role in the civil suit until her cross-examination in the Zigiranyirazo case in March 2006, and the Prosecution, although aware of these facts, did not disclose them to the Appellant.[28] Moreover, documents in Annexes 7 through 11, the Appellant contends, "refute the propaganda disseminated by Alison Desforges [sic]"[29] about the intentions of the Interim Government and show that her statement given to the New York District Court was false.[30]

11. The Appellant submits that the evidence only became available to him in June 2006, because the Prosecution did not disclose the information about Alison Des Forges' involvement in the New York civil suit.[31] The Appellant argues that he was not aware of this suit. He admits that he had received a document from the court in 1994, but was not sure whether it was genuine, because it was not served on him by officials.[32]

12. The Prosecution responds that the documents proffered by the Appellant as new evidence do not satisfy the criteria of admissibility under Rule 115 of the Rules.[33] The Prosecution argues that the Appellant was aware of the New York lawsuit, that he sent a letter to the judge who decided the matter, and that he referred to the lawsuit in his book "Rwanda, le Sang Hutu est-il rouge?". He was therefore in the position to look for the documents from this lawsuit and use them at his trial.[34] In addition, the Prosecution argues that Counsel for the Appellant was aware of Alison Des Forges' involvement in the civil suit and cross-examined her about it at trial.[35] Furthermore, the Prosecution submits that Alison Des Forges is neither biased against the Appellant, nor gave any inconsistent or misleading information about her involvement in the civil suit.[36] Regarding the documents related to the policy of the Interim Government in 1994, the Prosecution submits that they are neither new, nor could they have influenced the trial.[37]

13. In reply, the Appellant submits that the Response to the First Rule 115 Motion should be expunged from the record because it exceeds the page limit of ten pages.[38] Regarding the Prosecution's arguments, he submits that he only became aware of the importance of the documents after Alison Des Forges' testimony in the Zigiranyirazo case, and that they were therefore not available at trial.[39]

B. DISCUSSION

Preliminary Issues

14. At the outset, the Appeals Chamber notes that the Appellant filed the separate Corrigendum Motion to correct a clerical error in his Reply to the First Rule 115 Motion.[40] The Appeals Chamber recalls that

[28] Id.
[29] Ibid., para. 17.

[39] Ibid., para. 7.
[40] Corrigendum Motion, para. 1.

subsequently discovered and where correction of the error is necessary in order to provide clarification".[41]

Although it was unnecessary for the Appellant to file a motion to this extent, the Appeals Chamber finds that the submitted amendment indeed corrects an obvious clerical error and does not amount to any substantial change of the Appellant's Reply to the First Rule 115 Motion. Therefore, the Appeals Chamber finds that the Appellant's Reply to the First Rule 115 Motion should be read in accordance with the amendments proposed by the Corrigendum Motion and allowed by the present decision.

15. Second, the Appellant takes issue with the length of the Prosecution's submission, which, in his view, "deliberately and manifestly" disregards a decision by the Pre-Appeal Judge denying a request for an extension of the page limits for the Prosecution's response to the Appellant's First Rule 115 Motion.[42] The Appeals Chamber notes that, in response to the Appellant's request for an extension of page limits for its First Rule 115 Motion, the Prosecution requested a reciprocal extension for its response. The Pre-Appeal Judge denied the Prosecution's request because she considered the request for an extension of the page limit for a potential response to a motion that had not yet been filed to be unsubstantiated and premature.[43] This decision did not prevent the Prosecution from requesting an extension once the actual motion had been filed, which it did in its Response to the First Rule 115 Motion.[44] Considering the length of the First Rule 115 Motion and the number and size of the documents proffered as additional evidence, the Appeals Chamber finds that the Prosecution has shown good cause for the filing exceeding the regular page limit, and accepts the Response to the First Rule 115 Motion as validly filed.

Late Filing of the First Rule 115 Motion

16. With respect to the Appellant's First Rule 115 Motion, the deadline for the filing of motions under Rule 115 of the Rules expired on 11 January 2006. Any Rule 115 motions filed by the Appellant at the present stage of the proceedings are therefore admissible only if the Appellant shows good cause for the late filing.[45] The Appeals Chamber recalls that

> "the good cause requirement obliges the moving party to demonstrate that it was not able to comply with the time limit set out in the Rule, and that it submitted the motion in question as soon as possible after it became aware of the existence of the evidence sought to be admitted".[46]

17. The Appeals Chamber notes that most of the documents proffered by the Appellant as additional evidence are more than one year old, the majority of them even dating back to the 1990s. The only argument advanced by the Appellant as explanation for the late filing of these documents is that he became aware of Alison Des Forges' involvement in the New York civil suit only in March 2006.[47]

18. However, the Appeals Chamber finds that the Appellant knew as soon as 1994 that a civil action had been brought against him in New York. In his letter to Judge Ceda Baum of the New York

District Court, he wrote that he had received a document containing a complaint against him, and asked the Judge to dismiss the claim stating

> "I am persecuted by a so-called human rights organisation which is in fact, an organisation committed to RPF criminal ambitions".[48]

This shows that the Appellant was not only aware of the lawsuit but also attributed it to a political campaign against him orchestrated by a human rights organization.[49] During trial, Counsel for the Appellant cross-examined Alison Des Forges about her involvement in the lawsuit:

> Q :You did not meet Barayagwiza, but that did not stop you from testifying against him in the United States?
> A: I did not testify in any trial against Mr. Barayagwiza. I contributed documentation and witness testimonies to a civil proceeding which was heard without contest, and because there was no contest there was no trial.[50]

Even assuming arguendo that the Appellant was not aware of the extent of Alison Des Forges' involvement in this lawsuit, he had sufficient information to show that she was involved in one way or the other in the lawsuit, which he had already in 1994 characterized as a political campaign against him. Given that the relevant documents were all readily accessible, nothing prevented the Appellant from presenting them within the time limit of Rule 115 of the Rules.

19. The extract of the transcript of the Zigiranyirazo case dated 1 March 2006 is the only document proffered as additional evidence in the First Rule 115 Motion, which recently became available to the Appellant. However, the Appeals Chamber observes that the Appellant did not submit the relevant parts of this transcript with his First Rule 115 Motion.[51] Furthermore, the Appeals Chamber finds that this document does not reveal any information about the role of Alison Des Forges which would have been new to the Appellant. During her cross-examination in the Zigiranyirazo case, with respect to the New York civil suit, she explained that she had "played part in initiating this suit and bringing it to court" by "providing contextual information for the lawyers who prepared the suit in conjunction for the Rwandan plaintiffs"[52]. This is consistent with her testimony in the present case that she contributed documentation to a civil proceeding against the Appellant.[53] In this context, the Appeals Chamber observes that nothing in the documents proffered by the Appellant supports his assertion that Alison Des Forges was the "driving force"[54] behind the civil suit. Considering that the other documents were earlier available to the Appellant and that the extract of Alison Des Forges' testimony in the Zigiranyirazo case presented no new information to the Appellant, the Appeals Chamber finds that it does not justify the late filing of the First Rule 115 Motion. In any case, the extract itself became available to the Appellant soon after the hearing in March 2006, because it was this transcript which occasioned his letter to the Prosecution of 12 March 2006,[55] and the Appellant has not shown good cause for seeking admission of this document as additional evidence more than four months after it became available to him.

20. In light of the above, the Appeals Chamber concludes that the Appellant has not shown good cause for the late filing of any of the documents proffered as additional evidence. The Appeals Chamber thus finds no need to consider the merits of the First Rule 115 Motion[56] and dismisses it in its entirety.

The Second Rule 115 Motion

A. Submissions of the Parties

21. In the Second Rule 115 Motion, the Appellant submits three documents which show, in his view, that the Trial Chamber erred in finding that he was President of the CDR at the national level.[57] The three documents are two messages by David Rawson, U.S. Ambassador to Rwanda in 1994,[58] and a letter from the CDR, signed by Théoneste Nahimana, the then first Vice-President of the CDR.[59] In the two messages from Ambassador Rawson, the Appellant is referred to as "CDR counselor" or "CDR deputy-designate", respectively. This shows, the Appellant argues, that someone as well-informed as the U.S. Ambassador did not consider the Appellant to be the CDR President.[60] Regarding the letter signed by Théoneste Nahimana, the Appellant argues that its content was so important that it would have been signed by the President of the CDR. The fact that it was not signed by the Appellant therefore shows, in the Appellant's view, that he did not occupy this position.[61]

22. Prosecution responds that the Appellant overstates the importance of the Trial Chamber's finding about his position in the CDR.[62] Regarding the documents proffered by the Appellant, the Prosecution argues that the Appellant has not demonstrated that the evidence was unavailable at trial in any form and could not have been discovered through the exercise of due diligence.[63] In fact, the Prosecution submits, the Appellant abuses the procedure provided by Rule 115 of the Rules to remedy the consequences of his tactics at trial and failings in this appeal.[64] The Prosecution argues that all the documents were available much earlier than July 2006 and that the Appellant accordingly has not shown good cause for the late filing of the motion. In addition, the Prosecution maintains that none of the documents could or would have been a decisive factor at trial.[65]

23. The Appellant replies that Defence Counsel imposed on him at trial was incompetent and grossly negligent and, as a result, he was not adequately represented. Therefore, he argues, even evidence which was available at trial, but was not properly used by his Counsel, should be considered as "new".[66]

B. Discussion

24. As with the First Rule 115 Motion, the Second Rule 115 Motion was filed eight months after the expiry of the time period stipulated under Rule 115 (A) of the Rules. The Appellant submits that the documents proffered as additional evidence were obtained by him during the month of July 2006, when he received an electronic file called "Alchemy" from the "National Archive", a non-governmental research institute based in the United States which "collects and publishes declassified documents obtained through the Freedom of Information Act".[67] The Appeals Chamber is therefore satisfied that there is good cause justifying the late filing of the Second Rule 115 Motion.

25. With respect to availability of the proffered evidence at trial, the Appeals Chamber is not satisfied that the Appellant was unable to obtain it in spite of the exercise of due diligence. As, the Prosecution points out, the declassifying process of U.S. documents started in 1998 and many unclassified documents were accessible on the National Security Archive webpage in 2001.[68] The Appeals Chamber finds that the Appellant's reply to this argument, that the Prosecution failed to prove that the documents were declassified before his trial,[69] is misguided; it is for the Appellant to show that the documents were available to him only recently. On the contrary, the Appellant's own arguments seem to suggest that the documents were accessible earlier than 2003: the compilation of documents which the Appellant received is the result of research carried out between 1994 and 2003.[70]

26. In addition, the Appeals Chamber notes that both messages in their relevant parts refer to conversations between the Appellant and Ambassador Rawson.[71] The Appellant was therefore aware that these conversations had taken place. The point the Appellant wishes to make by proffering the messages is that the U.S. Ambassador about the Appellant's eventual appointment as CDR President and would have referred to him as such in his messages.[72] The Appellant's role in the CDR was clearly an issue at trial.[73] Given the Appellant's contacts with Ambassador Rawson, the Appellant could have attempted to contact Ambassador Rawson, either to learn about his reports to the U.S. government in 1994 as a reliable and independent source of political information on Rwanda, or with the objective to adduce his live testimony about the Appellant's role in the CDR at trial.

> "who was monitoring closely the political events in Rwanda, would have been among the first diplomats to be informed"

27. Regarding the letter signed by Théoneste Nahimana, the Appellant's submissions show that he was aware of the existence of this letter at trial. The Appeals Chamber also notes that the report by Ambassador Rawson dated 28 March 1994 suggests that the Appellant was at least involved in the drafting of the letter signed by Théoneste Nahimana, as he was informed about his content before it was signed and took suggestions from Ambassador Rawson as to its content.[74] Furthermore, it was the Appellant himself who gave a copy of this letter to Ambassador Rawson in 1994.[75] The Appeals Chamber notes that a number of CDR documents were adduced at trial on behalf of the Appellant.[76] The Appellant has thus not shown that the letter was unavailable to him at trial or that he had made efforts to obtain a copy thereof in the exercise of due diligence.

28. In light of the above, while the Appeals Chamber finds that the proffered evidence is prima facie relevant and credible, it will admit it as additional evidence on appeal only if it concludes that its exclusion would result in a miscarriage of justice, i.e. it would have had an impact on the verdict if it had been adduced at trial. The Appeals Chamber notes that the Appellant only suggests the proffered evidence could have been a decisive factor for the Trial Chamber's finding with respect to the Appellant's position in the CDR.[77]

29. Concerning the letter from the CDR Party to the Prime Minister, the Appellant argues that the letter was of such importance for the CDR that only the President could have signed it; thus, the Appellant claims, the fact that it was signed not by himself, but by Théoneste Nahimana, shows that he was not acting as the president.[78] However, the Appellant does not advance any support for his argument demonstrating why this letter should have been necessarily signed by the president. The Appeals Chamber recalls that Théoneste Nahimana was the first Vice-President of the CDR.[79] The Statute of the CDR, to which the Appellant refers, shows that the first Vice-President was the "first supplementary legal representative" ("le premier Représentant Légal Suppléant") of the CDR and was thus able to represent the party.[80] Considering the Trial Chamber's finding that the Appellant was seen as "working to some extent behind the scenes", the fact that the letter was signed by Théoneste Nahimana is not inconsistent with the Trial Chamber's conclusions. Therefore, the Appeals Chamber finds that this piece of evidence, had it been adduced at trial, would not have changed the verdict with regard to the Appellant's position.

30. As regards the messages sent by the U.S. Ambassador, Mr. David Rawson, the Appellant argues that these documents prove that he was not the CDR National President.[81] In light of the evidence adduced at trial, the Appeals Chamber is not satisfied that the Trial Chamber would have arrived at a different conclusion upon examination of the two messages in question. The Appellant has not shown that the Trial Chamber would necessarily opt for the evidence that he now proffers instead of the totality of the evidence that it chose to rely on to conclude that Barayagwiza held the position of a superior in the CDR including that, after the assassination of Bucyana in February 1994, Barayagwiza succeeded him as President of the CDR at the national level.[82]

31. The Appeals Chamber also rejects the Appellant's argument in relation to the incompetence of his counsel at trial.[83] While it is true that, where the failure resulted solely from counsel negligence or inadvertence, the Appeals Chamber can permit admission of additional evidence to remedy for such negligence or inadvertence, this would only be allowed if the proffered evidence is of such substantial importance to the success of the appeal such as its exclusion would lead to a miscarriage of justice.[84] In these exceptional cases, the Appeals Chamber has reasoned, the interests of justice require that an appellant not be held responsible for the failures of counsel.[85] However, in light of the findings above, the Appeals Chamber is not satisfied that non-admission of the proffered evidence would amount to a miscarriage of justice.

32. Finally, with respect to the Appellant's arguments concerning the "already existing exculpatory material erroneously not taken into account by the [T]rial Chamber",[86] the Appeals Chamber notes that these arguments relate to specific grounds of appeal raised by the Appellant against the Trial Judgement and that they will be appropriately addressed by the Appeals Chamber in rendering its appeals judgement on the Appellant's main appeal.[87] Therefore, the Appeals Chamber will not dispose of them in the present decision.

33. In addition to his request for admission of additional evidence, the Appellant argues that the Prosecution failed to disclose the letter signed by Théoneste Nahimana to him under its obligations pursuant to Rule 68 (A) of the Rules and that this failure

> "should be considered as an abuse of process and a serious obstruction to a fair trial which deserves a sanction".[88]

The Appeals Chamber first observes

> "that the Prosecution may be relieved of its Rule 68 obligation if the existence of the relevant exculpatory material is known to the Defence and if it is reasonably accessible through the exercise of due diligence".[89]

As noted above, the document was known to the Appellant, and he has not demonstrated that the document was not reasonably accessible to him.

34. Second, the Appeals Chamber recalls that > "material will fall within the ambit of Rule 68 if it tends to suggest the innocence or mitigate the guilt of the accused, or affects the credibility of Prosecution evidence".[90]

The determination of what material meets Rule 68 disclosure requirements is primarily a fact-based judgement made by and under the responsibility of the Prosecution.[91] Therefore, as noted previously, the Appeals Chamber will not intervene in the exercise of the Prosecution's discretion, Tihomir Blaškić,* Case N°IT-95-14-A, Decision on the Appellant's Motions for the Production of Material, Suspension or Extension of the Briefing Schedule, and Additional Filings, 26 September 2000 ("Blaškić 26 September 2000 Decision"), paras 38, 45.

unless it is shown that the Prosecution abused it and, where there is no evidence to the contrary, will assume that the Prosecution is acting in good faith.[92] In this respect, the Appeals Chamber notes that, if an appellant wishes to show that the Prosecution is in breach of these obligations, he/she must identify specifically the materials sought, present a prima facie showing of its probable exculpatory nature, and prove the Prosecutor's custody or control of the materials requested.[93] Finally, even when the Defence satisfies the Chamber that the Prosecution has failed to comply with its Rule 68 obligations, the Chamber will still examine whether the Defence has actually been prejudiced by such failure before considering whether a remedy is appropriate.[94] The Appeals Chamber is neither satisfied that the document is of prima facie exculpatory nature, nor that the alleged Prosecution's failure to communicate it to the Appellant would have caused him any prejudice.[95]

35. For these reasons, the Appeals Chamber finds that the Appellant's argument that the Prosecution did not fulfil its obligations under Rule 68 (A) of the Rules by not disclosing the letter, is unfounded.

The Third Rule 115 Motion

A. Submissions of the Parties

36. In the Third Rule 115 Motion, the Appellant submits another two messages from U.S. Ambassador Rawson, which he obtained from the same source as the two messages submitted in the Second Rule 115 Motion.[96] Both messages are dated 22 February 1994 and relate to a demonstration by CDR members outside the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Kigali. The Appellant argues that both messages show that the testimony of Witness AGK at trial about the CDR demonstration is false and that, accordingly, the Trial Chamber's findings based on this evidence are unsafe.[97]

37. The Prosecution responds that the Appellant impermissibly tries to use the procedure of Rule 115 to remedy his failings at his trial and on appeal.[98] The Prosecution argues that the evidence proffered by the Appellant is not new and that he does not advance any argument that could constitute good cause for the late filing of the motion.[99] Finally, the Prosecution argues that the new evidence neither could nor would have been a decisive factor at trial.[100]

B. Discussion

38. As a preliminary matter, the Appeals Chamber observes that the Reply to the Third Rule 115 Motion was filed after the time-limit for its filing had expired. The Appeals Chamber notes the Appellant's explanation that he received the Prosecution's Response to the Third Rule 115 Motion only on 27 November 2006, and thus accepts it as validly filed.

39. The Appeals Chamber notes that the Appellant claims to have obtained the two documents attached to the Third Rule 115 Motion from the same compilation of documents, the "National Archive", as the two messages from Ambassador Rawson submitted in the Second Rule 115 Motion.[101] Considering that the Appellant received the material in August 2006 only, the Appeals Chamber is satisfied that the Appellant has shown good cause for the late filing of the Third Rule 115 Motion.

40. The Appeals Chamber is also satisfied that the proffered evidence is prima facie relevant and credible. However, the Appeals Chamber finds that the Appellant has failed to show that the evidence was not available to him at his trial or could not be obtained through exercise of due diligence. The Appeals Chamber recalls that the party adducing additional evidence must establish that the said evidence was not available at trial in any form whatsoever.[102] As in the Second Rule 115 Motion, the Appellant again merely asserts that the documents "have been declassified only recently" without giving any further details about the declassification process or any earlier attempts to access the material.[103] As the Prosecution points out, unclassified U.S. documents were available during the Appellant's trial, and the possibility to access classified documents through a Freedom of Information Act application also existed.[104] Further, the Appellant has not shown that he tried to contact Ambassador Rawson to adduce his live testimony at trial. Finally, the Appeals Chamber notes that the Appellant acknowledges that other evidence concerning the date of the demonstration, the most important point of the documents proffered as additional evidence, was available to him.[105]

41. Accordingly, the two documents proffered would be admissible as additional evidence only if they would have affected the verdict. According to the Appellant, the two messages from Ambassador Rawson show that Witness AGK's testimony at trial about a CDR demonstration was unreliable, because there are significant contradictions between Witness AGK's testimony and the two messages. The main discrepancies noted by the Appellant are the date of the demonstration and the presence of UNAMIR soldiers.[106]

42. As a preliminary matter, the Appeals Chamber notes that the documents proffered as additional evidence are immaterial to a number of arguments raised by the Appellant, for example, the Trial Chamber's reference to the term "tubatsembatsembe" or internal inconsistencies of Witness AGK's testimony.[107] With regard to the date of the demonstration and the presence of UNAMIR soldiers, the Appeals Chamber finds that the Appellant does not show that Witness AGK's testimony and the two messages from Ambassador Rawson relate to the same event. Although the Appellant asserts that there is no evidence that there was more than one demonstration,[108] the very discrepancies noted by the Appellant would suggest that Witness AGK and Ambassador Rawson refer to two different events.

43. Further, the Appeals Chamber notes that the Trial Chamber was aware of the alleged discrepancies in Witness AGK's testimony. The witness was cross-examined about the date he gave for the demonstration (May 1993). Counsel in particular asked the witness whether the demonstration took place before or after the signing of the Arusha accords[109] and explained that the witness referred to the presence of UNAMIR soldiers, which would have been impossible in May 1993 because

UNAMIR was deployed only after the signing of the Arusha accords.[110] Nevertheless, the Trial Chamber was satisfied that "May 1993 was [Witness AGK's] recollection of the date" and accepted his testimony.[111] Finally, the Appeals Chamber notes that Witness AGK's evidence about the demonstration was only one of several bases for the Trial Chamber's findings regarding the Appellant's role in the CDR.[112]

44. In light of the above, the Appeals Chamber finds that the documents proffered as additional evidence with the Third Rule 115 Motion would not have been a decisive factor in the Trial Chamber's decision. Accordingly, the Appeals Chamber dismisses the Third Rule 115 Motion it in its entirety.

1. The Appeals Chamber of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States Between 1 January and 31 December 1994 ("Appeals Chamber" and "Tribunal", respectively) is seized of "The Appellant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza's Urgent Motion for Clarification and Guidance Following the Decision of the Appeals Chamber Date 16th June 2006 in Prosecutor v Karemera et al. [sic]" filed by Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza on 17 August 2006 ("Motion" and "Appellant", respectively). The Prosecution responded to the Motion on 24 August 2006 requesting the Appeals Chamber to dismiss it and impose sanctions.[1]

2. The Appellant filed his Reply out of time on 18 September 2006.[2] He requests the Appeals Chamber to accept the late Reply on the grounds that his "lead counsel was on holiday out of the jurisdiction between August 21st 2006 and September 7th 2006".[3] The Appellant further submits that, because of his limited communications with Lead Counsel during that period of time and in light of the fact that he "has been attempting since February 2006 to have [his] co-counsel's name removed from the record", he was "unable in the absence of lead counsel to file a reply any sooner".[4] By a motion filed on 20 September 2006, the Prosecution objects to the late filing of the Reply, arguing that "[t]he excuses given by Counsel for the late filing ought not be considered 'good cause' for the purposes of Rule 116" of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the Tribunal ("Rules").[5] In his Response, filed on 2 October 2006, the Appellant submits that the Prosecution's Motion "should be dismissed […] as being procedurally incorrect".[6]

3. With regard to the timeliness of the Appellant's Reply, the Appeals Chamber notes that this Reply should have been filed "within four days of the filing of the response" that is, no later than 28 August 2006.[7] Pursuant to Rule 116 of the Rules, the Appeals Chamber "may grant a motion to extend a time limit upon a showing of good cause". The Appeals Chamber recalls that Counsel, when accepting assignment as Lead Counsel in a case before the Tribunal, is under an obligation to give absolute priority to observe the time limits prescribed in the Rules.[8] In particular, the Appeals Chamber reiterates that the unavailability of Lead Counsel to perform his professional obligations due to his holiday schedule does not amount to good cause within the meaning of Rule 116 of the Rules.[9] Accordingly, the Appeals Chamber rejects the Appellant's request to accept the late Reply and will therefore not consider the submissions contained therein.

4. Trial Chamber I rendered its Judgement in this case on 3 December 2003.[10] The Appellant filed a first notice of appeal on 22 April 2004,[11] which was amended on 27 April 2004.[12] His initial Appellant's brief was filed on 25 June 2004.[13] Pursuant to the decisions of 17 May 2005[14] and 6 September 2005,[15] the Appellant filed a revised Notice of Appeal and Appellant's Brief on 12 October 2005. The briefing with respect to the Appellant's appeal was completed on 12 December 2005.[16]

5. On 16 June 2006, the Appeals Chamber issued the Decision on Prosecutor's Interlocutory Appeal of Decision on Judicial Notice in the Prosecutor v. Edouard Karemera et al. case,[17] in which it directed the Trial Chamber in that case to take judicial notice, under Rule 94 (A) of the Rules, of the following facts:

> (i) The following state of affairs existed in Rwanda between 6 April 1994 to 17 July 1994: There were throughout Rwanda widespread or systematic attacks against a civilian population based on Tutsi ethnic identification. During the attacks, some Rwandan citizens killed or caused serious bodily or mental harm to person[s] perceived to be Tutsi. As a result of the attacks, there were a large number of deaths of persons of Tutsi ethnic identity;[18]
> (iii) Between 6 April 1994 and 17 July 1994, there was a genocide in Rwanda against the Tutsi ethnic group.[20]

II. Submissions of the Parties

6. The Appellant submits that the Karemera Decision would have serious consequences for his appeal if it would no longer be necessary for the Prosecution to prove any of the judicially noticed facts.[21] He therefore seeks clarification as to whether the Karemera Decision is applicable to his case, arguing that such application might cause a miscarriage of justice, by preventing him from challenging the assertion that genocide occurred and from challenging the "logical implication of this supposed fact – i.e. that a conspiracy did indeed exist to exterminate the Tutsi".[22] The Appellant disputes the existence of genocide in Rwanda in 1994, contending that the conflict was political and that the killings were indiscriminate and politically, rather than racially or ethnically, motivated.[23] In this

Requests for reconsideration of the Karemera Decision by the three appellants in that case were recently rejected by the Appeals Chamber. See *Karemera et al. v. regard, the Appellant seeks additional clarification as to whether the Karemera Decision, if applicable to his case, would prevent him from disputing that he was party to a plan to commit genocide through the means of the Radio Television Libre des Mille Collines ("RTLM") and the Coalition to Defend the Republic ("CDR").[24]

7. The Appellant further submits that the Appeals Chamber erred in holding in the Karemera Decision that there was no room for disagreement about the nature of the conflict in Rwanda in 1994.[25] He argues that judicial notice could not be taken of such disputed facts, but rather that the Tribunal would have to "hear evidence and argument from the parties and to make findings of fact accordingly".[26] Therefore, he claims that the Karemera Decision "must be reconsidered as a matter of urgency".[27]

8. Finally, should the Appeals Chamber find that the Karemera Decision is binding in his case, the Appellant seeks leave to vary the Notice of Appeal and to amend his Appeal Brief by adding "further grounds of appeal dealing specifically with the issues raised by the Karemera Decision".[28]

9. In its Response, the Prosecution requests the Appeals Chamber to dismiss the Motion in its entirety as misconceived and amounting to an abuse of the appeal process.[29] It submits that the clarification sought by the Appellant is not provided for in the Rules and that, in any event, such clarification is unnecessary in light of the Appeals Chamber's jurisprudence.[30] It argues further that, considering the Trial Chamber's specific findings on the occurrence of genocide in Rwanda, the judicial notice of this fact in the Karemera Decision is not relevant in the Appellant's case.[31] Moreover, the Prosecution submits that the Appellant has failed, in his Appeal Brief, to challenge the factual findings of the Trial Chamber that a genocide occurred in Rwanda[32] and that, in any event, these specific findings have no bearing on the Appellant's ability to dispute his conviction for conspiracy to commit genocide, as the actual occurrence of genocide is irrelevant to such a conviction.[33] Finally, the Prosecution concludes that the Appellant has failed to show that good cause exists to amend his Notice of Appeal or his Appeal Brief at such a late stage of the appeal proceeding.[34]

III. Analysis

10. In respect of the Appellant's submission that "the Karemera Decision must be reconsidered as a matter of urgency",[35] the Appeals Chamber recalls that a request for reconsideration of a decision in one case filed by an appellant who is not party to that case must fail for lack of standing to seek such reconsideration.[36] The Appeals Chamber will therefore not address the Appellant's arguments challenging the substance of the Karemera Decision.[37] The Appeals Chamber also declines to address whether the Karemera Decision is applicable to the Appellant's case since, for the reasons given below, his Motion fails in any event.

11. The Appellant argues that the Karemera Decision, if applicable to his case, would adversely affect his ability to challenge the existence of genocide,[38] which would impact upon his ability to dispute, on appeal, the finding that "he was party to a plan to commit genocide through the means of RTLM and the CDR".[39] The Appeals Chamber disagrees and stresses the need for a clear distinction between the issue of the existence of genocide in Rwanda in 1994, a fact judicially noticed by the Appeals Chamber in the Karemera Decision,[40] from the separate questions regarding the existence of a conspiracy to commit genocide between the three co-appellants in the present case, and the Appellant's participation in such a conspiracy. The Appeals Chamber finds that there is nothing in the Appellant's arguments to suggest that the judicially noticed facts in the Karemera Decision would prevent him either from challenging the existence of a conspiracy to commit genocide or from disputing his participation therein. The Karemera Decision is clear in that its direction to the Trial Chamber to take judicial notice of facts of common knowledge does not shift the ultimate burden of persuasion, which remains on the Prosecution,[41] with respect to the personal responsibility of each accused. It has been subsequently specified by the Appeals Chamber that with regard to the Karemera Decision, "taking of judicial notice of this fact does not imply the existence of a plan to commit genocide".[42] Therefore, the Appeals Chamber, noting that the Appellant indeed challenges the Trial Chamber's findings of conspiracy, both in his Notice of Appeal and in his Appeal Brief,[43] considers that he has failed to demonstrate how the Karemera Decision, if applicable to his case, could impact on his ability to dispute that "he was party to a plan to commit genocide".

12. Furthermore, the Appeals Chamber notes that in the present case the Trial Chamber made specific findings of fact with regard to the occurrence of genocide in Rwanda.[44] Should the Appellant therefore have wished to dispute in his appeal the Trial Chamber's finding that what occurred in Rwanda amounted to genocide, he could have done so in his Notice of Appeal and in his Appeal Brief, both of which were filed before the issuance of the Karemera Decision. The Appeals Chamber notes that contrary to the references given in his Motion,[45] the Appellant did not do so. In fact, in the invoked Ground 30 of his Notice of Appeal, developed in his Appeal Brief, the Appellant does not challenge the existence of genocide, but rather argues that the Trial Chamber erred in concluding from the evidence before it that a conspiracy to commit genocide existed and disputes his involvement therein. The Appeals Chamber, finding that the Appellant has failed to raise on appeal any argument challenging the occurrence of genocide, considers therefore that he has not shown how the judicially noticed facts in the Karemera Decision, if applicable to his case, could adversely affect his appeal. His request for clarification in this regard is therefore denied as unfounded.

13. Turning to the Appellant's request for variance of the Notice of Appeal and Appeal Brief, the Appeals Chamber considers that the Appellant, through his present Motion, in fact seeks to introduce a wholly new ground of appeal. Pursuant to Rule 108 of the Rules, the Appeals Chamber "may, on good cause being shown by motion, authorize a variation of the grounds of appeal" contained in the Notice of Appeal. The Appeals Chamber recalls its Decision of 17 August 2006, in which it outlined its jurisprudence concerning variation of grounds of appeal under Rule 108 of the Rules.[46] In particular, the Appeals Chamber recalls that the concept of "good cause" under this provision encompasses both good reason for including the new or amended grounds of appeal and good reason showing why these grounds were not included (or were not correctly phrased) in the original notice of appeal.[47] The Appeals Chamber held specifically that the "good cause requirement" must be interpreted restrictively at late stages of appeal proceedings when amendments would necessitate a substantial slowdown in the progress of the appeal.[48] To hold otherwise, would leave appellants free to change their appeal strategy and essentially restart the appeal process at will, interfering with the expeditious administration of justice and prejudicing the other parties to the case.[49]

14. In the present case, the Appellant claims that

> "[t]he issues raised by the Karemera Decision could not have been anticipated by the Defence when the Notice of Appeal and Appeal Brief were filed".[50]

As noted above,[51] the judicially noticed facts within the Karemera Decision now challenged by the Appellant relate to the same issues specifically considered by the Trial Chamber and contained in its findings.[52] The Appellant has not demonstrated any justification for failing to challenge the Trial Chamber's findings on the existence of genocide in Rwanda in his Notice of Appeal. Moreover, the Appeals Chamber finds that the Appellant has not formulated any specific wording for the grounds he wishes to add in his Notice of Appeal,[53] but merely seeks to amend his Appeal Brief "by the addition of further grounds of appeal dealing specifically with the issues raised by the Karemera Decision".[54] Pursuant to Rule 108 of the Rules, read in conjunction with paragraphs 2 and 3 of the Practice Direction on Formal Requirements for Appeals from Judgement,[55] a request to amend a notice of appeal must, at least, explain precisely what amendments are sought and why, with respect to each such amendment, the "good cause" requirement of Rule 108 of the Rules is satisfied.[56] The generic submissions of the Appellant fall well short of satisfying this requirement. Therefore, the request for leave to vary the Notice of Appeal and to amend the Appeal Brief is denied as unfounded.

IV. Disposition

15. For the foregoing reasons, the Appeals Chamber DISMISSES the Motion and GRANTS the Prosecution's Motion.

I.C.T.Y.: Appeals Chamber, The Prosecutor v. Milan Milutinović et al., Decision on Interlocutory Appeal on Motion for Additional Funds, 13 November 2003 (IT-05-87)

I, ANDRÉSIA VAZ, Judge of the Appeals Chamber of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States, between 1 January 1994 and 31 December 1994 ("Appeals Chamber" and "Tribunal", respectively) and Pre-Appeal Judge in this case,[1]

BEING SEIZED OF the "Appellant Hassan Ngeze's Request of an Extremely Urgent Status Conference Pursuant to Rule 65 bis (B) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence" filed on 6 December 2006 ("Appellant" and "Request", respectively), in which the Appellant requests the Appeals Chamber to convene a status conference on 13 December 2006, or any other date, in order to enable him to address

> "his personal problems (including his deteriorating mental and physical condition) and the absence of Co-counsel Behram Shroff who has recently resigned from the defence team on account of illness";[2]

NOTING that the Prosecution has not yet filed a response to the Appellant's Request;

CONSIDERING, however, that, in view of its nature, this Request may be disposed of without giving the Prosecution the opportunity to respond to it, especially because no prejudice will be caused to the Prosecution;[3]

RECALLING that, pursuant to Rule 65 bis (A) of the Tribunal's Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("Rules"), the purpose of a status conference is "to organise exchanges between the parties so as to ensure expeditious trial proceedings";

CONSIDERING that, pursuant to Rules 28 and 31 of the Rules Covering the Detention of Persons Awaiting Trial or Appeal before the Tribunal or Otherwise Detained on the Authority of the Tribunal[4] ("Detention Rules"), the medical officer is responsible for the physical and mental health of the detainees and the administration of any treatment or medication to them;

NOTING that Rule 32 of the Detention Rules prescribes the procedure to be followed in cases where the medical officer

> "considers that the physical or mental health of a detainee has been or will be adversely affected by any condition of his detention";

NOTING that, according to Rules 82 and 83 of the Detention Rules, where a detainee is not satisfied with the conditions of his or her detention, he or she is entitled to "make a complaint to the Commanding Officer or his representative at any time" and, in case of an unsatisfactory response, to "make a written complaint, without censorship, to the Registrar, who shall forward it to the President";

CONSIDERING that the Appellant does not specify whether he has followed this procedure or why it was impossible for him to comply with it before seizing the Pre-Appeal Judge with a request to hold a status conference to address these issues;

[4] Adopted on 5 June 1998.

FINDING therefore that the Appellant has not exhausted the remedies available to him under the Detention Rules;[5]

CONSIDERING also that the Appellant does not explain how the alleged physical and psychological problems he faces affect the preparation of his appeal and has thus not demonstrated any threat to the fairness and expeditiousness of the proceedings on appeal;[6]

NOTING further that the Appellant wishes to address the absence of his Co-Counsel who, according to him, resigned due to illness;

NOTING that the Registrar of the Tribunal is presently seized of the Co-Counsel's request of 3 December 2006 to be withdrawn from the case due to health issues resulting notably in his inability to be travel to Arusha in preparation of the Appeals Hearing scheduled for 16-18 January 2007;

CONSIDERING that the matters concerning the appointment and/or withdrawal of members of a Defence team are within the primary competence of the Registrar of the Tribunal;[7]

RECALLING that the Appeals Chamber has the statutory duty to ensure the fairness of the proceedings on appeal[8] and, thus, has jurisdiction to intervene matters concerning counsel, but only after an appellant has followed the requisite complaints procedure under the Directive;[9]

CONSIDERING that the Appellant has not shown that a status conference is necessary to ensure expeditious proceedings on appeal in the present case;[10]

FINDING, therefore, that there is no need to convene a status conference under Rule 65 bis of the Rules with regard to the Request,

FOR THE FOREGOING REASONS,

DISMISS the Request.

1. The Appeals Chamber of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the territory of Neighbouring States, Between 1 January 1994 and 31 December 1994 ("Appeals Chamber" and "Tribunal", respectively) is seized of the "Prosecutor's Urgent Motion for Leave to Call Rebuttal Evidence Pursuant to Rules 54, 85, 89, 107 and 115" filed by the Office of the Prosecutor ("Prosecution") on 27 November 2006 ("Motion") together with "Strictly Confidential Annexes to the Prosecutor's Urgent Motion for Leave to Call Rebuttal Evidence Pursuant to Rules 54, 85, 89, 107 and 115" filed confidentially on the same date ("Annexes"). Hassan Ngeze ("Appellant") did not respond to the Motion.[1]

I. Procedural background

2. Trial Chamber I of the Tribunal ("Trial Chamber") rendered its Judgement in this case on 3 December 2003.[2] The Appellant filed his Notice of Appeal on 9 February 2004,[3] amended on 9 May 2005,[4] and Appellant's Brief on 2 May 2005.[5] The Prosecution filed its Respondent's Brief on 22 November 2005.[6] The Appellant replied on 15 December 2005.[7]

3. By its Decision of 23 February 2006,[8] the Appeals Chamber admitted as additional evidence on appeal handwritten and typed copies of Witness EB's purported recantation statement dated April 2005 ("Recantation statement")[9] and the Forensic Report of Mr. Antipas Nyanjwa, an expert in handwriting, who assessed the authenticity of Witness EB's statement,[10] pursuant to Rule 115 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the Tribunal ("Rules"), and ordered that Witness EB be heard by the Appeals Chamber, pursuant to Rules 98 and 107 of the Rules.[11]

4. On 14 June 2006, the Appeals Chamber dismissed the Prosecution's request for an order to the Appellant to produce the original handwritten and typed versions of Witness EB's purported Recantation Statement and ordered Witness EB to appear, as a witness of the Appeals Chamber, at an evidentiary hearing, pursuant to Rule 115 of the Rules.[12] By the same decision, the Appeals Chamber modified the protective measures applicable to Witness EB and prohibited the parties, their agents or any person acting on their behalf from contacting Witness EB, unless expressly authorized to do so by the Appeals chamber.[13]

5. Finally, by its Decision of 27 November 2006,[14] the Appeals Chamber admitted as additional evidence on appeal a copy of the statement, in Kinyarwanda, purportedly written by Witness EB dated 15 or 16 December [year illegible] affirming his Recantation Statement ("Additional Statement") and

[1] The dead-line for filing a response to the Motion expired ten days after the filing of the Motion, or on 7 December 2006, and the Appellant has not filed a motion seeking for extension of the applicable time limit (See. para. 13 of the Practice Direction on Procedure for the Filing of Written Submissions in Appeal Proceedings before the Tribunal, 8 December 2006. The Appeals Chamber considers that the extended deadline of t h y days for filing a response to "a motion pursuant to Rule 115" under the cited provision is not applicable to motions for admission of rebuttal material, but rather concerns motions for admission of additional evidence on appeal).

its translations into English and French.[15] By the same decision, the Appeals Chamber admitted as rebuttal material copies of the envelopes in which copies of the Additional Statement were received by the Prosecution.[16]

II. Discussion

6. In rebuttal to the additional evidence admitted on appeal with respect to Witness EB, the Prosecution seeks to call two witnesses to give oral testimony, namely Prosecution Investigator Moussa Sanogo and Witness AEU,[17] as well as to have admitted the "underlying documentary evidence relating to their testimony", including the Report from the Officer in Charge of the Division of Investigations dated 23 August 2006 ("Investigation Report").[18] The Prosecution submits that the material proffered in rebuttal will

> "demonstrate that the purported recantation of Witness EB is false and unworthy of any credit, in that there is compelling evidence that the purported recantation is the product of a campaign to attempt to obstruct the course of justice, on behalf of the Appellant", as well as prove that "Witness EB was not subjected to any pressure by the OTP to cause him to deny a recantation that he made".[19]

7. Rule 115 (A) of the Rules provides that rebuttal material may be presented by any party affected by a motion to present additional evidence before the Appeals Chamber. The Appeals Chamber recals that rebuttal material is admissible if it directly affects the substance of the additional evidence admitted by the Appeals Chamber[20] and, as such, has a different test of admissibility from additional evidence under Rule 115 of the Rules.[21] The Appeals Chamber also recalls that a hearing under Rule 115 of the Rules "is intended to be a sharply delimited proceeding for entering discrete, specific evidence into the record" and "is not intended to be a trial within a trial that opens the door to the exploration of every issue that might be raised during the hearing".[22]

8. The substance of the additional evidence so far admitted by the Appeals Chamber relates to Witness EB's purported wish to recant his testimony provided at trial, notably with respect to the Appellant's participation in the killings in Gisenyi on 7-9 April 1994. The Appeals Chamber is satisfied that the anticipated testimony of Prosecution Investigator Moussa Sanogo directly affects the substance of the admitted additional evidence and is thus admissible as rebuttal material on appeal inasmuch as it would relate to his "investigation into the circumstances of the purported recantation of Witness EB's trial testimony".[23] However, the anticipated testimony of Investigator Moussa Sanogo, [23] Motion, para 15. The Appeals Chamber notes that issues related to the alleged attempts by the Appellant to subvert the course of justice in the present appeal by way of threats, intimidation, bribing or other form of interference with a witness should be addressed within the scope of Rules 77 and 91 (B).

as well as that of Witness AEU, with respect to alleged attempts on behalf of the Appellant to approach other Prosecution witnesses with the view of recantation of their trial testimony, is not admissible as rebuttal material under Rule 115.

9. For the same reasons, the declaration of Investigator Moussa Samgo dated 21 November 2006 is admissible inasmuch as it describes the circumstances in which Witness EB was interviewed on 22 and 23 May 2005,[24] but not with respect to general allegations against the Appellant's family and their purported interferences with Prosecution witnesses in Gisenyi.[25] The Appeals Chamber fails to understand, however, why this declaration was only made in late November 2006, i.e. some eight months after the Appeals Chamber decided to call Witness EB to provide additional evidence on appeal. Nevertheless, in the instant case, considering that the statement taken from Witness EB on 23 May 2005 was disclosed to the Appellant on 7 July 2005,[26] the Appeals Chamber is satisfied that no prejudice was suffered by the Appellant in terms of his preparation for the appeals hearing on 16 January 2007.

10. The Appeals Chamber further admits the "Compte-rendu de la fin de la mission du 16 au 18 octobre 2006 à Gisenyi" dated 18 October 2006, inasmuch as it refers to the purported recantation of Witness EB.[27] The Appeals Chamber also admits as rebuttal material on appeal the Investigation Report with its annexes, since it is directly relevant to the substance of fie Additional Statement. Finally, with respect to "Various Witness Statements Taken in the Course of the Investigations Led by Investigator Moussa Sanogo" in May 2005,[28] the Appeals Chamber is satisfied that the Statements of Witness EB dated 22 May and 23 June 2005 directly affect the substance of the Recantation Statement and thus, considers them admissible as rebuttal material on appeal.

11. While the Appeals Chamber finds the "End of Mission on Appeal Case in Gisenyi, 19th to 24th 2005 [sic] dated 27 May 2005"[29] relevant to Witness EB's Additional Statement as it confirms that investigators met Witness EB on 22 May 2005 and had his statement signed on 23 May 2005, it fails to h d any information that would directly affect the substance of the admitted additional evidence and therefore, declines to admit it as rebuttal material. With respect to "Compte-rendu de la mission effectuée à Gisenyi du 9 au 14 mai 2005" dated 15 May 2005,[30] the Appeals Chamber notes that during the mission in question, the investigator did not meet Witness EB; therefore, this document does not directly affect the substance of the additional evidence on appeal.

12. In light of its findings above,[31] the Appeals Chamber will not admit the Statements of Witness AEU dated 11-12 May 2005 (unsigned) and 24 August 2005,[32] since they do not concern the purported recantation of testimony by Witness EB. As far as the Statements of Witnesses AFX, OAB, AHI, PA and DO are concerned,[33] the Appeals Chamber finds that, while they might be relevant to the allegations against the Appellant with respect to interference with the Prosecution's witnesses, these materials do not directly affect the substance of the additional evidence on appeal, i.e. Witness EB's purported recantation.[34] Therefore, these documents are inadmissible as rebuttal material on appeal.

[26] Prosecutor's Additional Submissions In Response to "Appellant Hassan Ngeze's Urgent Motion for Leave to Present Additional Evidence (Rule 115) of Witness EB", filed confidentially on 7 July 2005 ("Additional Submissions"), Annex 2.
[27] Motion, Annex 2, notably paras 1-9, 21-28 and 42.
[28] Motion, Annex 7.
[29] Motion, Annex 3.
[30] Motion, Annex 4.
[31] See supra, para. 8.
[32] Motion, Annex 5.
[33] Motion, Annex 7. The Appeals Chamber notes that all these statements were communicated to the Appellant in July 2005 as annexes to the Additional Submissions.
[34] See supra, para. 8.

13. The Appeals Chamber notes the lateness of these submissions, considering that the decision to call Witness EB as additional evidence on appeal was taken in February 2006, and now turns to examine proprio motu whether the Prosecution acted in full conformity with its disclosure obligations under Rule 66 of the Rules. In this respect, the Appeals Chamber notes that the Investigation Report is dated 23 August 2006 and contains witness statements taken in August 2006 from staff members of the Prosecution concerning their missions with respect to Witness EB. Despite a number of explicit requests from the Appellant, including his motion of 19 June 2006,[35] to have access to any witness statement obtained by the Prosecution in the scope of its investigations on the issue, the Prosecution provided them to the Appellant only with the Motion.

14. The Appeals Chamber reiterates that Rule 66 (B) applies to appellate proceedings and that, consequently, the Prosecution, on request of the Defence, > "has to permit the inspection of any material which is capable of being admitted on appeal or which may lead to the discovery of material which is capable of being admitted on appeal".[36]

In this respect, the Appeals Chamber recalls that "purely inculpatory material is not necessarily immaterial for the preparation of the Defence"[37] and that the Prosecution shall provide the Defence with access to any documents that are material to the preparation of the Defence, with the exception of Rule 70 material and, if necessary, request from the Appeals Chamber permission to withhold any information provided by these sources under Rule 66 (C) of the Rules.[38] The Appeals Chamber considers that the statements attached to the Investigation Report fall within the scope of Rule 66 (B) and are not protected by Rule 70[39] and therefore, should have been communicated to the Appellant upon his request for them. The report also mentions two interviews with Witness EB conducted by the Prosecution's Investigators in March 2006;[40] however, no information in this respect was communicated to the Appellant prior to the present Motion.[41]

15. In light of the above, the Appeals Chamber concludes that the Prosecution acted in violation of its obligations under Rule 66 (B) in this case. Considering that the Appellant has not suffered any apparent prejudice as a result of this violation, since these documents were communicated to him more than a month before the appeals hearing, the Appeals Chamber will not impose sanctions on the Prosecution for this violation. However, the Appeals Chamber warns the Prosecution of the possibility of sanctions should it again be found in violation of its disclosure obligations in the present case.

16. The Appeals Chamber also notes that although the submitted Statements of Witness AEU are dated 11-12 May 2005 (unsigned) and 24 August 2005, the Prosecution communicated them to the Appellant only with the Motion. However, the Appeals Chamber has already considered that these documents are irrelevant to the preparation for the appeals hearing on 16 January 2007[42] and therefore finds that the question as to whether the Prosecution acted in violation of Rule 66 (B) with respect to these documents needs not be considered.

[41] The Appeals Chamber notes the "Prosecutor's Disclosure of Relevant Pages of the Gacaca Records Book Pertinent to Prosecution Witness EB's Testimony before the Gacaca, [REDACTED]" filed confidentially on 20 June 2006. However, this document only mentions the fact that it was obtained the Prosecution's investigators "from the Gacaca President of Dukorc, on 5 May 2006" and does not refer to any contact with Witness EB in March 2006, as described in the Investigation Report, p. 3 [REDACTED].
[42] See supra, para. 12.

III. Disposition

17. For the forgoing reasons, the Appeals Chamber GRANTS the Motion IN PART and ADMITS as rebuttal material on appeal copies of the following documents:

- Declaration of Moussa Sanogo dated 21 November 2006, index numbers 8841/A-8835/A to the extent specified in paragraph 9 above;
- Compte-rendu de la fin de la mission du 16 au 18 octobre 2006 à Gisenyi, dated 18 October 2006, index numbers 8834/A-8829/A

- Statements of Witness EB dated 22 May and 23 June 2005, index numbers 8742/A-8730/A.

The Appeals Chamber also ORDERS that, pursuant to Rules 98, 107 and 115 of the Rules, Investigator Mr oussa Sanogo shall be heard by the Appeals Chamber on 16 January 2007, as rebuttal material to the additional evidence admitted with respect to Witness EB. The Motion is DISMISSED in all other respects.

18. The Appeals Chamber INSTRUCTS the Registrar to assign exhibit numbers to the rebuttal material admitted hereby and place them under seal.

NOUS, ANDRÉSIA VAZ, Juge de la Chambre d'appel du Tribunal pénal international chargé de juger les personnes présumées responsables d'actes de génocide ou d'autres violations graves du droit international humanitaire commis sur le territoire du Rwanda et les citoyens rwandais présumés responsables de tels actes ou violations commis sur le territoire d'Etats voisins entre le 1er janvier et le 31 décembre 1994 (« Chambre d'appel » et « Tribunal », respectivement) et Juge de la mise en état en appel en la présente affaire[1];

VU la « Requête urgente aux fins d'extension du nombre de pages autorisées pour la réplique de la Défense » déposée le 13 avril 2006 par Ferdinand Nahimana (« Requête » et « appelant », respectivement) par laquelle il demande « l'autorisation de déposer un mémoire en réplique de 60 pages ou 18.000 mots »[2];

VU que le mémoire en réplique de l'appelant doit être déposé dans un délai de quinze jours à compter du 7 avril 2006[3], date à laquelle la Défense de l'appelant a reçu la communication de la traduction française du Mémoire unique de l'Intimé[4], c'est-à-dire le 24 avril 2006 au plus tard ;

ATTENDU que l'appelant fonde sa demande sur le principe d'égalité des armes et sur son droit à disposer des facilités nécessaires à la préparation de sa défense en s'appuyant sur le fait que le Procureur a déposé, après y avoir été autorisé[7], son Mémoire de l'Intimé de 198 pages, dépassent, ainsi, de 28 pages la limite fixée par la Directive pratique[8], ce qui lui aurait permis de « développer de nombreux arguments en réponse aux moyens qui n'ont pas pu être suffisamment étayés par l'appelant »[9] ;

ATTENDU que l'appelant précise que le Procureur a proposé de nouveaux arguments, « parfois fondés sur une jurisprudence récente, postérieure au mémoire de l'appelant », notamment à propos de la forme de sa responsabilité pénale individuelle au titre de l'article 6 (1) du Statut du Tribunal, question que l'appelant n'avait pourtant pas développée dans son mémoire d'appel « en raison de l'absence de motivation du jugement »[10] ;

ATTENDU que l'appelant prétend de ce fait être placé

« dans une situation qui n'est même pas celle de la rédaction d'un mémoire d'appel, mais bien plutôt celle de la rédaction d'un mémoire de première instance, en réponse à un mémoire préalable du Procureur »[11] ;

ATTENDU qu'à propos des arguments développés par le Procureur sur la responsabilité de l'appelant en vertu de l'Article 6 (1) du Statut du Tribunal, l'appelant estime que pour « envisager les déclinaisons de chaque proposition » élaborée dans le Mémoire de l'Intimé, il devra répliquer par un développement au moins deux fois plus important[12] ;

ATTENDU que, dans son Mémoire de l'Intimé, le Procureur avait à répondre aux actes d'appel et aux mémoires des trois appelants qui contenaient un nombre considérable d'erreurs alléguées[13], alors que l'appelant ne doit répliquer au Mémoire de l'Intimé que dans la mesure où il répond aux arguments qu'il a développés dans ses propres acte d'appel et mémoire d'appelant[14] ;

ATTENDU que l'appelant affirme que les arguments du Procureur portant sur la forme de la responsabilité pénale individuelle de l'appelant retenue au titre de l'article 6 (1) du Statut du Tribunal par le jugement de la Chambre de première instance[15], sont développés sur huit pages du Mémoire de l'Intimé[16] ;

CONSIDÉRANT qu'un mémoire en réplique ne doit traiter que des arguments en réplique au mémoire de l'intimé[17] et que son efficacité n'est pas nécessairement liée à sa longueur, mais relève d'avantage de sa clarté et de la pertinence des arguments développés ;

CONSIDÉRANT que la Chambre d'appel peut, le cas échéant, demander aux parties de préciser ou développer leurs arguments sur certaines questions, par écrit ou lors des plaidoiries en audience[18] ;

CONSIDÉRANT que l'appelant n'a pas démontré en quoi son droit à un procès équitable et le principe de l'égalité des armes seraient méconnus par le refus de lui accorder la possibilité de dépasser du nombre de pages sollicité;

CONSIDÉRANT que l'appelant n'a pas démontré l'existence des circonstances exceptionnelles qui justifieraient le dépassement de la limite du nombre de pages édictée pour les mémoires d'appelant en réplique ;

Dragan Nikolić, Décision relative à l'appel interlocutoire concernant la légalité de l'arrestation, 5 juin 2003 (IT-94-2)

1. La Chambre d'appel du Tribunal pénal international chargé de juger les personnes présumées responsables d'actes de génocide ou d'autres violations graves du droit international humanitaire commis sur le territoire du Rwanda et les citoyens rwandais présumés responsables de tels actes ou violations commis sur le territoire d'Etats voisins entre le 1er janvier et le 31 décembre 1994 (ci-après « Chambre d'appel » et « Tribunal », respectivement) est saisie de la requête introduite par l'appelant Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza (ci-après « appelant ») le 26 septembre 2005[1], par laquelle il demande notamment à la Chambre d'appel d'examiner au fond sa requête du 28 juillet 2000[2] et de réexaminer et annuler l'arrêt qu'elle a rendu en date du 31 mars 2000[3]. Le Procureur a déposé sa réponse le 6 octobre 2005[4] et l'appelant sa réplique le 13 octobre 2005[5].

2. La Chambre d'appel relève d'emblée que la Réplique de l'appelant a été déposée trois jours après la date limite prévue au paragraphe 12 de la Directive pratique relative à la procédure de dépôt des écritures en appel devant le Tribunal[6]. L'appelant fait valoir que > « le personnel du Greffe a fait suivre les documents au cabinet du Conseil principal à Londres alors qu'il savait pertinemment que celui-ci et la plupart des membres de l'équipe de la Défense se trouvaient à Arusha »[7].

La Chambre d'appel estime que la raison avancée par l'appelant justifie que la Chambre d'appel utilise la discrétion que lui confère le paragraphe 16 de la Directive pratique pour reconnaître la validité du dépôt de la Réplique de l'appelant.

3. La Chambre d'appel est également saisie d'une requête déposée le 20 octobre 2005[8], par laquelle le Procureur demande à la Chambre d'appel de rejeter la déclaration sous serment de M.

Justry Patrick Lumumba Nyaberi datée du 3 octobre 2005 et déposée confidentiellement par l'appelant le 18 octobre 2005[9]. L'appelant a répondu le 1er novembre 2005[10] et le Procureur a répliqué le jour suivant[11].

4. La Chambre d'appel note que la Réponse de l'appelant a été déposée onze jours après la date limite prévue au paragraphe 12 de la Directive pratique. L'appelant prie la Chambre d'appel de proroger le délai de dépôt en arguant que la Requête du 20 octobre 2005 aurait été adressée à une mauvaise adresse électronique du Conseil[12]. La Chambre d'appel constate que le Procureur ne s'oppose pas à une telle demande[13] et, dans les circonstances de l'espèce, reconnaît la validité du dépôt de la Réponse de l'appelant.

I. Rappel de la procédure

5. Le 3 Novembre 1999[14], la Chambre d'appel faisait droit à l'appel interjeté par l'appelant contre la décision de première instance II du 17 novembre 1998[15], laquelle rejetait l'exception préjudicielle soulevée par l'appelant fondée sur l'illégalité de son arrestation le 15 avril 1996 ainsi que celle de sa détention jusqu'à son transfert au centre de détention du Tribunal le 19 novembre 1997. Dans son Arrêt du 3 novembre 1999, la Chambre d'appel concluait au rejet de l'acte d'accusation et ordonnait l'arrêt définitif des poursuites ainsi que la mise en liberté immédiate de l'appelant aux fins de réparer la violation du droit de l'appelant à bénéficier d'une comparution initiale sans délai conformément à l'article 40 du Règlement de procédure et de preuve du Tribunal (« Règlement »).

6. Dans son Arrêt du 31 mars 2000[16], la Chambre d'appel accédait à la requête en révision déposée par le Procureur le 1er décembre 1999[17] et décidait, à la lumière des faits nouveaux présentés par le Procureur, de réviser son Arrêt du 3 novembre 1999 en modifiant la réparation accordée à l'appelant et en rejetant sa demande de mise en liberté[18].

7. Dans sa Requête du 28 juillet 2000, l'appelant sollicitait le réexamen et/ou la révision de l'Arrêt du 31 mars 2000 en se fondant sur de prétendus faits nouveaux[19].

8. Lors de la conférence de mise en état du 11 septembre 2000, la Chambre de première instance rejetait par décision orale la requête de l'appelant et des autres co-accusés tendant à la disqualification du Procureur adjoint[20].

9. Le 14 septembre 2000, la Chambre d'appel déboutait l'appelant de sa Requête du 28 juillet 2000 au motif, pour ce qui concerne la révision, que cette décision ne constituait pas un jugement définitif mettant un terme à la procédure contre l'appelant et, pour ce qui concerne le réexamen, que « le pouvoir de réexamen ne [pouvait] pas être utilisé comme un pouvoir de révision dans les cas où la révision [n'était] pas prévue et […] l'exercice de ce pouvoir [n'était] pas justifié »[21].

10. Le 3 décembre 2003, la Chambre de première instance rendait son jugement dans la présente affaire[22]. L'appelant interjetait appel du Jugement et déposait son acte d'appel le 22 avril 2004[23].

II. Discussion

11. Dans sa Requête du 26 septembre 2005, l'appelant formule deux demandes distinctes. Il requiert en premier lieu la tenue d'une audience préliminaire en vue de l'examen au fond de sa Requête du 28 juillet 2000 et, par là, le réexamen et l'annulation de l'Arrêt du 31 mars 2000[24]. L'appelant sollicite également de la Chambre d'appel qu'elle examine l'abus de procédure commis, selon lui, par la Chambre de première instance à compter de l'Arrêt du 3 novembre 1999[25]. Il réclame subséquemment (i) une décision sur la réparation appropriée pour l'abus de procédure, (ii) une « indemnisation adéquate de l'[A]ppelant », et, dans l'hypothèse où l'Arrêt du 31 mars 2000 devait être confirmé, une réduction sensible de sa peine en proportion du préjudice subi en raison de la violation de ses droits fondamentaux et de l'abus de procédure[26].

12. La Chambre d'appel analysera les arguments développés en distinguant les deux demandes de l'appelant et celle du Procureur.

A. Examen de la Requête du 28 juillet 2000

(1) Arguments des parties

13. L'appelant fait valoir que sa Requête du 28 juillet 2000 n'a été examinée au fond ni par la Chambre d'appel, ni par la Chambre de première instance, cette dernière ayant considéré qu'elle était « incompétente pour trancher une question liée à une affaire examinée par la Chambre d'appel »[27]. Il prétend que la Chambre d'appel dispose d'un pouvoir inhérent lui permettant de réexaminer l'Arrêt du 31 mars 2000 dans l'intérêt de la justice[28], en cas d'erreur grave ayant entraîné un déni de justice[29]. L'appelant invoque également l'opinion individuelle du Juge Shahabuddeen, jointe à l'Arrêt du 31 mars 2000 et réitérée dans l'affaire Semanza[30] pour soutenir qu'une décision ayant force de chose jugée peut être révisée « lorsqu'une des parties n'a pas eu droit à un procès équitable »[31].

14. L'appelant demande à la Chambre d'appel de considérer en particulier les éléments suivants, rapportés au terme d'une mission du précédent conseil de l'appelant au Cameroun du 17 juin au 8 juillet 2000 et présentés au soutien de sa Requête du 28 juillet 2000 :

- le texte authentifié du compte rendu de l'audience du 3 mai 1996 devant une juridiction camerounaise[32];
- des documents relatifs à la procédure d'extradition présentée par le Gouvernement rwandais ainsi qu'à la demande de transfèrement de l'appelant et de quatre autres détenus[33];
- une lettre datée du 28 juillet 2000 et adressée par le Greffier en chef du Tribunal de première instance de Buea (Cameroun) au conseil de l'appelant à l'époque, M[e] Camille Marchessault[34].

Il s'appuie également sur les éléments suivants:

- une lettre du Greffier en chef du Tribunal de première instance de Buea (Cameroun) adressée le 3 février 2000 à un conseil dans une autre affaire[35];
- la décision rendue le 26 janvier 2001 par le Tribunal de première instance de Yaoundé (Cameroun), notant le défaut d'authentification du compte rendu de l'audience du 3 mai 1996 précité[36] ;
- une décision du Tribunal de première instance de Buea du 15 février 2001[37].

15. L'appelant fait valoir que ces éléments entament la fiabilité et la force probante des éléments de preuves ayant conduit la Chambre d'appel à minorer le rôle joué par les manquements du Procureur dans son Arrêt du 31 mars 2000[38].

16. En réponse, le Procureur soumet que l'appelant réclame de la Chambre d'appel qu'elle fasse précisément ce qu'elle a refusé de faire dans sa Décision du 14 septembre 2000[39], et souligne que la Chambre d'appel a déjà spécifié que les questions considérées dans son Arrêt du 31 mars 2000 et dans son Arrêt du 3 novembre 1999 n'avaient pas besoin d'être réexaminées[40]. Il argue que, faute pour l'appelant d'avoir présenté à la Chambre de première instance – plutôt qu'à la Chambre d'appel – les prétendus faits nouveaux établissant selon lui l'incompétence du Tribunal, il aurait perdu tout droit à contester la compétence du Tribunal[41]; il ajoute que la Décision du 11 septembre 2000 tranchait une requête d'une autre nature[42]. Le Procureur s'appuie également sur l'arrêt dans l'affaire Kajelijeli[43] pour faire valoir que toute réclamation relative à des décisions interlocutoires ainsi qu'à une réduction de la peine devraient être traitées dans le cadre de l'examen de l'appel sur le fond et non d'une requête participant de la mise en état de l'affaire en appel[44].

17. Le Procureur affirme que la procédure de révision ne peut s'appliquer qu'à des décisions définitives mettant un terme aux procédures et il soutient que les « faits nouveaux » sont ceux déjà présentés dans la Requête du 28 juillet 2000[45]. Le Procureur soumet que l'appelant devrait demander à la Chambre d'appel le réexamen de la Décision du 14 septembre 2000 avant d'attaquer l'Arrêt du 31 mars 2000, puisque, contrairement à ce que prétend l'appelant, la Chambre d'appel a, par sa Décision du 14 septembre 2000, rejeté la demande en réexamen sur le fond[46].

18. En réplique, l'appelant précise que dans la Décision du 14 septembre 2000, la Chambre d'appel ne s'est pas prononcée sur la Requête du 28 juillet 2000 et qu'elle a seulement dirigé l'appelant vers la Chambre de première instance pour contester la compétence rationae personae du Tribunal alors que ladite Requête visait selon l'appelant l'admission de faits nouveaux. Il soutient que seule la Chambre d'appel avait compétence pour se prononcer sur des faits nouveaux et, le cas échéant, réviser ou réexaminer son Arrêt du 31 mars 2000 et que, dès lors, l'appelant n'était pas tenu de présenter d'abord sa requête sollicitant l'admission de faits nouveaux à la Chambre de première instance[47]. L'appelant ajoute que le précédent de l'affaire Semanza indiquait clairement qu'une Chambre de première instance n'avait pas compétence pour réviser une décision de la Chambre d'appel[48]. Il soumet également que, dans la mesure où la question des faits nouveaux n'a pas été soulevée pendant le procès, elle ne peut constituer un moyen d'appel, à moins de s'inscrire « dans la question plus vaste de l'abus de procédure »[49].

(2) Analyse

19. Dans sa Requête du 26 septembre 2005, l'appelant requiert l'examen de sa Requête du 28 juillet 2000 en vue d'obtenir le réexamen de l'Arrêt du 31 mars 2000[50]. Cela étant, la Requête du 26 septembre 2005 renvoie à la Requête du 28 juillet 2000 qui sollicite la révision et/ou le réexamen de l'Arrêt du 31 mars 2000[51]. En outre, l'appelant s'appuie sur une série de faits prétendument nouveaux[52] réfutant selon lui l'authenticité de ceux admis par la Chambre d'appel dans son Arrêt du 31 mars 2000. Dès lors, la nature même de sa demande ainsi que des arguments développés par l'appelant au soutien de sa Requête du 26 septembre 2005 portent la Chambre d'appel à considérer également la question de la révision de l'Arrêt du 31 mars 2000[53].

20. Pour les besoins de l'analyse, la Chambre d'appel souhaite distinguer et clarifier les notions de révision et de réexamen. Pour obtenir la révision conformément aux articles 25 du Statut et 120 à 123 du Règlement, la partie intéressée doit au préalable satisfaire quatre conditions:

1) un fait nouveau doit avoir été découvert,
2) ce fait nouveau ne doit pas avoir été connu de la partie intéressée lors de la procédure initiale,
3) la non-découverte de ce fait nouveau ne doit pas être due à un manque de diligence de la partie intéressée, et
4) le fait nouveau aurait pu être un élément décisif de la décision initiale[54].

21. La Chambre d'appel réitère en outre que

[54] Le Procureur c. Duško Tadić, affaire n°IT-94-1-R, Arrêt relatif à la demande en révision, 30 juillet 2002 (« Affaire Tadić, Décision »), par. 20.

« seul un jugement définitif peut être révisé en vertu des articles 25 du Statut et 120 du Règlement, et [qu']un jugement définitif est une décision qui met fin à une procédure »[55].

22. Pour ce qui est du réexamen, la Chambre d'appel rappelle que > the Appeals Chamber ordinarily treats its prior interlocutory decisions as binding in continued proceedings in the same case as to all issues definitively decided by those decisions. This principle prevents parties from endlessly relitigating the same issues, and is necessary to fulfil the very purpose of permitting interlocutory appeals: to allow certain issues to be finally resolved before proceedings continue on other issues.[56]

Ce nonobstant la Chambre d'appel dispose, dans des circonstances exceptionnelles, du pouvoir inhérent de réexaminer toute décision interlocutoire lorsqu'une erreur manifeste de raisonnement a été mise en évidence ou si la décision dont on sollicite le réexamen a donné lieu à une injustice[57].

23. La Chambre d'appel rappelle que la Décision du 14 septembre 2000 a rejeté la révision ainsi que le réexamen de la Requête du 28 juillet 2000 aux motifs que l'Arrêt du 31 mars 2000 n'avait pas mis fin à la procédure, que le réexamen de ladite requête ne pouvait être utilisé comme pouvoir de révision dans les cas où celle-ci n'était pas prévue et qu'il n'était pas justifié en l'espèce ; elle a dirigé l'appelant vers la Chambre de première instance en vue de lui soumettre, le cas échéant, des faits nouveaux de nature à établir l'incompétence du Tribunal[58].

> « la règle de l'abus de procédure […] est un processus par lequel des juges peuvent refuser de se déclarer compétents lorsqu'au vu des violations graves et flagrantes dont les droits de l'accusé font l'objet, l'exercice d'une telle compétence pourrait s'avérer préjudiciable à l'intégrité du tribunal »[61].

Elle a par suite signalé que les faits nouveaux présentés par le Procureur avaient trait à l'application de la doctrine de l'abus de procédure et à la solution que la Chambre d'appel avait donnée dans son Arrêt du 3 novembre 1999[62]. Il ressort clairement de ce qui précède que la Requête du 28 juillet 2000 avait pour objet la contestation de l'authenticité de faits nouveaux ayant conduit la Chambre d'appel à rétablir la compétence du Tribunal vis-à-vis de l'appelant en modifiant la réparation de l'abus de procédure constaté; et que, contrairement à ce que soutient l'appelant, la Requête visait in fine la compétence du Tribunal sur la base de prétendus faits nouveaux.

25. Dès avant la Décision du 14 septembre 2000, le conseil de l'appelant à cette période souscrivait manifestement à une telle prémisse lorsqu'il précisa à l'attention des Juges de première instance :

> cette requête [du 28 juillet 2000], inévitablement, devrait disposer de la juridiction de cette Chambre. Alors, dans un pareil contexte, je vous soumets que la requête en révision qui est déposée devant la Chambre d'appel, devrait être entendue préalablement à tout déroulement qui devrait intervenir devant cette Chambre de première instance[63].

26. Ledit conseil signifia lors de la conférence préalable au procès du 19 septembre 2000 que la compétence de la Chambre de première instance était en jeu et qu'il entendait donner suite à la Décision du 14 septembre 2000 par voie de recours en ces termes :

> […] les recours appropriés seront exercés par Monsieur Barayagwiza. A savoir, est-ce que ce recours sera devant la Chambre d'Appel ou encore devant la Chambre de Première instance ? […] Evidemment, vous êtes certainement au courant de cette décision [du 14 septembre 2000], et, étant donné que cela relève de votre compétence, cela relève de votre juridiction, et que ce débat-là, évidemment, comme tous les autres lorsqu'ils relèvent de votre juridiction, devrait être débattu « in limine litis »[64].

27. La Chambre d'appel considère que, dès lors que le jugement de première instance est prononcé, toute demande de réexamen d'une décision prise dans le cadre de la procédure de première instance doit être exclusivement adressée via l'acte d'appel et le mémoire de l'appelant. De l'avis de la Chambre d'appel, le jugement clôt et endosse la procédure de première instance ; pour des raisons évidentes d'économie judiciaire et dans le but d'empêcher les parties de remettre en cause constamment des questions déjà tranchées, il appartient à l'appelant qui souhaite faire réexaminer une partie ou l'ensemble de cette procédure d'en faire état dans le cadre de son appel au fond.

28. La Chambre d'appel relève qu'en l'espèce l'Arrêt du 31 mars 2000 ainsi que la Décision du 14 septembre 2000 ont été rappelés aux paragraphes 17 et 18 du Jugement et que la Chambre de première instance a pris en considération, aux paragraphes 1106 et 1107 du Jugement, la réparation ordonnée par l'Arrêt du 31 mars 2000 afin de déterminer la sentence.

29. En conséquence, la Chambre d'appel considère que l'appelant ne peut solliciter le réexamen de l'Arrêt du 31 mars 2000 par voie de requête au stade de la mise en état de l'affaire en appel et qu'une telle demande devrait être articulée dans le cadre de son appel du Jugement au fond.

30. Pour étayer sa demande de révision de l'Arrêt du 31 mars 2000, l'appelant argue que la décision du 31 mai 2000 de la Chambre de première instance dans l'affaire Semanza confirme clairement qu'une Chambre de première instance n'a pas compétence pour réviser[65] une décision de la

Chambre d'appel[66]. La Chambre d'appel ne peut souscrire à cette interprétation du précédent évoqué. Dans l'affaire Semanza comme dans la présente affaire, la Chambre d'appel a invité le requérant à soulever devant la Chambre de première instance des faits nouveaux de nature à établir l'incompétence du Tribunal[67]. Elle relève que le requérant dans l'affaire Semanza a par la suite présenté à la Chambre de première instance une requête aux fins que celle-ci se déclare compétente pour trancher sa précédente requête en révision de la décision de la Chambre d'appel du 31 mai 2000 et non, ainsi que la Chambre d'appel l'y avait invité, une nouvelle requête contestant la compétence du Tribunal sur la base de faits nouveaux allégués. La Chambre de première instance a rejeté cette requête en considérant qu'elle procédait d'une interprétation erronée de la Décision du 4 mai 2001[68] et, de l'avis de la Chambre d'appel, elle a dûment estimé qu'elle n'était saisie d'aucune requête en révision de l'une de ses propres décisions[69].

31. Quant à la question plus générale de savoir si l'appelant peut valablement réclamer la révision de l'Arrêt du 31 mars 2000, la Chambre d'appel réitère que seul un jugement définitif peut être révisé[70]. Or, la Chambre d'appel considère que l'Arrêt du 31 mars 2000 est une décision faisant droit à l'appel interjeté par le Procureur contre l'Arrêt du 3 novembre 1999. Ainsi que la Chambre d'appel l'a déjà affirmé[71], l'Arrêt du 31 mars 2000 n'a pas statué définitivement sur le fond ; il a uniquement modifié la réparation ordonnée par la Chambre d'appel dans son Arrêt du 3 novembre 1999[72] sans préjudice de l'examen au fond de l'affaire par la Chambre de première instance.

32. Pour ces raisons, l'appelant ne peut requérir la révision de l'Arrêt du 31 mars 2000.

B. ABUS DE PROCÉDURE

(1) Arguments des parties

33. Dans sa Requête du 26 septembre 2005, l'appelant demande à la Chambre d'appel de juger que postérieurement à l'Arrêt du 3 novembre 1999, l'instance, en particulier l'Arrêt du 31 mars 2000, a constitué un abus de procédure exigeant une réparation adéquate. Il soumet que la Chambre d'appel a indûment ordonné le sursis à exécution de l'Arrêt du 3 novembre 1999 (i) ultra vires[73] et (ii) sans que l'appelant ait eu l'occasion d'être entendu[74], le privant dès lors de son droit à un procès équitable et impartial[75]. L'appelant conteste sa détention postérieure à l'Arrêt du 3 novembre 1999 bien que « sa liberté lui ait été légalement restituée » et en dépit de sa requête en habeas corpus[76] et il affirme que les arguments présentés par le Procureur et le Gouvernement rwandais au soutien de la demande en révision de l'Arrêt du 3 novembre 1999, en postulant la culpabilité de l'appelant, ont violé son droit à la présomption d'innocence[77].

34. En réponse, le Procureur soumet que la prétention de l'appelant correspond en réalité à l'allégation d'une erreur de droit, devant à ce titre être adressée à la Chambre d'appel dans le cadre de son examen au fond de l'appel[78]. Il relève que l'appelant n'a prouvé ni la prétendue partialité du Procureur ni l'apparence de partialité de la Chambre d'appel[79]. La Chambre d'appel n'a, de l'avis du Procureur, pris la décision de surseoir à l'exécution de l'Arrêt du 3 novembre 1999 ni ultra vires ni ex parte[80]. Il précise encore que l'appelant n'a jamais dûment saisi la Chambre d'appel d'une requête en habeas corpus[81].Concernant la violation prétendue de la présomption d'innocence, le Procureur affirme qu'un juste équilibre doit être maintenu entre les droits fondamentaux de l'accusé et l'intérêt primordial de la communauté internationale à poursuivre les personnes présumées responsables de violations graves du droit international humanitaire[82]. Le Procureur fait valoir en outre qu'il est habilité à soumettre des arguments suggérant la culpabilité de l'accusé et soutient qu'aucune de ses déclarations à l'époque n'a eu un quelconque impact sur le raisonnement de la Chambre d'appel[83].

35. En réplique, l'appelant avance que l'intention de déposer une requête en révision exprimée par le Procureur n'équivalait pas à un dépôt formel[84]. De plus, il fait valoir que la correspondance avec les Juges datée du 6 janvier 2000[85] atteste de la régularité de sa requête en habeas corpus. Enfin, l'appelant renvoie à deux déclarations, l'une du porte-parole du Secrétaire Général des Nations Unies et l'autre du représentant du Gouvernement du Rwanda, pour soutenir que le Tribunal a violé son droit à la présomption d'innocence[86].

(2) Analyse

36. La Chambre d'appel observe que l'appelant développe la même requête, qu'il fonde sur les mêmes arguments, dans la première partie de son acte et de son mémoire d'appel[87]. Au vu des considérations qui précèdent[88], la Chambre d'appel estime qu'une telle contestation relative à une ou plusieurs décisions prises dans le cadre de la procédure de première instance doit être adressée à la Chambre d'appel dans le cadre de la procédure d'appel en cours.

C. REQUÊTE DU 20 OCTOBRE 2005 TENDANT À OBTENIR LE REJET DE L'AFFIDAVIT ET DE LA DÉCLARATION SOUS SERMENT COMPLÉMENTAIRE DE M. NYABERI

(1) Arguments des parties

37. Pour solliciter le rejet de l'Affidavit de M. Nyaberi, le Procureur soutient qu'une telle déclaration aurait dû être présentée à la Chambre d'appel au titre de moyen de preuve supplémentaire conformément à l'Article 115 du Règlement[89]. Il ajoute que pour autant qu'elle ait été valablement présentée, ladite déclaration ne satisferait pas les critères prévus par l'Article 115 du Règlement[90]. Le Procureur précise par ailleurs que l'Affidavit de M. Nyaberi correspond à une nouvelle prétention se rapportant à l'interprétation des arguments développés par le précédent conseil de l'appelant lors des audiences du 22 février 2000 devant la Chambre d'appel, et non à des éléments de fait nouveaux présentés à l'appui de la Requête du 26 septembre 2005[91].

38. L'appelant joint en annexe de sa Réponse une déclaration sous serment « complémentaire » de Justry Patrick Lumumba Nyaberi datée du 31 octobre 2005 et demande à la Chambre d'appel (i) de l'examiner avec l'Affidavit de M. Nyaberi[92] ; (ii) au surplus, d'inviter M. Nyaberi à comparaître[93]. Il signale que de l'Arrêt du 31 mars 2000. Il conteste l'argument du Procureur selon lequel l'Affidavit de M. Nyaberi tendrait à présenter des moyens de preuve supplémentaires en contournant la procédure prévue par l'article 115 du Règlement[94] et il souligne que « l'affidavit de Nyaberi n'a pas été déposé à l'appui d'une procédure d'appel [mais plutôt] sous l'empire de l'article 25 du Statut du TPIR et a donc enclenché la procédure de révision »[95]. L'appelant fait valoir que l'Affidavit de M. Nyaberi pourrait avoir des conséquences directes sur l'Arrêt du 31 mars 2000, dans lequel la Chambre d'appel s'est basée exclusivement sur les arguments présentés par le Procureur[96].

39. Le Procureur signale dans sa réplique qu'en annexant la seconde déclaration sous serment de Justry Patrick Lumumba Nyaberi à la Réponse de l'appelant, ce dernier « soulève […] un nouveau point qui déborde le cadre de la requête initiale »[97]. Il s'oppose au dépôt des deux déclarations sous serment de Justry Patrick Lumumba Nyaberi et il argue l'inapplicabilité tant de l'article 115[98] que de l'article 120 du Règlement[99]. Le Procureur argue également que la réparation sollicitée par l'appelant est disproportionnée[100].

(2) Analyse

40. L'appelant affirme avoir déposé l'Affidavit de M. Nyaberi dans le cadre d'une procédure de révision de l'Arrêt du 31 mars 2000, conformément à l'article 25 du Statut[101]. La Chambre d'appel considère toutefois que l'Affidavit et la déclaration sous serment complémentaire de M. Nyaberi ne sauraient être déposés dans le cadre d'une procédure de révision qui n'a pas valablement été engagée.

III. Dispositif

41. Par ces motifs, la Chambre d'appel, REJETTE la Requête du 26 septembre 2005, FAIT DROIT à la Requête du 20 octobre 2005.

1. La Chambre d'appel du Tribunal pénal international chargé de juger les personnes présumées responsables d'actes de génocide ou d'autres violations graves du droit international humanitaire commis sur le territoire du Rwanda et les citoyens rwandais présumés responsables de tels actes ou violations commis sur le territoire d'Etats voisins entre le 1er janvier et le 31 décembre 1994 (ci-après « Chambre d'appel » et « Tribunal », respectivement) est saisie par l'Appelant Ferdinand Nahimana

(ci-après « Appelant ») de la « Requête aux fins de communication d'éléments de preuve disculpatoires et d'investigations sur l'origine et le contenu de la pièce à conviction P 105 » (ci-après « Requête ») déposée confidentiellement le 10 avril 2006[1]. La Chambre d'appel n'est pas convaincue qu'il existe des raisons apparentes justifiant la classification confidentielle de la Requête, car elle ne se réfère pas à des témoins protégés et l'appelant n'a présenté aucun argument en faveur d'un tel niveau de classification. Par conséquent, la Requête et la présente décision doivent être publiques.

2. Le Procureur a déposé sa réponse le 18 avril 2006[2]. L'appelant n'a pas répliqué.

I. Rappel de la procédure

3. Le 20 mars 2002, lors de la présentation des preuves à charge en première instance, le Procureur versait au dossier l'enregistrement d'une interview donnée par l'appelant le 24 avril 1994 à un journaliste de Radio Rwanda et diffusée le 25 avril 1994. Cet enregistrement fut admis par la Chambre de première instance en tant que pièce à conviction P105[3]. La Chambre d'appel note également que sept copies de cette cassette audio furent communiquées aux accusés dans cette affaire le 14 juin 2001[4].

4. Le 13 mai 2003, l'appelant demandait la suspension des procédures en première instance au motif qu'il n'avait pas été en mesure d'obtenir, du Rwanda en particulier, des documents et des enregistrements sonores d'émissions et de discours à l'appui de sa cause[5]. Par sa décision du 5 juin 2003[6], la Chambre de première instance avait rejeté cette demande, n'étant pas convaincue que les droits de l'accusé à un procès équitable avaient été violés par un quelconque manque de coopération de la part des autorités rwandaises[7]. L'appelant n'a pas interjeté appel de cette décision.

5. Le 3 décembre 2003, la Chambre de première instance rendait son jugement dans la présente affaire[8]. L'appelant interjetait appel du Jugement et déposait son acte d'appel le 4 mai 2004 et son Mémoire d'appel le 27 septembre 2004[9]. La Chambre d'appel relève que dans son mémoire d'appel, l'appelant conteste la recevabilité de la pièce P105 en raison de son caractère incomplet[10]. La présente

Elle contient notamment la cassette AV/933, K0149117-K0149119, dont la pièce à conviction P105/2A est la transcription en kinyarwanda. II. Discussion

Arguments des parties

6. L'appelant fait valoir qu'en dépit de ses multiples protestations lors du procès en première instance, il n'a jamais réussi à obtenir une copie intégrale de l'interview correspondant à la pièce à conviction P105(AV/933) [11] ni d'explications du Procureur relatives à l'« amputation de l'enregistrement de cette interview issu [sic] des archives du FPR »[12]. Il ajoute que la production de cet enregistrement dans son intégralité

> « est de nature à réfuter l'une des affirmations essentielles des juges relativement à l'intention criminelle attribuée à l'appelant, et à confirmer la position constante et sans équivoque de l'appelant […] selon laquelle seul le FPR-Inkotanyi peut être considéré comme l'ennemi du peuple rwandais »[13].

En d'autres termes, la Chambre de première instance aurait commis une erreur de fait en concluant que > « l'appelant aurait entretenu une confusion entre le FPR-Inkotanyi et la communauté tutsie dans son ensemble »[14].

Il ajoute que la copie intégrale de cette interview « est également de nature à conforter la crédibilité et la consistance de la déposition de l'appelant » lors du procès en première instance[15].

7. L'appelant affirme également que

> « [f]aute d'avoir été informée en temps utile de l'utilisation de cet élément de preuve, la défense n'a pas disposé en cours de procès du temps nécessaire à ces investigations, qui, en tout état de cause, se seraient heurtées à l'obstruction des autorités rwandaises »[16].

En conséquence, c'est « dans l'intérêt supérieur de la justice »[17] qu'il demande à la Chambre d'appel d'ordonner au Procureur de s'expliquer sur le caractère incomplet de l'interview et d'ordonner aux autorités rwandaises de transmettre au Greffe du Tribunal l'intégralité de l'enregistrement de l'interview précitée conformément à l'article 28 du Statut du Tribunal (ci-après « Statut ») et des articles 54 et 107 du Règlement de procédure et de preuve (ci-après « Règlement »)[18].

8. Le Procureur soutient que la Requête est inappropriée et mal fondée[19]. Il souligne que l'appelant avait connaissance de la nature incomplète de l'enregistrement dès le mois de janvier 2001 et qu'il n'a pris aucune mesure visant à obtenir ce qu'il sollicite maintenant de la Chambre d'appel jusqu'au dépôt de la présente Requête, que le Procureur estime tardive[20]. Il affirme par ailleurs que le fait que la pièce à conviction P105(AV/933) ne correspond pas à l'intégralité de l'interview était connu lors du procès en première instance[21]. Il affirme avoir d'ores et déjà communiqué toutes les explications sollicitées par l'appelant[22] et relève en ce sens que, au stade de la présentation des éléments de preuve à charge, les Témoins Kaiser Rizvi, enquêteur du Procureur, et Mathias Ruzindana, expert, ont, dans le cadre de leur déposition, fourni des informations sur la manière dont l'enregistrement de l'interview avait été recueilli, ainsi que sur son caractère incomplet[23]. Il ajoute que l'Accusation a présenté les éléments qu'elle avait en sa possession[24].

9. En tout état de cause, d'après le Procureur, l'appelant n'a pas démontré en quoi davantage d'explications de la part du Bureau du Procureur pourraient avoir un impact sur les conclusions de la Chambre de première instance concernant cette émission[25]. A cet égard, le Procureur constate que l'Appelant a fait référence dans sa déposition au caractère incomplet de l'enregistrement, tout en décrivant le contenu du reste de l'interview, et a également inclus des arguments y relatifs dans sa plaidoirie[26]. En conséquence, la Chambre de première instance était informée de la substance alléguée de l'intégralité de l'interview lorsqu'elle a rendu le Jugement en exerçant son pouvoir discrétionnaire quant au poids à accorder à cet élément de preuve. Selon le Procureur, la production de l'intégralité de l'interview au stade actuel de la procédure ne pourrait affecter les conclusions factuelles de la Chambre de première instance[27].

10. Le Procureur argue que l'appelant cherche de manière inappropriée l'assistance de la Chambre d'appel pour procéder à un complément d'enquête sans satisfaire au test applicable dans de telles circonstances, ni démontrer qu'un déni de justice surviendrait si ces nouvelles enquêtes n'étaient pas autorisées[28]. Le Procureur ajoute que l'appelant ne démontre pas qu'il n'aurait pu obtenir l'intégralité de l'interview de lui-même en exerçant la diligence requise, ni que ses propres efforts ont échoué, ni même que l'intégralité de l'interview existe au Rwanda[29]. Enfin, le Procureur soutient que la suggestion de l'appelant selon laquelle l'enregistrement a été délibérément abrégé est abusive et sans fondement[30].

Analyse

11. La Chambre d'appel note que l'appelant lui demande en premier lieu d'ordonner au Procureur de s'expliquer sur le caractère incomplet de l'enregistrement de l'interview. Or, la Chambre d'appel relève qu'au stade de la présentation des éléments de preuve à charge, le Témoin Kaiser Rizvi, enquêteur du Bureau du Procureur du Tribunal, a expliqué précisément comment cet enregistrement avait été obtenu. Il a indiqué avoir enregistré cette cassette avec ses collègues au secrétariat des archives du FPR. A cette occasion, ils ont reproduit 259 des 263 cassettes conservées audit secrétariat et datées de la fin du mois de décembre 1993 à l'arrêt des émissions de Radio Rwanda, en avril 1994[31]. La Chambre de première instance, ayant pris en compte le fait que M. Ruzindana, témoin-expert à charge, détaillerait le contenu de l'émission lors de son témoignage, a provisoirement admis l'enregistrement en cause[32]. Le 27 mars 2002, M. Ruzindana a été contre interrogé par le Conseil de l'appelant sur le caractère incomplet de l'enregistrement. Il a indiqué qu'il n'était pas en mesure de préciser davantage les circonstances de l'enregistrement de cette cassette et a exprimé son regret quant

[31] CRA du 11 mars 2002, pp. 86-89, 93. La Chambre d'appel note que le chiffre 273 est mentionné dans le compte-rendu de l'audience en français. Cependant, l'audience s'étant déroulée en anglais, la Chambre d'appel considère la version anglaise du compte-rendu, se référant aux 263 casettes, comme faisant foi (T. 11 March 2002, p. 83).
[32] CRA du 11 mars 2002, pp. 96 : « Le document est provisoirement admis, car le Procureur nous dit qu'il va faire déposer des gens qui présenteront des éléments de preuve détaillés, s'agissant de ces quatre cassettes. » à son caractère incomplet[33]. La Chambre d'appel note par ailleurs que le Procureur réitère ces explications dans son Mémoire unique de l'Intimé[34] ainsi que dans sa Réponse[35].

12. Il ressort clairement de l'article 68 (B) du Règlement que l'obligation du Procureur de communiquer des éléments de preuve à décharge est subordonnée à sa possession de tels éléments[36]. Or, à la lumière de ce qui précède, la Chambre d'appel constate que le Procureur s'est suffisamment expliqué sur la manière dont l'enregistrement de l'interview a été recueilli ainsi que sur son caractère incomplet, en précisant qu'il s'agissait de la seule version en sa possession. La demande de l'appelant tendant à ce que la Chambre d'appel ordonne au Procureur de s'expliquer sur le caractère incomplet de l'enregistrement de l'interview et de le verser au dossier ne peut donc prospérer.

13. En ce qui concerne la demande de l'appelant d'ordonner aux autorités rwandaises de transmettre au Tribunal l'intégralité de l'enregistrement en question, la Chambre d'appel rappelle qu'une demande similaire a fait l'objet d'une décision de la Chambre de première instance[37]. La Chambre d'appel note d'emblée que l'appelant ne formule pas sa demande, contrairement à ce que soutient le Procureur[38] et malgré le titre de la Requête, dans le cadre d'une enquête complémentaire menée par la Défense aux fins de la présentation éventuelle de moyens de preuve supplémentaires au titre de l'article 115 du Règlement, seul moyen admis par la jurisprudence de la Chambre d'appel pour se voir autoriser de mener des enquêtes au stade de l'appel[39]. Il fonde en réalité sa Requête sur les articles 54 et 107 du Règlement qui donnent à la Chambre d'appel le pouvoir de délivrer des ordonnances « nécessaires aux fins de l'enquête, de la préparation ou de la conduite du procès ». A cet égard, il convient de rappeler que la Chambre d'appel ne saurait accéder à une requête en délivrance d'une telle ordonnance que si la partie requérante a démontré un motif judiciaire légitime à cet effet[40]. La Chambre d'appel jouit en l'occurrence d'un pouvoir discrétionnaire pour déterminer si le requérant

> « a bien rapporté les preuves requises, ce pouvoir étant essentiel pour veiller à ce que la mesure coercitive […] ne soit pas appliquée de façon inconsidérée »[41].

14. Dans certains cas, une fois que les difficultés rencontrées par la Défense ont été portées à l'attention de la Chambre compétente, il se peut que le Procureur, conformément à son devoir d'assister le Tribunal aux fins d'établir la vérité et de rendre justice aux accusés[42], utilise ses propres ressources et pouvoirs afin de faciliter l'obtention de l'information nécessaire[43]. Cependant, l'obligation faite à la Défense d'informer la Chambre qu'elle ne peut obtenir la coopération escomptée des autorités étatiques constitue la première étape dans l'exercice de la diligence voulue[44]. La Chambre d'appel constate que l'appelant n'a pas fait montre d'une telle diligence en l'espèce au stade actuel du procès.

15. Il appartient dès lors à l'appelant d'entreprendre des démarches indépendantes pour se procurer des éléments de preuve à décharge qui ne sont pas en possession du Procureur, et de démontrer qu'en dépit de l'exercice de la diligence requise, il n'a pas réussi à obtenir l'enregistrement en question[45]. Or, dans sa Requête, l'appelant se contente de dire que ses investigations « se seraient heurtées à l'obstruction des autorités rwandaises »[46] et ne donne aucun élément d'information sur les actions concrètes qu'il aurait engagées en ce sens depuis le début de son procès en appel. Il n'apporte pas non plus de preuve d'un manque de coopération de la part des autorités rwandaises en ce qui concerne l'accès aux archives dans lesquelles serait contenu l'enregistrement recherché. En conséquence, la demande de l'appelant tendant à ce que la Chambre d'appel ordonne aux autorités rwandaises de transmettre au Greffe du Tribunal l'intégralité de l'interview doit être rejetée.

III. Dispositif

16. Par ces motifs, la Chambre d'appel, REJETTE la Requête dans son intégralité.

1. La Chambre d'appel du Tribunal pénal international chargé de juger les personnes présumées responsables d'actes de génocide ou d'autres violations graves du droit international humanitaire commis sur le territoire du Rwanda et les citoyens rwandais présumés responsables de tels actes ou violations commis sur le territoire d'Etats voisins entre le 1er janvier et le 31 décembre 1994 (ci-après « Chambre d'appel » et « Tribunal », respectivement) est saisie par l'Appelant Ferdinand Nahimana (ci-après « Appelant ») de la « Requête aux fins de traductions d'enregistrements d'émissions RTLM contenus dans la pièce à conviction C7 » déposée confidentiellement le 7 avril 2006 (ci-après « Requête »), par laquelle il demande à la Chambre d'appel de désigner un expert traducteur ayant pour mission d'identifier, de transcrire et de traduire dans les langues de travail du Tribunal des extraits d'émissions contenues dans la pièce à conviction C7 et visées par l'appelant dans la présente Requête[1]. La Chambre d'appel n'est pas convaincue qu'il existe des raisons apparentes justifiant la classification confidentielle de la Requête, cette dernière ne se référant pas à des témoins protégés et l'appelant n'ayant donné aucun argument pour justifier ce niveau de classification. Par conséquent, la Requête et la présente décision doivent être publiques.

2. Le Procureur a déposé sa réponse le 18 avril 2006[2]. La Chambre d'appel note que cette Réponse excède le nombre limite de dix pages[3]. Le Procureur prie la Chambre d'appel d'autoriser ce dépassement, en invoquant le nombre d'enregistrements d'émissions concernés[4]. La Chambre d'appel estime que, dans les circonstances de l'espèce, le dépassement des limites fixées est justifié et considère la Réponse comme validement déposée.

3. L'appelant n'a pas déposé de réplique.

I. Rappel de la procédure

4. En juillet 2000 débutait une série de communications entre les parties et le Tribunal relatives aux enregistrements de la « Radio Télévision Libre des Mille Collines » (ci-après « RTLM »)[5]. Le 10 janvier 2001, le Bureau du Procureur communiquait au Greffier, pour transmission à la Défense, vingt-et-un documents et une boîte contenant cinquante-neuf cassettes de la RTLM obtenues du témoin GO[6]. Ces éléments furent transmis à la Défense le 15 janvier 2001[7]. Le 20 décembre 2001, le Procureur communiquait confidentiellement la liste des transcriptions de 273 enregistrements de la RTLM diffusés entre octobre 1993 et juillet 1994, indiquant qu'ils étaient inclus dans les 345 enregistrements de la RTLM communiqués précédemment aux conseils de l'appelant (ci-après « Défense ») sous les numéros d'Index 1-345[8]. La liste faisait état de la traduction, dans au moins l'une des langues de travail du Tribunal, de 92 enregistrements. Le Procureur s'engageait à communiquer de nouvelles traductions dès qu'elles seraient disponibles[9]. Dans sa Requête, l'appelant se réfère plus spécifiquement aux 135 enregistrements d'émissions diffusées entre octobre 1993 et le 6 avril 1994[10].

5. Le 9 janvier 2002, le Procureur communiquait à la Défense et à la Chambre de première instance I (ci-après « Chambre de première instance »), un CD-Rom contenant 273 fichiers informatiques comprenant les transcriptions en kinyarwanda des émissions diffusées par la RTLM en 1993 et 1994. Cette communication avait pour objet de faciliter l'accès au contenu des émissions[11] et l'audition du Témoin Expert M. Ruzindana[12], le Procureur ayant précisé que ces documents avaient été communiqués antérieurement à la Défense[13]. Le 8 mars 2002, lors de la déposition du Témoin Expert

M. Rizvi, la Chambre de première instance a admis au dossier les pièces à conviction P102 et P103 consistant respectivement en la liste des transcriptions des émissions de la RTLM et en 210 cassettes de la RTLM[14].

6. Le 29 octobre 2003, après la clôture des débats, le Président de la Chambre instruisait le Greffe d'enregistrer le CD-Rom communiqué par le Procureur le 9 janvier 2002, en tant que pièce à conviction C7 et d'informer les parties de ce dépôt[15].

7. Le 3 décembre 2003, la Chambre de première instance rendait son jugement dans la présente affaire[16]. L'appelant interjetait appel du Jugement et déposait son Acte d'appel le 4 mai 2004 et son Mémoire d'appel le 27 septembre 2004[17]. La Chambre d'appel relève que dans son Acte d'appel – mais non dans son Mémoire d'appel – l'appelant soutient que la Chambre de première instance a commis des erreurs de droit en retenant une définition erronée des éléments constitutifs du crime d'incitation directe et publique à commettre le génocide, > « en particulier en retenant le caractère criminel d'émissions sur la base de traductions partielles, erronées ou incomplètes »[18].

Par ailleurs, la Chambre d'appel constate que l'ensemble de ses écritures sur le fond de l'appel contient d'autres allégations relatives à la traduction et/ou l'interprétation des enregistrements des émissions de la RTLM.[19] La Chambre d'appel tient à préciser que la présente décision ne préjuge en rien de l'appréciation ultérieure qu'elle fera de ces moyens d'appel au moment de les analyser sur le fond.

8. Lors de la Conférence de mise en état du 9 mars 2005, l'Appelant sollicitait la traduction d'un court extrait d'émission de la RTLM issu de la pièce à conviction C7 mentionné dans le paragraphe 358 du Jugement. La Juge de la mise en état faisait droit à cette demande[20] et la traduction en langues anglaise et française fut communiquée aux parties le 8 avril 2005[21].

II. Discussion

ARGUMENTS DES PARTIES

9. Notant le caractère incomplet des traductions des enregistrements contenus dans la pièce à conviction C7, l'appelant fait valoir que le Jugement retient à charge plusieurs extraits de ces émissions sélectionnées par le Procureur alors que ces extraits ont fait l'objet soit d'une traduction erronée, soit d'amputations dénaturant leur sens[22]. Il affirme par ailleurs qu'il existe un nombre significatif de transcriptions n'ayant pas fait l'objet de traductions mais qui ont été néanmoins admises comme éléments de preuve faisant partie de la pièce C7, et qui confirmeraient que la radio RTLM diffusait avant le 6 avril 1994 « des émissions visant à éviter toute confrontation à caractère ethnique »[23]. Enfin, il allègue que « la datation de certains extraits retenus à charge par les juges est fausse »[24].

10. L'appelant soutient que c'est « par un travail d'une grande complexité et d'une extrême longueur » qu'il a pu enfin prendre connaissance des transcriptions contenues dans la pièce C7[25] et qu'

> « [à] la différence des juges de première instance qui n'ont pu statuer qu'au vu d'une infime sélection effectuée par le Bureau du procureur, l'appelant dispose aujourd'hui, pour la première fois, d'une vision représentative des émissions diffusées »[26].

En conséquence, il requiert la désignation d'un expert aux fins d'assurer la rectification des traductions contestées, la traduction des ainsi que la rectification de la datation de certaines émissions[27].

11. Dans sa Réponse, le Procureur soutient que la Requête doit être rejetée car elle constitue un abus de procédure et une tentative inacceptable de pallier les défaillances de l'appelant lors du procès en première instance[28]. Il affirme que les émissions en cause ayant été communiquées à l'appelant dès 2000[29], avant et pendant son procès, l'appelant aurait pu et du présenter sa demande au stade de la première instance ou dans le cadre de son appel au fond[30]. De plus, une telle requête ne peut être déposée qu'en démontrant l'importance ou l'impact, le cas échéant, des erreurs alléguées de traduction sur le verdict en appel[31].

12. En tout état de cause, le Procureur rappelle que la procédure d'appel n'est pas destinée à permettre à un accusé de soulever des arguments relatifs aux preuves qui étaient devant la Chambre de première instance ou à l'évaluation de ces preuves par celle-ci.[32] Il soutient que dans la mesure où l'appelant soulève non pas de simples erreurs de traduction ou d'enregistrement, mais des questions relatives à l'interprétation ou à l'évaluation des éléments de preuves par la Chambre de première instance, celles-ci doivent faire l'objet d'un appel au fond plutôt que d'une requête au stade de la mise en état en appel[33].

ANALYSE

13. Pour justifier, au stade de l'appel, une demande de révision de la traduction de pièces à conviction déposées en première instance, l'appelant doit démontrer que des doutes légitimes existent quant à l'exactitude de la traduction et qu'il est dans l'intérêt de la justice de clarifier la question à ce stade de la procédure[34]. Considérant le stade avancé de la procédure d'appel en l'espèce, la Chambre d'appel n'accordera une telle demande que si elle considère, au vu des traductions visées par l'appelant, que l'exclusion de ces documents conduirait à un déni de justice. S'agissant de la demande aux fins de traduction d'enregistrements et de passages d'émissions non traduits lors du procès en première instance, la Chambre d'appel n'y donnera suite que si l'appelant démontre qu'il n'a pu obtenir leur traduction en dépit de la diligence exercée ou que le défaut de traduction de ces documents entraînerait un déni de justice[35]. Enfin, la contestation de l'interprétation retenue par la Chambre de première instance s'agissant d'un document traduit, ainsi que les allégations selon lesquelles la Chambre de première instance n'a pas pris en considération des documents que l'appelant estime pertinents, y compris les documents non traduits, relèvent de l'appel au fond et ne seront donc pas examinées dans la présente décision.

a. Traductions prétendument erronées

14. L'appelant fait valoir que les extraits des émissions des 30 novembre 1993[36], 6 janvier 1994[37] et du 31 mars au 1er avril 1994[38] pris en compte par la Chambre de première instance ont fait l'objet d'une traduction manifestement erronée. Le Procureur affirme que l'appelant a eu en sa possession depuis de nombreuses années les transcriptions en kinyarwanda desdites émissions ainsi que leurs traductions contestées et qu'il aurait donc du soulever ces arguments durant son procès en première instance ou dans son Mémoire d'appel[39]. Il soutient que l'appelant n'a soulevé aucune véritable erreur de traduction nécessitant correction[40] et que même si les traductions et interprétations proposées par l'appelant étaient retenues, elles ne modifieraient en rien les conclusions de la Chambre de première instance. Plus spécifiquement, concernant l'émission du 30 novembre 1993, le Procureur maintient que les sanctions envisagées visent les Tutsis, aucune raison ne justifiant la traduction et l'interprétation suggérée par l'Appelant[41]. En ce qui concerne l'émission du 6 janvier 1994, le Procureur précise que la source de la traduction de cet enregistrement est l'International Monitor Institute qui a produit des résumés des émissions radio et non pas des traductions exactes de leurs

[35] Voir, par ailleurs, la Conférence de mise en état du 9 mars 2005 où Mme le Juge de mise en état en appel a fait remarquer à l'appelant, en réponse à l'une de ses questions concernant la traduction des mémoires de première instance, que « lorsque vous déposez le mémoire de l'appelant, nous ne pouvons plus revenir à une demande de traduction de documents relevant de la première instance » (CRA du 9 mars 2005, p. 11).

[39] Réponse, par. 14, 19, 21, 23.

[40] Ibid., par. 12.

transcriptions verbatim[42]. Enfin, pour ce qui est de l'émission du 31 mars au 1er avril 1994, le Procureur note que l'Appelant allègue une erreur d'interprétation et non de traduction[43].

15. S'agissant de l'émission du 30 novembre 1993[44], la Chambre d'appel note que la traduction corrigée, complétée et communiquée par le Greffe le 8 avril 2005[45] fait partie du dossier en appel et sera dûment prise en compte par la Chambre d'appel lors de l'examen de l'appel au fond.[46] En ce qui concerne cette version corrigée, la Chambre d'appel est d'avis que l'interprétation proposée par l'appelant ne soulève pas de doutes légitimes quant à l'exactitude de la traduction et n'établit pas qu'une clarification de la traduction à cette étape des procédures soit nécessaire dans l'intérêt de la justice.

16. Quant à l'émission diffusée les 5 et 6 janvier 1994, la Chambre d'appel note que ni la pièce à conviction C7, ni la pièce à conviction P103/45[47], ne sont explicitement citées dans les paragraphes 352 à 356 du Jugement. La conclusion de la Chambre de première instance relative à l'opinion exprimée par Kantano Habimana découle en réalité de son analyse de la pièce à conviction 1D9 déposée par la Défense et admise comme élément de preuve le 1er novembre 2000[48] et non pas de la pièce à conviction C7, comme le prétend l'appelant. A cet égard, la Chambre d'appel relève que les traductions vers l'anglais et le français de la transcription de l'émission en question figurant dans la pièce à conviction 1D9 contiennent la phrase « On sent vraiment qu'ils veulent également accéder au pouvoir » ou «You can really feel that they want also to get to power »[49]. Cette pièce à conviction comprend également le « Certificat de Traducteur » en date du 9 juin 1997 signé par M. Gaudence Mukakigeli, traducteur qualifié et reconnu par le Tribunal « pour interpréter du kinyarwanda vers le français/anglais et du français/anglais vers le kinyarwanda »[50]. Compte tenu de ce qui précède, la Chambre d'appel estime que la demande de l'Appelant visant à réviser la traduction d'un document faisant partie de la pièce à conviction C7 est sans fondement.

17. Enfin, pour ce qui est de l'émission diffusée du 31 mars au 1er avril 1994, la Chambre d'appel observe que la phrase du Jugement contestée par l'appelant se lit comme suit :

> « La Chambre prend acte de la demande invitant les voisins, si les rumeurs selon lesquelles le docteur Ngirabanyigina soutient les Inkotanyi sont vraies, à 'nous téléphoner à nouveau pour

[42] Ibid., para. 21. Il ajoute que l'Appelant était en possession de l'enregistrement, de la transcription originale en kinyarwanda et de la traduction française et qu'en tout état de cause, l'interprétation proposée par l'Appelant ne changerait rien dans les conclusions de la Chambre de première instance y relatives (Réponse, par. 21 et 22).
[43] Ibid., par. 24.
[44] Admise comme pièce à conviction P36/5A (version en kinyarwanda) le 20 mars 2002 (CRA du 20 mars 2002, pp. 151-153 et 189) et comme P36/5B et C (versions anglaise et française) le 5 juillet 2002 (CRA du 5 juillet 2002, p. 111, et 112).
[45] Voir supra, par. 0.
[46] La Chambre d'appel note à cet égard que l'Appelant conteste les conclusions pertinentes de la Chambre de première instance relatives aux émissions de la RTLM dans le cadre de son appel au fond (Mémoire d'appel, par. 194, 203).
[48] Jugement, par. 351-355. La pièce à conviction 1D9 (versions en anglais et français) a été admise comme élément de preuve le 1er novembre 2000 (CRA du 1er novembre 2001, pp. 91-92). La pièce à conviction 1D9 et C7-044E (pp. K198097 et seq.) sont issus du même texte en kinyarwanda, et portent sur un extrait de l'émission diffusée les 5 et 6 janvier 1994. Ils contiennent la même traduction/résumé anglais, mais la traduction française comprise dans la pièce C7-044F diffère de celle contenue dans la pièce 1D9 : la phrase « On sent vraiment qu'ils veulent également accéder au pouvoir » figure dans le texte français contenu dans la pièce à conviction 1D9, mais pas dans la traduction contenue dans la pièce C7-044F. Dans la version française du Jugement, la Chambre de première instance cite la traduction française de la pièce 1D9. Dans leurs écritures, l'Appelant cite la traduction française contenue dans la pièce C7-044F, p. K0169341, tandis que le Procureur fait plus généralement référence à la pièce C7-044K.
La Chambre d'appel relève également une divergence de référencement : le CD 44 (décliné en enregistrements 44-K, 044-E et 044-F pour les version en kinyarwanda, anglais et français) inclus dans la pièce à conviction C7 porte l'identification « RTLM 0045 du 05/06/94, Radio Rwanda » ; la pièce à conviction P103/45A a pour références « RTLM 0045 du 05/06/94, Radio RTLM » ; la pièce à conviction 1D9 est référencée comme « RTLM 05-06/01/94 ».
[49] Pièce à conviction 1D9, p. 6 (version française) et p. 3352*bis* (version anglaise).

nous dire que le docteur et sa famille ne sont plus chez eux', demande qui, selon elle, invite à prendre des mesures à l'encontre du docteur et de sa famille. »[51]

La Chambre d'appel observe que ce passage du Jugement porte sur une analyse de la pièce à conviction P103/189C admise le 23 mai 2002[52] et citée au paragraphe 381 du Jugement, et non pas sur la pièce à conviction C7. L'argument de l'Appelant selon lequel une erreur proviendrait du fait que la phrase en question a été isolée de son contexte est donc dépourvu de tout fondement, puisque la pièce à conviction P103/189C comportait la totalité du propos pertinent. Par ailleurs, la Chambre d'appel relève que l'Appelant n'identifie pas précisément en quoi la traduction qu'il propose serait différente de celle figurant dans la pièce à conviction P103/189C, ni quel impact sa correction éventuelle aurait sur la conclusion de la Chambre de première instance. En tout état de cause, la Chambre d'appel convient avec le Procureur qu'un argument portant sur une erreur alléguée d'interprétation, et non de traduction, doit être soulevé lors de l'appel au fond et n'est pas une question pouvant être tranchée dans le cadre de la procédure de mise en état[53].

b. Extraits dont la traduction est incomplète

18. L'appelant soutient que des « passages significatifs » ont été amputés de la traduction des extraits des émissions des 25 et 26 octobre 2003[54] et du 14 mars 1994[55] citées dans les paragraphes 363 et 377 à 379 du Jugement, respectivement. Il affirme que ces amputations dénaturent le sens des enregistrements en question, ce qui expliquerait l'analyse erronée de la Chambre de première instance.

19. Le Procureur argue que les allégations de l'appelant relatives aux amputations délibérées d'extraits sont sans fondement et vexatoires[56]. Concernant l'émission du 25 octobre 1993, il note que l'Appelant se réfère à la traduction française officielle versée au dossier par la Défense comme pièce 1D49 et soutient que l'emploi des crochets dans le Jugement signale une omission de la Chambre de première instance, non du traducteur[57]. Par ailleurs, le Procureur relève que des traductions françaises et anglaises de l'émission du 14 mars 1994 ont été admises en juillet 2002 et juin 2003[58] et que l'appelant avait alors la possibilité de soulever tout problème y relatif. Il ajoute qu'en tout état de [51] Jugement, para. 383. La Chambre d'appel note que dans sa Requête l'Appelant cite la traduction française du Jugement en date du 5 avril 2004 remplacée par la « version officielle » le 2 mars 2006.

[52] P. K0162236-38, Le passage litigieux de ce document se lit comme suit: « Parlons maintenant de la mort de Katumba qui suscite beaucoup d'inquiétude... L'on rapporte qu'hier, la ville de Kigali a été paralysée suite à sa mort ... A part que les gens trompent l'opinion publique, était-ce seulement KATUMBA qui est mort dans cette ville de Kigali ? Ou n'est-ce pas au contraire suite à la mort du Tutsi Maurice? Est-ce vraiment la mort de Katumba, un Hutu, qui a provoqué l'arrêt de toutes les activités à Kigali ? La mort d'un Tutsi ne peut-elle pas provoquer une telle situation ? Qu'ils ne trompent personne. Les assassins de KATUMBA ne sont-ils pas les mêmes que ceux qui ont tué Maurice pour semer la confusion, c'est-à-dire pour donner l'impression qu'un Tutsi et un Hutu ont perdu leurs vies dans les mêmes conditions. On n'est pas dupe, qu'ils ne sèment pas la confusion car des rumeurs qui viennent de me parvenir disent que le Docteur NYIRABANYIGINYA André, un radiologue qui travaille à l'hôpital Roi Fayçal hum, l'hôpital le plus moderne du pays ... Il travaille même de temps en temps à mi-temps au C.H.K. hum... Et les gens de dire : 'Du reste, tel que nous le connaissions, ha !' Il n'a jamais cessé de dire, même quand il était encore à Bruxelles, qu'il serait 'le sympathisant des Inkotanyi'. On dit 'qu'il a pris toute sa famille, qu'ils ont fui et qu'ils ont rejoint les Inkotanyi'. Il se pourrait que ce soit des rumeurs mais si c'est vrai, ses voisins peuvent maintenant nous téléphoner à nouveau pour nous dire que le Docteur et sa famille ne sont plus chez eux. »

[53] La Chambre d'appel relève par ailleurs qu'au paragraphe 569 de son Mémoire d'appel l'Appelant conteste déjà, de manière générale, la conclusion de la Chambre de première instance sur l'existence d'un « lien causal » entre le massacre des civils tutsis et le message visant à l'extermination ethnique qui a été diffusé par la RTLM.

[54] Requête, par. 16. L'Appelant soutient qu'une traduction complète de ce passage établirait que l'auteur des propos cités dans le Jugement n'était pas le journaliste de la RTLM, mais un tiers.

[55] Ibid., par. 17. Selon l'Appelant, le caractère incomplet de la traduction de cet émission a conduit la Chambre de première instance à conclure de manière erronée que « le journaliste Gahigi aurait énuméré sur les antennes de la radio RTLM 'les noms de l'ensemble des membres' de la famille d'un Inkotanyi appelé Manzi Sudi », alors que la phrase « amputée » éclaire, selon lui, le reste des propos et « souligne que toutes les personnes citées étaient membres à part entière d'une même brigade clandestine du FPR dans le quartier de Biryogo, sans aucunement avoir des liens de parenté avec Manzi Sudi Fadi ».

[56] Réponse, par. 28-35 avec une référence à la Requête, par. 15-17.

cause, la traduction proposée par l'appelant ne pourrait en aucun cas modifier la conclusion de la Chambre de première instance[59].

20. L'émission de la RTLM en date du 25 octobre 1993 a été citée, parmi d'autres, par la Chambre de première instance pour illustrer le fait que et conclure que ces émissions « témoign[ai]ent d'une interaction complexe entre les dynamiques ethnique et politique »[61]. La Chambre d'appel relève que la transcription de cette même émission figure dans la pièce à conviction 1D49C versée au dossier par la Défense le 24 mai 2001. Le passage litigieux de cette émission est traduit dans son intégralité, y compris les phrases identifiées par l'appelant comme étant « délibérément omis[es] par le traducteur ». Par conséquent, même s'il est vrai que la Chambre de première instance se réfère dans le Jugement à la pièce à conviction C7 et non pas à la pièce 1D49C, il apparaît que l'intégralité de la traduction était à la disposition de la Chambre de première instance. La Chambre d'appel considère par ailleurs que l'emploi des crochets dans la citation litigieuse par la Chambre de première instance[62] témoigne du fait que c'est cette dernière, et non le traducteur, qui a volontairement omis de citer les passages relevés par l'appelant, et qu'elle a donc rendu ses conclusions en connaissance de cause. La Chambre d'appel note enfin que l'appelant conteste les conclusions pertinentes de la Chambre de première instance dans le cadre de son appel au fond[63].

21. En ce qui concerne l'émission du 14 mars 1994, la Chambre d'appel relève d'emblée que la Chambre de première instance se réfère à la pièce à conviction P36/54C admise le 1er juillet 2002 et non pas à la pièce C7. La Chambre d'appel constate en effet que cette pièce à conviction consistait uniquement en la traduction française des deux paragraphes invoqués par l'appelant.[64] Cependant, le 3 juin 2003, la Chambre de première instance a admis la pièce à conviction P36/54E qui contenait la traduction française intégrale de l'enregistrement en question[65]. L'appelant n'ayant pas contesté l'exactitude de cette traduction, la Chambre d'appel considère que sa demande est désormais sans objet[66].

22. Au vu de ce qui précède, la demande de l'appelant visant à faire traduire par un expert désigné par la Chambre d'appel des extraits prétendument non traduits est rejetée.

c. Emissions non traduites

23. L'appelant soutient qu'

[66] La Chambre d'appel constate par ailleurs que l'Appelant conteste les conclusions de la Chambre de première instance relatives à l'émission du 14 mars 1994 dans le cadre de son appel au fond, Mémoire d'appel, par. 237-241 et 567-569.

> « un nombre significatif de transcriptions n'ayant pas fait l'objet de traduction, admises comme éléments de preuve, confirment que la radio RTLM diffus[ait] avant le 6 avril 1994 des émissions visant à éviter toute confrontation à caractère ethnique »[67]

et demande leur traduction. Le Procureur affirme que la requête de l'appelant concernant les émissions non traduites s'analyse en un abus de procédure, dans la mesure où elle constitue une tentative de l'appelant de se servir, au stade de l'appel, de preuves qui étaient à sa disposition ou avaient été déposées lors du procès en première instance, et qu'il a sciemment choisi de ne pas utiliser[68]. Le Procureur relève que certaines des émissions visées par l'appelant avaient déjà été traduites dans l'une des langues de travail du Tribunal[69]. En tout état de cause, il souligne que même si les émissions non traduites avaient été retenues en première instance, elles n'auraient pas eu pour effet de modifier de manière décisive les conclusions de la Chambre de première instance[70].

24. L'appelant mentionne tout d'abord un extrait d'émissions des 29 et 30 novembre et du 1er décembre 1993 comprenant les propos de Gaspard Gahigi, rédacteur en chef de la RTLM, à l'occasion d'assassinats commis dans la commune de Mutura à la fin du mois de novembre 1993[71]. La Chambre d'appel note que le passage cité par l'appelant et qu'il prétend être non traduit, correspond verbatim au passage contenu dans la pièce à conviction C7,[72] ainsi que dans la pièce à conviction P36/5C admise le 5 juillet 2002[73]. L'appelant invoque ensuite un extrait d'une émission des 17 et 18 mars 1994, contenant un échange entre deux journalistes de la RTLM, Rucogoza et Mbilizi[74]. La Chambre d'appel note que cet extrait cité par l'appelant correspond mot pour mot aux passages en français contenus dans la pièce à conviction C7[75], ainsi que dans la pièce à conviction P103/170C admise le 3 juin 2003[76]. Dès lors, la demande de l'appelant concernant la traduction de ces transcriptions est dépourvue de tout fondement.

25. Ensuite, l'appelant propose la traduction des extraits d'émissions non traduites dont les transcriptions en kinyarwanda sont contenues dans la pièce à conviction C7. La Chambre d'appel constate cependant que tous ces enregistrements ont été communiqués à l'appelant lors du procès en première instance et ont été admis comme pièces à conviction bien avant la clôture du procès. Il en est ainsi des extraits des émissions diffusées :

i. les 2 et 4 décembre 1993, dans lesquels Gaspard Gahigi invite notamment les auditeurs à « dénoncer toute provocation à caractère ethnique »[77] ;
ii. les 3, 6 et 7 décembre 1993, dans lesquels Gaspard Gahigi parle du rôle de l'Eglise[78] ;
iii. les 18 et 19 mars 1994 dans lesquels l'orateur affirme, selon l'Appelant, que « [l]es Rwandais doivent cultiver l'esprit de tolérance, vivre en paix »[79] ;

La Chambre d'appel note que l'Appelant n'identifie pas de manière précise les parties des traductions manquantes et relève que le fichier 85F est entièrement en français et qu'une partie du fichier 80K et du fichier 133K est également en français.

iv. les 14 et 15 décembre 1994 dans lesquels, selon l'Appelant, le journaliste Kantano « dénonce les gens qui provoquent les autres ou qui recherchent la violence même lors des matches de football » et « demande d'éviter la violence »[80] ;
v. les 21 et 22 décembre 1993, dans lesquels Kantano Habimana affirme, selon l'Appelant, « qu'une bonne cohabitation entre les Inkotanyi et d'autres Rwandais est nécessaire »[81] ;
vi. des 22, 23 et 24 décembre 1993, dans lesquels Kantano Habimana contredit, selon l'Appelant, ceux qui accusent la radio RTLM d'avoir été contre l'application de paix d'Arusha[82] ;
vii. le 5 mars 1994 dans lequel, d'après l'Appelant, Noël Hitimana met en garde les responsables du FPR contre une guerre à l'intérieur du Rwanda[83] ;
viii. les 7 et 8 mars 1994, dans lequel Kantano invite les auditeurs à « cultiver sans cesse [l'unité entre Tutsis, Hutus et Twas] et répudier les considérations qui divisent les Rwandais »[84]

Ces extraits correspondent aux enregistrements en kinyarwanda contenus dans les pièces à conviction P103/287A, P103/288A, P36/68A, P36/12A, P36/15A, P103/316A, P103/335A et P36/50A, respectivement, admises au dossier le 20 mars 2002.[85]

26. S'agissant d'éléments de preuve versés au dossier bien avant la clôture du procès en première instance (contrairement à la pièce C7), la Chambre d'appel considère qu'il appartenait à l'appelant de faire une demande de traduction avant la fin du procès en première instance. En l'espèce, la Chambre d'appel observe que l'appelant a formulé cette demande plus de deux ans après le prononcé du Jugement et qui plus est, après le dépôt de son Mémoire d'appel. Par conséquent, la Chambre d'appel n'est pas satisfaite que l'appelant ait fait preuve de la diligence exigée.

27. De ce fait, la Chambre n'accordera une telle demande que si elle considère, au vu des traductions proposées par l'appelant, que l'exclusion de ces documents conduirait à un déni de justice.[86] De manière générale, la Chambre d'appel constate que l'appelant se contente de soumettre des passages dont la traduction est prétendument absente des documents composant la pièce à conviction C7 sans se référer aux conclusions de la Chambre de première instance auxquelles ils se rapporteraient.[87] Par ailleurs, il appartient à l'appelant de démontrer, dans le cadre de son appel au fond, si certains extraits de la pièce à conviction C7 démontrent que la Chambre de première instance a commis une erreur de fait[88]. Il n'y a pas lieu à ce stade d'ordonner la traduction sollicitée car l'Appelant, maîtrisant les langues kinyarwandaise et française, dispose de tous les éléments nécessaires à la préparation de sa défense ; il est notamment en mesure de proposer sa version des traductions en articulant ses arguments en appel. Si, en se prononçant sur ces arguments, la Chambre d'appel conclut à l'existence d'une erreur ayant entraîné un déni de justice,[89] elle ordonnera, proprio motu, le cas échéant, la traduction des passages pertinents.

L'appelant précise que « la partie entre crochets [de sa traduction] n'a pas été transcrite ; l'appelant l'a repérée sur l'élément audio ». Dès lors, la Chambre d'appel considère que la demande de l'appelant va au-delà d'une demande de traduction, car il y inclut des éléments qui ne faisaient pas partie du dossier devant la Chambre de première instance. Cette demande ne sera donc pas examinée.

[87] Requête, par. 18-27 sous le titre commun « Emissions non traduites démontrant le souci du rédacteur en chef de la RTLM et de ses journalistes d'éviter toute confrontation ethnique ».
[88] La Chambre d'appel relève que ces arguments sont déjà inclus dans les écritures de l'Appelant relatives au fond de son appel – voir notamment, Mémoire en réplique, par. 64-70 et Annexe 8 « Langue des transcrits des émissions de la radio RTLM jusqu'au 6 avril 1994 (Chambers exh. C7) ».
[89] Voir l'article 24 (1) (b) du Statut.

d. Datation contestée

28. L'appelant soutient que l'erreur de datation d'une émission citée dans le Jugement[90]

> « confirme la nécessité de réexaminer les extraits retenus à charge par les juges, sans les séparer de leur contexte et en vérifiant scrupuleusement la traduction et l'interprétation qui en a été faite »[91].

Le Procureur affirme que l'erreur alléguée concernant la date d'une émission de la RTLM, n'affecte pas les conclusions de la Chambre de première instance, qui sont fondées sur une transcription correcte de l'enregistrement[92].

29. La Chambre d'appel constate que la transcription citée par la Chambre de première instance est en effet datée du 12 avril 1994 et non pas du 4 décembre 1993 comme indiqué dans le Jugement.[93] Cependant, vu le fait que la transcription en question est disponible dans les langues de travail du Tribunal, la prétention de l'appelant est, depuis son versement au dossier, sans rapport avec une demande touchant à l'exactitude de la traduction et relève clairement de l'appel au fond[94]. La Chambre d'appel considère également que sa demande générale visant à « réexaminer les extraits retenus à charge » basée sur l'exemple de cette erreur est dépourvue de tout fondement : au stade de l'appel, il appartient à l'appelant d'identifier les erreurs de fait qui ont entraîné un déni de justice en incluant des arguments y relatifs dans son acte et son mémoire d'appel.

III. Dispositif

30. Par ces motifs, la Chambre d'appel, REJETTE la Requête.

Fait en français et en anglais, le texte français faisant foi.

Fait le 20 novembre 2006, à La Haye, Pays-Bas.

[90] Requête, par. 28. L'appelant relève que la Chambre de première instance, au paragraphe 360 du Jugement, « dat[e] du 4 décembre 1993 une émission diffusée en réalité le 12 avril 1994, c'est-à-dire après le début des massacres, durant une période où l'appelant n'entretient plus aucun contact avec la radio et très précisément le jour où, évacué en avion sur Bujumbura, il ne peut capter aucune émission ».

1. La Chambre d'appel du Tribunal pénal international chargé de juger les personnes présumées responsables d'actes de génocide ou d'autres violations graves du droit international humanitaire commis sur le territoire du Rwanda et les citoyens rwandais présumés responsables de tels actes ou violations commis sur le territoire d'Etats voisins entre le 1er janvier et le 31 décembre 1994 (ci-après « Chambre d'appel » et « Tribunal », respectivement) est saisie par l'Appelant Ferdinand Nahimana (ci-après « Appelant ») des deux requêtes suivantes :

- « Requête aux fins de divulgation d'éléments en possession du Procureur et nécessaires à la Défense de l'appelant » déposée le 10 juillet 2006 (ci-après « Requête du 10 juillet 2006 ») ;
- « Requête urgente de la Défense aux fins d'assistance du Greffe pour accomplir des investigations complémentaires en phase d'appel » déposée le 10 octobre 2006 (ci-après « Requête du 10 octobre 2006 »).

2. Le Procureur a respectivement répondu à ces Requêtes les 20 juillet 2006[1] et 20 octobre 2006[2]. Les Répliques de l'appelant ont été déposées, respectivement, les 21 juillet 2006[3] et 25 octobre 2006[4].

I. Requête du 10 juillet 2006

Arguments des parties

4. L'appelant demande à la Chambre d'appel[8] d'ordonner au Procureur de communiquer à la Défense, conformément aux articles 66 (B) et 68 (A) et (B) du Règlement de procédure et de preuve du Tribunal (ci-après « Règlement »), les documents suivants[9]:

- tous les documents compris entre les références K050 2000 et K050 5000 d'une part, et L0020 200 et L0020 600 d'autre part, figurant dans les dossiers « MINALOC ou MRND », dossiers que l'Appelant considère « directement en relation avec les accusations portées contre l'Appelant » et « nécessaires à [s]a défense […] en ce qu'ils permettent d'identifier les causes réelles des massacres survenus en mars 1992 [dans la région de Bugesera], d'en désigner les véritables responsables et de [le] mettre hors de cause »[10]. Il ajoute que ces documents auraient dû être communiqués en première instance mais que leur divulgation demeure nécessaire en appel afin de lui permettre de soutenir utilement ses moyens d'appel au fond[11];
- la convention de plaidoyer conclue entre Joseph Serugendo et le Bureau du Procureur et l'ensemble des déclarations faites par Joseph Serugendo auprès du Bureau du Procureur, accompagnées des enregistrements vidéo[12] : l'Appelant maintient que ces documents « contiennent des éléments à décharge et sont nécessaires à sa défense »[13] en ce que le jugement de Joseph Serugendo[14] fait apparaître qu'il a été condamné sur le fondement des émissions de la RTLM et de ses activités au sein de cette radio et sur la base d'une convention de plaidoyer où il aurait fait des déclarations concernant ses activités, les émissions, le fonctionnement interne et le rôle tenu par chacun des membres de la RTLM[15].

L'Appelant affirme que la Chambre de première instance a apprécié « [s]a personnalité […] et la valeur de son témoignage au regard de son implication supposée dans des événements survenus dans la région de Bugesera au cours du mois de mars 1992 » (ibid., par. 9). Il cite le paragraphe 691 du Jugement selon lequel l'appelant « a ordonné la diffusion sur les ondes de Radio Rwanda […] [d'un] communiqué […] qui a provoqué la peur chez les Hutus et les a conduit à commettre des actes de violence contre la population tutsie parce qu'ils avaient été amenés faussement à croire qu'ils étaient sur le point d'être attaqués » (ibid., par. 10). L'appelant précise que ces dossiers sont nécessaires à la Défense en ce qu'ils permettent d'apprécier la matérialité de certains faits qui lui sont reprochés et leur contexte (Réplique à la Réponse à la Requête du 20 juillet 2006, par. 7).

5. Le Procureur soutient que la Requête du 10 juillet 2006 doit être rejetée dans son intégralité[16]. Premièrement, il prétend que ladite Requête est mal fondée en droit car l'Appelant n'a pas démontré en quoi l'article 66 (B) est applicable à ce stade de la procédure. A cet égard, le Procureur relève que les documents « MINALOC et MRND » ne pouvaient être communiqués en première instance puisqu'ils n'ont été introduits dans la base de données du Procureur qu'en octobre 2004[17]. Il ajoute que l'Appelant n'a pas démontré dans cette procédure d'appel la nécessité pour sa défense de documents relatifs aux événements de mars 1992 à Bugesera ni leur éventuel impact sur les conclusions de la Chambre de première instance[18]. Deuxièmement, le Procureur maintient que la référence à l'article 68 (A) du Règlement est sans fondement et s'apparente à une recherche exploratoire inacceptable en ce qu'elle couvre 3400 pages de documents dont toutes ne portent pas sur les événements de Bugesera[19]. Le Procureur souligne que l'Appelant n'a pas apporté la démonstration prima facie que le Procureur est en possession de documents susceptibles de mettre l'Appelant hors de cause[20]. Enfin, le Procureur affirme que les documents MINALOC et MRND et les déclarations de Joseph Serugendo sont accessibles sur le répertoire du système de communication électronique (ci-après « EDS »). Il ajoute que le plaidoyer de culpabilité a été déposé au Greffe confidentiellement et ne relève pas de l'article 68 (A)[21]. Le Procureur argue par ailleurs que l'appelant ne démontre pas en quoi l'article 68 (B) s'applique puisqu'il se contente de dire que ces documents sont « pertinents » et « intéressent » l'appelant[22].

6. L'appelant réplique qu'il prend acte de la disponibilité sur EDS des dossiers MINALOC et MRND et des déclarations de Joseph Serugendo mais qu'il n'est pas en mesure à la date de sa Réplique d'en vérifier l'exactitude[23]. Faisant valoir que rien ne justifie que la convention de plaidoyer reste confidentielle, il demande à la Chambre d'appel de dire et juger qu'elle est dépourvue de tout caractère confidentiel et d'ordonner au Greffier de la rendre accessible au public[24]. Il ajoute que ce document est nécessaire à la préparation de son appel, car il contiendrait « d'abondantes précisions sur le fonctionnement interne de la radio RTLM, en particulier durant les mois d'avril à juillet 1994 », ainsi que « des indications sur le rôle joué au sein de la radio RTLM par les milices armées à partir du 6 avril 1994, tant sur le plan technique que sur le plan moral »[25].

Analyse

7. La Chambre d'appel rappelle que les éléments de preuve relevant de l'article 68 du Règlement sont ceux de nature à disculper en tout ou en partie l'accusé ou à porter atteinte aux éléments de preuve du Procureur[26] et que l'obligation de communiquer ces éléments est une obligation permanente qui subsiste après le procès en première instance, y compris durant la procédure d'appel[27]. Etant donné que c'est au Procureur qu'il appartient de déterminer quels sont les documents qui répondent aux critères énoncés par l'article 68 du Règlement, la Chambre d'appel présume que le Procureur agit de bonne foi et elle n'intervient pas dans l'exercice de cette appréciation discrétionnaire à moins qu'il ne soit démontré que le jugement du Procureur en la matière est abusif[28]. Lorsque la Défense estime qu'une violation de l'article 68 du Règlement a été commise, il lui appartient de soumettre à la Chambre tout commencement de preuve de nature à rendre vraisemblable le caractère disculpatoire des éléments de preuve en question ainsi que leur détention par le Procureur[29]. Même si un appelant démontre que sa demande a été suffisamment précise et que le Procureur ne s'est pas acquitté de ses obligations, la Chambre d'appel n'envisagera d'émettre une ordonnance de communication que s'il est démontré que ces manquements ont porté préjudice à l'appelant[30].

[23] Ibid., par. 3 et 10. La Chambre d'appel note que, depuis le dépôt de la Réplique à la Réponse à la Requête du 10 juillet 2006, l'Appelant n'a pas précisé si il a réussi à avoir accès à ces documents sur EDS.

8. La Chambre d'appel prend note de la déclaration du Procureur selon laquelle il est > « conscient des obligations qui lui sont faites, par l'article 68 (A) du Règlement, de rechercher activement, et, s'il y a lieu, communiquer, à tous les stades de la procédure, les éléments dont il disposerait, et dont il sait effectivement qu'ils seraient de nature à disculper un accusé ou à atténuer sa culpabilité »[31].

La Chambre d'appel relève que le Procureur a déterminé que les documents demandés ne répondaient pas aux critères énoncés par l'article 68 du Règlement[32] et que l'appelant n'a pas démontré en quoi le jugement du Procureur, selon lequel ces documents ne contiennent pas de moyens de preuve disculpatoires, est abusif en l'espèce. A cet égard, la Chambre d'appel relève notamment que l'appelant se réfère lui-même à ces documents comme étant « pertinents » à son affaire et « nécessaires à la défense » et se contente d'affirmer qu'ils « contiennent des éléments à décharge »[33] sans expliquer davantage en quoi ils peuvent le « mettre hors de cause »[34] ou atténuer sa responsabilité individuelle.

9. La Chambre d'appel rappelle que l'article 66 (B) du Règlement s'applique en appel à la condition que les éléments de preuve visés par la demande d'examen de la Défense aient été indisponibles lors du procès[35]. L'applicabilité de l'article 66 (B) à la procédure d'appel implique que le Procureur doive permettre à la Défense de prendre connaissance des éléments qui > « soit sont nécessaires à la préparation de la défense de l'accusé, soit seront utilisés par le Procureur comme moyens de preuve au procès, soit ont été obtenus de l'accusé ou lui appartiennent »[36].

A cet égard, la Chambre d'appel rappelle que les pièces exclusivement à charge ne sont pas nécessairement inutiles à la préparation de la défense de l'accusé et que le Procureur devrait déterminer si « les questions auxquelles se rapportent les pièces en question sont […] l'objet d'un motif d'appel » ou si

Par conséquent, il appartient au Procureur de permettre à l'appelant de prendre connaissance de > « tout élément susceptible d'être admis en appel ou qui pourrait donner lieu à la découverte d'éléments de preuve susceptibles de l'être »[38].

10. La Chambre d'appel prend note du fait que le Procureur a informé la Défense de la disponibilité des dossiers MINALOC et MRND et des déclarations de Joseph Serugendo après le dépôt de la Requête de l'appelant alors qu'il aurait pu le faire plus tôt[39]. Cependant, l'appelant n'a pas fait état, jusqu'à ce jour, de difficultés dans l'obtention des documents via EDS[40]. En conséquence, la Chambre d'appel considère que la demande de communication sur la base de l'article 66 du Règlement relative à ces documents est sans objet.

11. Concernant l'accord de plaidoyer de Joseph Serugendo, la Chambre d'appel note que l'appelant fonde erronément sa Requête sur les articles 66 et 68 du Règlement. La Chambre d'appel considérera néanmoins cette demande, telle que précisée dans la Réplique à la Réponse à la Requête du 10 juillet 2006[41], comme une demande d'accès à une pièce confidentielle.

12. La Chambre d'appel a affirmé de manière constante qu'une partie a toujours le droit de chercher à obtenir des documents provenant de n'importe quelle source afin de l'aider à préparer son dossier, à condition d'identifier les documents recherchés, ou de décrire leur nature générale, et de démontrer l'existence d'un but légitime juridiquement pertinent justifiant l'obtention de cet accès[42]. La pertinence des pièces demandées par une partie peut être établie du fait de l'existence d'un lien entre l'affaire de ladite partie et la ou les affaires dans le cadre desquelles ces pièces ont été présentées, par exemple, lorsque ces affaires découlent d'événements qui auraient eu lieu dans la même région et à la même époque ou s'il existe d'autres recoupements[43]. Il suffit que la partie requérante démontre que l'accès à ces pièces est susceptible de l'aider de manière substantielle à présenter sa cause ou, tout au moins, qu'il existe de bonnes chances pour qu'il en soit ainsi[44]. En se prononçant sur une telle demande, il appartient à la Chambre d'appel de trouver un juste équilibre entre le respect du droit d'une partie à avoir accès à des pièces nécessaires à la préparation de sa cause et l'obligation du Tribunal de garantir la protection et la préservation d'informations confidentielles[45].

13. La Chambre d'appel considère qu'elle est compétente, en vertu de l'article 75 (G) (ii), pour statuer sur la demande relative à la convention de plaidoyer de Joseph Serugendo, puisque aucune Chambre n'est saisie de la première affaire[46], la procédure ayant été terminée par le prononcé du Jugement le 12 juin 2006 et le décès de Joseph Serugendo le 22 août 2006. Ainsi, la Chambre d'appel se voit habilitée à modifier le niveau de classification des documents protégés[47].

La Chambre d'appel est satisfaite que l'Appelant a, d'une part, décrit avec suffisamment de précision la pièce demandée comme il lui incombait de le faire et, d'autre part, démontré l'existence d'un but légitime juridiquement pertinent justifiant la consultation de ladite pièce. 15. La Chambre d'appel accorde au Procureur quatorze (14) jours à compter de la date de la présente décision pour déposer une requête aux fins d'expurgation, s'il peut établir l'existence de motifs suffisants justifiant l'expurgation de certaines informations contenues dans ledit document. Les mesures de protection que la Chambre de première instance a adoptées s'agissant de cette pièce restent en vigueur.

> « [o]rdonner au Greffe d'offrir son assistance à la défense de l'appelant sur le plan logistique et financier, afin que celle-ci procède à des investigations sur le territoire rwandais, en particulier à Kigali, aux fins de tenter d'entrer en possession de l'intégralité de l'enregistrement d'une interview donnée par l'Appelant à 'Radio Rwanda' le 24 avril 1994, diffusée le 25 avril 1994 »[48]

conformément à l'article 20 (4) (b) du Statut du Tribunal (ci-après « Statut »), aux articles 73, 107, 108 bis et 115 du Règlement et à la « Décision sur la requête de Ferdinand Nahimana aux fins de communication d'éléments de preuve disculpatoires et d'investigations sur l'origine et le contenu de la pièce à conviction P105 » du 12 septembre 2006 (ci-après « Décision du 12 septembre 2006 »)[49]. L'appelant affirme que dans sa Décision du 12 septembre 2006, la Chambre d'appel > « met à la charge de la défense le soin de mettre en œuvre les investigations nécessaires à l'obtention de l'enregistrement intégral de l'interview donnée par l'Appelant le 24 avril 1994, retenu à charge contre l'appelant »[50].

A cet égard, l'appelant fait valoir qu'en dépit des multiples tentatives déjà accomplies par la Défense en première instance, il n'a jamais réussi à obtenir l'intégralité de l'interview[51].

17. Il ajoute que la production de cet enregistrement dans son intégralité

première affaire, doit soumettre sa demande : (i) à toute Chambre encore saisie de la première affaire, quelle que soit sa composition, ou (ii) à la Chambre saisie de la deuxième affaire, si aucune Chambre n'est plus saisie de la première affaire. ».

[48] Requête du 10 octobre 2006, p. 5. L'Appelant précise que ces investigations nécessitent la participation du conseil principal, du co-conseil et d'un assistant et détaille le programme nécessaire totalisant 8 jours (2 jours pour le déplacement à Arusha, la coordination avec le Greffe et les entretiens avec l'Appelant à l'UNDF ; 5 jours pour le déplacement à Kigali portant sur les investigations auprès de l'ORINFOR, du centre de documentation du FPR et de toutes autres autorités ou organisations qui seraient compétentes ; 1 jour pour le retour à Arusha et les entretiens avec l'Appelant à l'UNDF pour rendre compte du déroulement de l'enquête) (ibid., par. 18).

[50] Ibid., par. 19. L'Appelant souligne que « le Procureur ne propose aucune assistance sur ce point et n'envisage aucune démarche auprès des autorités rwandaises pour tenter d'obtenir l'intégralité de cet enregistrement » (ibid., par. 20).

[51] Requête du 10 octobre 2006, par. 1-3 et 25. L'Appelant renvoie à l'Annexe 3 de son Mémoire d'appel (révisé), en particulier la « Chronology of efforts made by the differents teams to obtain listed material ».

l'appelant […] selon laquelle seul le FPR-Inkotanyi peut être considéré comme l'ennemi du peuple rwandais »[52].

Il argue également que la copie intégrale de cette interview est également de nature à conforter la crédibilité et la consistance de sa déposition lors du procès en première instance[53].

18. Le Procureur soutient que la Requête du 10 octobre 2006 doit être rejetée car elle est mal fondée et constitue un abus de procédure justifiant le non paiement des honoraires du Conseil[54]. Il affirme qu'elle constitue, en grande partie, la répétition de la « Requête aux fins de communication d'éléments de preuve disculpatoires et d'investigations sur l'origine et le contenu de la pièce à conviction P 105 » (ci-après « Requête du 10 avril 2006 ») – qui demandait à la Chambre d'appel d'ordonner aux autorités rwandaises de communiquer l'intégralité de l'interview, et qui a été rejetée par la Décision du 12 septembre 2006. Selon le Procureur, ces deux requêtes visent fondamentalement le même objectif, l'assistance de la Chambre d'Appel aux fins d'obtenir l'intégralité de l'enregistrement de l'interview[55]. Il argue en conséquence que l'appelant n'a pas satisfait les critères justifiant des enquêtes complémentaires au stade de l'appel[56].

19. D'une part, le Procureur souligne que l'appelant doit prouver qu'il a exercé la diligence requise en première instance tant pour une demande d'ordonnance aux fins d'enquêtes en vertu des articles 54 et 107 (Requête du 10 avril 2006) que pour une demande de financement d'enquêtes complémentaires au stade de l'appel (présente Requête)[57]. Dès lors, la Décision du 12 septembre 2006 ayant rejeté la Requête du 10 avril 2006 au motif que l'appelant n'avait pas rapporté la preuve de l'exercice de la diligence requise, la Requête du 10 octobre 2006 devrait être rejetée sur le même fondement[58]. Le Procureur constate que l'Appelant se réfère dans les Requêtes des 10 octobre et 10 avril 2006 au même document – la Requête du 13 mai 2003 – pour démontrer les difficultés qu'il aurait rencontrées pendant son procès pour obtenir des éléments de preuve du Rwanda[59]. Le Procureur réitère que cette Requête du 13 mai 2003 tendait seulement à l'arrêt des procédures et non à l'assistance de la Chambre de première instance aux fins d'obtenir des éléments de preuve, et que la requête ne mentionnait pas spécifiquement l'enregistrement de l'interview du 24 avril 1994[60]. Le Procureur maintient que la Chambre d'appel a déjà pris ce document en compte dans sa Décision du 12 septembre 2006 et a refusé de le considérer comme démontrant l'exercice de la diligence requise de la part de l'Appelant[61].

20. D'autre part, le Procureur fait valoir que l'appelant n'a pas démontré l'existence de circonstances exceptionnelles justifiant le financement d'enquêtes supplémentaires en appel, dans la mesure où il n'a pas établi l'absence d'enquêtes complémentaires entraînerait un déni de justice[62]. A cet égard, le Procureur constate que s'il était fait droit à la requête de l'appelant, il s'engagerait dans une simple recherche à l'aveuglette – ce que, d'après lui, la Chambre d'appel a toujours refusé – puisque ce dernier ne peut même pas démontrer que l'intégralité de cette interview existe[63]. Il ajoute que la question de la nature incomplète de l'émission a été soulevée pendant le procès[64], que la Chambre de première instance était informée de la substance alléguée de l'intégralité de l'interview[65] et qu'elle a exercé son pouvoir discrétionnaire quant au poids à accorder à cet élément de preuve[66]. Dès lors, la communication de l'intégralité de l'interview n'apporterait rien de nouveau au contexte factuel de l'affaire et ne peut être qualifiée de circonstances exceptionnelles[67]. Le Procureur argue que l'appelant essaye de soulever la question de novo au stade de l'appel, ce qui n'est pas autorisé[68]. Enfin, il relève que l'Appelant n'a expliqué dans aucune de ses requêtes la raison pour laquelle il a attendu presque deux ans et demi depuis le Jugement pour introduire la Requête du 10 octobre 2006[69].

21. L'appelant réplique que les enquêtes envisagées par la Défense ne constituent pas des « fishing expeditions » puisqu'elles visent l'obtention d'un élément de preuve précisément identifié dont l'existence et le contenu ne sont pas contestés par le Procureur et dont les détenteurs sont connus[70]. Il maintient que la Défense a exercé la diligence requise en temps utile en ne cessant de réclamer la communication de l'intégralité de l'enregistrement chaque fois que l'occasion se présentait en première instance[71]. De manière générale, il fait valoir que le Procureur tente abusivement de s'opposer à la manifestation de la vérité, alors qu'il dispose de toutes les facilités nécessaires à Kigali, pour tenter d'obtenir la partie manquante de l'enregistrement[72].

Analyse

22. La Chambre d'appel rappelle que, par sa Décision du 12 septembre 2006, elle a rejeté la Requête du 10 avril 2006, au motif principal que l'appelant n'avait pas démontré qu'en dépit de l'exercice de la diligence requise, il n'avait pas réussi à obtenir l'enregistrement en question. Ce motif reposait sur la constatation que l'appelant : s'était limité, dans ses écrits, à dire que ses investigations « se seraient heurtées à l'obstruction des autorités rwandaises » ; n'avait donné aucun élément d'information sur les démarches concrètes qu'il aurait entreprises depuis le début de son procès en appel en vue de se procurer l'enregistrement litigieux ; et n'avait pas apporté non plus de preuve d'un manque de coopération de la part des autorités rwandaises en ce qui concerne l'accès aux archives dans lesquelles serait contenu l'enregistrement recherché[73]. Ayant été saisie d'une requête fondée sur les articles 54 et 107 du Règlement, la Chambre d'appel avait évalué la diligence exercée par l'appelant au stade de la procédure d'appel en examinant s'il avait entrepris des démarches concrètes depuis le début du procès en appel en vue d'obtenir la pièce litigieuse[74].

23. La Requête du 10 octobre 2006 vise l'autorisation d'une enquête complémentaire au stade de l'appel au titre de l'article 115 du Règlement. Dans ce cas, le requérant doit démontrer que la preuve recherchée était indisponible lors du procès en première instance, bien qu'il ait alors exercé la diligence requise[75]. La Chambre d'appel rappelle également que ce n'est que dans des circonstances exceptionnelles, qu'elle ordonnera au Greffe de prendre en charge les frais afférents aux enquêtes lors de la procédure d'appel. De telles circonstances pourront être constatées, par exemple, si la partie requérante établit qu'elle est en possession d'une information spécifique, qui n'était pas disponible au moment du procès et n'aurait pu être découverte malgré l'exercice de la diligence requise, nécessitant une enquête plus approfondie afin d'éviter un déni de justice[76]. Or, en l'espèce la Chambre d'appel considère que l'appelant n'a pas démontré qu'il existe de telles circonstances exceptionnelles justifiant l'autorisation de l'enquête sollicitée.

[64] Le Procureur rappelle que les circonstances dans lesquelles le Bureau du Procureur a obtenu l'émission et son admission comme pièce à conviction ont été données dans sa Réponse à la Requête du 10 avril 2006 (voir ibid., par. 10).
[65] Au soutien de cet argument, le Procureur cite le paragraphe 48 du Jugement (ibid., par. 13, note de bas de page 17).
[66] Ibid., par. 9 et 12. Le Procureur précise que l'Appelant a témoigné au sujet de la nature incomplète de l'émission en donnant sa version de la partie manquante (ibid., par.11).

24. Premièrement, le critère de l'indisponibilité de la pièce lors du procès en première instance et de diligence requise en vue de se la procurer, implique nécessairement que la partie en question doit démontrer avoir cherché à utiliser à bon escient tous les mécanismes de protection et de contrainte prévus par le Statut et le Règlement afin de pouvoir présenter les moyens de preuve à la Chambre de première instance[77]. A cet égard, la Chambre d'appel relève que l'appelant a effectué différentes démarches auprès des autorités rwandaises en 2000, 2001, 2002 et 2003 concernant un grand nombre d'éléments d'informations et de preuves auxquels il souhaitait accéder, sans pour autant introduire une demande spécifique concernant l'enregistrement litigieux[78]. Toutefois, la Chambre d'appel constate que même si l'appelant n'a pas expressément demandé à la Chambre de première instance d'ordonner aux autorités rwandaises de lui transmettre l'intégralité de l'enregistrement en question, il a cependant obtenu de la Chambre de première instance qu'elle requière la coopération du Rwanda, notamment en ce qui concerne l'accès aux

En outre, suite à d'autres démarches infructueuses auprès de ces mêmes autorités, l'appelant a sollicité, après la clôture des débats le 9 mai 2003, l'arrêt de la procédure engagée contre lui[80], demande rejetée par la Chambre de première instance au motif principal que les documents recherchés n'étaient pas précisément identifiés et que leur pertinence n'était pas démontrée[81]. Dans ces conditions, quand bien même la Chambre d'appel considère que les démarches de l'appelant en première instance manquaient de précision et de promptitude, elle est satisfaite que l'enregistrement en question était indisponible au procès en dépit de la diligence exercée à l'époque par l'appelant.

25. Toutefois, la Chambre d'appel n'est pas convaincue que l'appelant justifie de circonstances exceptionnelles permettant de faire droit à sa demande. En effet, l'appelant ne fait état d'aucune démarche ultérieure auprès des autorités rwandaises en vue d'obtenir l'enregistrement litigieux et ce n'est que le 10 avril 2006, soit presque deux ans après le dépôt de son Acte d'appel, qu'il a introduit sa première demande, depuis le prononcé du Jugement, visant à ordonner aux autorités rwandaises de transmettre l'intégralité de l'enregistrement en question. Au surplus, la Chambre d'appel relève que la Chambre de première instance était informée du caractère incomplet de l'enregistrement en question et que l'appelant a témoigné à ce sujet[82]. Cette même question est par ailleurs soulevée par l'appelant dans son Mémoire d'appel[83]. L'appelant, à qui il appartient de démontrer, dans le cadre de son appel au fond, que la Chambre de première instance aurait commis une erreur en admettant cette pièce au dossier et/ou en s'y appuyant dans le Jugement, se devait d'évaluer lors de la rédaction de son Acte d'appel et de son Mémoire d'appel l'intérêt de renouveler les démarches entreprises au procès en vue d'obtenir l'enregistrement litigieux. La Chambre d'appel réitère que la présente décision ne préjuge pas de son appréciation ultérieure au fond à ce sujet[84].

26. Par ailleurs, la Chambre d'appel ne voit pas en quoi les enquêtes nécessitent le déplacement au Rwanda du conseil principal, du co-conseil et d'un assistant pour obtenir une copie de l'enregistrement alors que l'Appelant se prévaut d'en connaître la source exacte et qu'il pourrait adresser sa demande aux détenteurs de celui-ci directement par voie écrite.

27. Au vu de ce qui précède, la Chambre d'appel est d'avis que l'appelant n'a pas établi l'existence de circonstances exceptionnelles justifiant l'assistance du Greffe en vue d'entamer, plus de deux ans et demi après le prononcé du Jugement, une enquête complémentaire au stade de l'appel.

IV. Dispositif

28. Par ces motifs, la Chambre d'appel ORDONNE, sous réserve de toute requête aux fins d'expurgation introduite dans les 14 jours par le Procureur, que le Greffe autorise l'appelant à avoir accès à l'accord de plaidoyer conclu dans l'affaire Serugendo et pour le reste REJETTE la Requête du 10 juillet 2006 et la Requête du 10 octobre 2006.

29. L'accord de plaidoyer conclu dans l'affaire Serugendo reste soumis aux mesures de protection adoptées par la Chambre de première instance[85]. En outre, l'Appelant, son Conseil et toute personne employée par la Défense qui, sur instruction ou sur autorisation dudit Conseil, demandent l'accès à des pièces confidentielles déposées en l'espèce, s'engagent à :

i) ne pas divulguer à un tiers, le nom des témoins, leurs coordonnées, les copies et le contenu de leurs déclarations, les comptes rendus et le contenu de leur témoignage en audience ou toute information qui permettrait de les identifier et violerait la confidentialité visée par les mesures de protection en vigueur, sauf nécessité absolue pour la préparation de la cause de l'Appelant, et avec l'autorisation préalable de la Chambre d'appel, ii) ne divulguer à un tiers aucun élément de preuve documentaire ou autre, ni le contenu, en tout ou en partie, de tout élément de preuve, déclaration ou témoignage préalables et confidentiels.

30. Si, pour les besoins de la préparation de la cause de l'appelant, une pièce confidentielle est communiquée à des tiers dans le respect des conditions prescrites à l'alinéa (i), toute personne à laquelle est communiquée ladite pièce en l'espèce doit être informée qu'elle a l'interdiction de copier, reproduire ou publier, en tout ou en partie, toute pièce confidentielle, ou de la communiquer à toute autre personne ; en outre, si une personne a reçu ladite pièce, elle devra la restituer à l'appelant ou à son Conseil dès qu'elle n'en aura plus besoin pour la préparation de la cause du l'appelant.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA ("Tribunal"),

SITTING as Trial Chamber II, composed of Judge Khalida Rachid Khan, Presiding, Judge Lee Gacuiga Muthoga and Judge Emile Francis Short (the "Trial Chamber");

BEING SEIZED of the "Decision on Prosecution Appeal of Witness Protection Measures", as rendered by the Appeals Chamber on 16 November 2005, in which the Appeals Chamber remitted the Impugned Decisions for reconsideration;

RECALLING that on 4 July 2005, the Prosecution filed its motion, pursuant to Rule 73 (B) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the Tribunal ("Rules") for certification to appeal a holding – repeated verbatim in each of the Impugned Decisions – that restricts disclosure of information pertaining to the identity of a protected witness to members of the "immediate Prosecution team" and not to anyone else within the Office of the Prosecutor;[1]

RECALLING that on 28 September 2005, the Chamber rendered its decision on the Prosecution's motion for certification, granting certification of the interlocutory appeal pursuant to Rule 73 (B);[2]

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA ("Tribunal"),

SITTING as Trial Chamber II, composed of Judge Khalida Rachid Khan, presiding, Judge Lee Gacuiga Muthoga and Judge Emile Francis Short (the "Trial Chamber");

BEING SEIZED of a Defence Oral Motion to reconsider the Oral Ruling of 1 June 2005;[1]

RECALLING the oral submissions of the Parties made in court on 31 October 2005, on which the Chamber reserved a ruling;[2]

THE CHAMBER now reconsiders its Decision.

Background

1. The Chamber ruled that the issue as to who was responsible for the shooting down of the plane was not before it. Moreover, Dr. Des Forges had not discussed the matter in her book or in her expert report. Consequently, the Chamber ruled that the question put to Dr. Des Forges was irrelevant.[3]

2. The Defence for Justin Mugenzi, as well as the other Defence teams, requests the Chamber to review this Decision, and indicates that it may call a witness to present evidence regarding responsibility for the shooting down of the plane.[4]

3. Whilst opposing the Motion, the Prosecution accepted that it would be proper for the Chamber to reconsider the Oral Ruling of 1 June 2005, since this issue was likely to recur several times in the presentation of the Defence cases.

4. Mr. Mugenzi argues that evidence regarding the matter is relevant. If it is shown that the Accused were not responsible for the downing of the President's plane, this evidence would negate the Prosecution's assertion that the Accused were involved in a plan to commit genocide, formulated prior to 6 April 1994, since the unfolding of the alleged plan would have been triggered by an event outside of their control.

5. The Defence for Mugiraneza adds that such evidence would have a bearing on the credibility of Prosecution witnesses who have testified about the commencement of the massacres.

6. The Defence for Bizimungu raises several points in support of the contention that evidence on the shooting down of the President's plane is relevant: first, the evidence would have a bearing on the state of mind of the Government Ministers at the time; second, the evidence would show whether the government was in control of the situation in Rwanda; third, the evidence would demonstrate whether the Rwandan state had disintegrated and whether the Rwandan government was in control of the military situation; and fourth, the evidence would indicate why roadblocks were established in Rwanda. Finally, it is important to hear this evidence because it shows that the shooting down of the plane is the event most responsible for exacerbating ethnic tension in Rwanda at the time.

7. The Prosecution's main submission is that the responsibility for the shooting down of the plane is irrelevant to the charges against the Accused. Whilst the downing of the plane may have been the "trigger" for the ensuing massacres, the conspiracy was independent of that event. To that extent, the Indictment does not charge the Accused with responsibility for the downing of the plane, and it does not seek to attribute responsibility for this incident to the Accused.

Deliberations

8. The Chamber has reviewed the jurisprudence of the Tribunal on this issue. Several cases have allowed limited questioning on the issue of responsibility for the shooting down of the President's plane. In the case of Bagosora et al., Judge Williams presiding, Trial Chamber III ruled that although the responsibility for the shooting down of the plane fell outside of the mandate of the Tribunal, there may be some relevance to a line of questioning based on this event, provided that it does not extend into great detail.[5] Later in the same case, Judge Møse presiding (following a change in the composition of the bench), the Chamber allowed the Defence to question Prosecution Witness General Romeo Dallaire on the shooting down of the plane.[6] In the same case, Defence Witness Dr. Helmut Strizek also testified about this issue.[7] In Ntagerura et al., Trial Chamber III ruled that the report and testimony of a proposed expert witness dealing with the responsibility for the shooting down of the plane would not aid the Chamber in considering any issue clearly relevant to the trial.[8] In the case of Nyiramasuhuko et al., Trial Chamber II ruled, in response to an objection from the Prosecution on the relevance of the line of questioning relating to the shooting down of the plane, that the Defence could, during cross-examination of Prosecution witnesses, "put their case" to the witness "without unnecessary details".[9] In line with that ruling, the same Chamber allowed, without objection, several questions on the assassination of the President to be addressed to Prosecution Expert Witness André Guichaoua.[10] More recently, Trial Chamber III in Karemera et al. dealt with the issue by stating that the charges against the Accused are not based on any alleged responsibility of the Accused in the assassination of President Habyarimana. Furthermore, the Chamber stated that it could not relieve any of the government Ministers in that case of his alleged individual criminal responsibility for international crimes committed in Rwanda during 1994.[11]

9. In the Chamber's view, the charges in the Indictment are not based upon any alleged responsibility or involvement of the Accused in the shooting down of the President's plane. The Chamber notes the Prosecution's submissions that > "[…] we can admit as Prosecutors that we are not charging and we are not holding and we are not alleging that the accused persons have anything to do with the shooting down of the plane".

10. The potential involvement or responsibility of the RPF or other forces not associated with the government of Rwanda cannot relieve the Accused of responsibility for the crimes they have been charged with. The Chamber is of the opinion that evidence as to who is responsible for the crash of the President's plane would not assist the Chamber in its decision as to the guilt or innocence of the Accused.

11. Nonetheless, the Chamber reiterates that the Defence is entitled to put its case in whatever way it deems to be most appropriate, providing that the evidence is relevant to the charges against the Accused. The jurisprudence of the Tribunal shows that questions relating to the responsibility for the shooting down of the plane may be put to a witness provided that this line of questioning does not go into great detail.

THEREFORE THE CHAMBER

DENIES the Motion for Reconsideration; and AFFIRMS its Oral Decision of 1 June 2005.

NOW DECIDES the matter solely on the basis of the briefs of the parties pursuant to Rule 73 (A).

Submissions of the Parties

The Defence Motion

1. The Defence prays for certification to appeal the Trial Chamber's Decision on Defence Motions Pursuant to Rule 98 bis ("the Decision"). The Defence's application for certification is limited to the Chamber's findings and decision in respect of Count 9 of the Indictment which charges the Accused with Serious Violations of Article 3 Common to the Geneva Conventions and Additional Protocol II.[1]

[1] Article 4 of the Statute [in relevant part] provides:
"The International Tribunal for Rwanda shall have the power to prosecute persons committing or ordering to be committed serious violations of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 for the Protection of War Victims, and of Additional Protocol II thereto of 8 June 1977. These violations shall include, but shall not be limited to:
Violence to life, health and physical or mental well-being of persons, in particular murder as well as cruel treatment such as torture, mutilation or any form of corporal punishment;

The Defence had argued that the Prosecution had failed to adduce evidence on a necessary element of the offence alleged in Count 9, namely that the armed conflict must be of a non-international character. According to the Defence, the Chamber accepted both that this was a necessary element to prove, and that the Chamber would not take judicial notice of this fact which must be borne out through evidence.

2. The Defence submits that the Chamber's Decision on Count 9 is flawed. It points to the Chamber's conclusion that:

> The Conflict was between Government forces and the Rwandan Patriotic Front ("the RPF"), which consisted of Rwandan refugees, seeking to exercise their right of return.

The Defence contends that the Chamber failed to properly consider its Rule 98 bis submissions in respect of this point. It points to a lack of footnotes referring to the evidence in support of the Chamber's conclusion. Furthermore, the terms "Rwandan refugees", and "right of return" remain undefined by the Chamber. According to the Defence, the Chamber does not demonstrate in the Decision that it dealt with the Defence's submissions on the insufficiency of evidence on the nature of the conflict, nor their contention that the "principal Prosecution expert witness" Dr. Alison Des Forges herself expressed doubt as to whether the war was international or non-international in character. Thus, the Chamber did not take into account all the matters that it should have done when reaching its decision, which is therefore flawed with respect to Count 9.

3. The Defence submits that the Chamber should allow an interlocutory appeal on this issue, since it has demonstrated that all of the criteria under Rule 73 (B) have been met. In particular, the Defence submits that a determination of this issue by the Appeals Chamber:

(i) Would significantly affect the fair and expeditious conduct of the proceedings;
(ii) Would shorten the length and expense of the trial, as the Defence currently intends to call an expert witness to testify on the character of the armed conflict;
(iii) Would significantly affect the outcome of the trial. A successful appeal would see Count 9 resolved in favour of the Defendant and therefore not require him to answer to a charge for which there is insufficient evidence; and
(iv) May materially advance the proceedings given that an appellate determination at this stage would negate the need for any defence evidence or submissions in respect of this count.

The Prosecution Response

4. The Prosecution submits that the Defence has not shown that the Trial Chamber erred in the exercise of its discretion in finding in the Decision that the Prosecution had adduced evidence "to avert an acquittal beyond the balance of probabilities (the appropriate burden of proof for the purposes of Rule 98 bis)" against the Accused in respect of Count 9 of the Indictment.[2]

5. The Prosecution further submits that, in deciding whether to grant certification or not, the Trial Chamber exercises a discretionary power. The Defence fails to meet the criteria set down in Rule 73 (B), as the certification sought will not affect the fair and expeditious conduct of the proceedings, and may not affect the outcome of the trial. Therefore the application should fail.

Deliberations

6. The Chamber has reservations as to whether a Rule 98 bis "Judgement of Acquittal" is the proper subject of an interlocutory appeal under Rule 73 (B), which deals with interlocutory appeals from "decisions". Although the Appeals Chamber has in the past entertained an interlocutory appeal under Rule 73 (B) from a Rule 98 bis decision without comment,[3] in that case the correct Rule under which to appeal was not in issue. There is precedent at Trial Chamber level for denying such requests made under Rule 73 (B).[4] Nonetheless, the Parties in this case implicitly agree that a "Judgement of Acquittal" pursuant to Rule 98 bis is a "decision" which can be the subject of an interlocutory appeal.[5] Given that there is little authority on the matter, and that it was not specifically argued in this case, the Trial Chamber is prepared to consider the merits of the application.

[2] Response, para. 8.

7. Rule 73 (B) reads as follows:

> Decisions rendered on such motions are without interlocutory appeal save with certification by the Trial Chamber, which may grant such certification if the decision involves an issue that would significantly affect the fair and expeditious conduct of the proceedings or the outcome of the trial, and for which, in the opinion of the Trial Chamber, an immediate resolution by the Appeals Chamber may materially advance the proceedings.

8. The Chamber will consider the submissions relating to the first condition for certification and decide if the "decision involves an issue that would significantly affect the fair and expeditious conduct of the proceedings or the outcome of the trial" (the "first limb"). If the first limb is met, the Chamber will then consider whether "an immediate resolution by the Appeals Chamber may materially advance the proceedings" (the "second limb"). This is the procedure that the Trial Chamber has followed in previous decisions in this case.[6]

9. The issue the Defence wishes to appeal is the part of the Decision denying the Defence Motion for Acquittal under Rule 98 bis on Count 9 of the Indictment. Conceivably, a successful appeal on this issue may significantly affect the fair and expeditious conduct of the proceedings, since it could result in the acquittal of the Accused on Count 9 of the Indictment, which in turn would obviate the need for the Accused to present evidence on this charge. Thus, the application meets the requirements of the first limb.

10. Having regard to the stage the trial has reached and the uncertainty as to when the Appeals Chamber would determine the interlocutory appeal, the Trial Chamber is not convinced that an immediate resolution by the Appeals Chamber may materially advance the proceedings. The second limb is therefore not met.

11. While the language used in the Rule 98 bis Decision suggests that the Chamber has made a final determination about the non-international nature of the conflict, this is not what was intended. It would be recalled that the Chamber, throughout its Rule 98 bis Decision, referred to the test under Rule 98 bis, which involves a determination, by the Trial Chamber, that there is sufficient evidence upon the basis of which a reasonable trier of fact could find that the Prosecution has met its evidentiary threshold with respect to the particular element of the offence in question. The Chamber observes that the issue is still open and the Defence is at liberty to present evidence on the matter. The parties may then address the issue in their final submissions and the Chamber will make a final determination of the issue when it delivers its final Judgment.

CONSIDERING the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules"), particularly Rules 72, 73, and 98 bis;

NOW DECIDES the matter solely on the basis of the briefs of the parties pursuant to Rules 72 (A) (ii), 72 (G), and 73 (A).

Submissions of the Parties

The Defence Request

1. The Defence asks the Chamber to declare that joint and criminal liability is not a form of liability in the charges against Mr. Bicamumpaka pursuant to rule 73.[1] The Defence notes that Chambers have previously relied on this rule to make declarations clarifying ambiguities, and asks the Chamber to resolve the ambiguity in the case at hand over whether Joint and Criminal Enterprise (JCE) was pleaded.[2]

2. The Defence submits that JCE must be explicitly pleaded in the Indictment, including the specific type of JCE alleged. The Defence cites a decision from the case of Čermak and Markač, which held that the Indictment must specify the following four categories of material facts related to JCE: (a) the nature and purpose of the JCE; (b) the time at which or the period over which the JCE is said to have existed; (c) the identity of those engaged in the JCE; and (d) the nature of the participation by the Accused in the JCE.[3] The Defence submits that the Prosecution has provided none of the above, which, if JCE were allowed to be pleaded, would violate the Accused right to a fair trial.

3. The Defence also submits that references made to JCE in the Pre-trial Brief do not cure the lack of pleading in the Indictment, as the only proper charging document is the Indictment.[4] In support, the Defence cites Krnojelać, in which the Appeals Chamber considered JCE as it was pled in the Indictment, but refused to consider Type III JCE as it was only included in the Pre-trial Brief.[5] Lastly, the Defence states the prejudice to the Accused is compounded by references in the Pre-trial Brief to the previously rejected Proposed Amended Indictment.

[1] Rule 73 (A) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence provides: "Subject to Rule 72, either party may move before a Trial Chamber for appropriate ruling or relief after the initial appearance of the accused. The Trial Chamber, or a Judge designated by the Chamber from among its members, may rule on such motions based solely on the briefs of the parties, unless it is decided to hear the Motion in open Court."

[2] See the five decisions listed in the Defence Request, footnotes 2, 3, and 4. These decisions are discussed in the Deliberations of this Decision.

[3] Prosecutor v. Čermak and Markač, Case N°IT-03-73, "Decision on the Defence Motion on the Form of the Indictment", 8 March 2005, para. 9, citing Krnojelać, "Decision on Preliminary Motion on Form of Amended Indictment", 11 February 2000, para. 16.

[4] For this, the Defence cites Prosecutor v. Krnojelać, Case N°IT-97-25-A, "Appeals Chamber Judgement", 17 September 2003, para. 138, and the plain meaning of Rule 98 bis. Rule 98 bis allows the Trial Chamber to find that the evidence is insufficient to sustain a conviction on one or more of the counts charged in the indictment (emphasis added).

[5] Krnojelać, 17 September 2003, paras. 142-144.

The Defence Support

4. In the Support, Defence Counsel for Mr. Bizimungu reiterates many of the arguments made in Mr. Bicamumpaka's Request, submitting that the Indictment lacks the precision to support a charge of JCE; that, according to Kupreskić, the Accused must be clearly informed of the charges against him.[6] The Defence argues that the absence of reference to JCE in the Indictment in the case at hand does not constitute a mere imprecision, a minor defect or a technical imperfection, but amounts to the Accused being insufficiently informed of the case he must meet. The Defence notes further that the specific type of JCE was not specified, and argues that the Pre-trial Brief cannot be used to correct deficiencies in the Indictment. The Defence therefore asks the Chamber, in the interests of efficiency, for a declaratory ruling on this issue.

The Prosecution's Consolidated Response

5. In response, the Prosecution submits that the Chamber lacks jurisdiction to rely on Rule 73 in this context, as Rule 73 offers an administrative remedy, inappropriate for a substantive criminal issue. Although Rule 72 (A) is the appropriate rule for such an application, the Defence is estopped from relying on this rule, as pursuant to Rule 72 (G), the Defence has failed to raise any objections to the Indictment in the given time. The Prosecution submits further that the earlier Rule 98 bis application was the correct rule on which to decide this issue, and therefore, that the Defence is attempting to circumvent the legal process as defined under the Rules.

6. In the alternative, and without prejudice to the foregoing, the Prosecution submits that JCE was alleged in the Indictment through the charges and underlying facts;[7] and in fact, that JCE is an implicit mode of responsibility in the charges of Conspiracy and Complicity to Commit Genocide.[8] Further, the Prosecution argues that it has satisfied the four necessary criteria of material facts related to JCE to be specified in the Indictment,[9] namely the nature and purpose of the JCE, the period over which the JCE existed, the identity of those engaged, and Accused participation in the JCE.[10]

7. Further, the Prosecution notes that in Simić, a failure to plead the four material criteria results in "no injustice to the accused if he is given an adequate opportunity to prepare an effective defence."[11] The Prosecution submits that the Accused was given notice of a pleading of JCE: in the Pre-trial Brief; in the explicit reference in the Prosecution's opening address; in the evidence presented at trial; and in the arguments put forward in the Prosecutor's Rule 98 bis response. The Accused, therefore, had adequate opportunity to prepare an effective defence.

8. The Prosecution challenges the Defence's contention that JCE must be expressly pled in the Indictment, including that the type of JCE be specified, citing various ICTY jurisprudence which support a lesser burden of specificity.[12] The Prosecution also challenges the Defence's submission that [7] The Prosecution lists paragraphs in the Indictment which make reference to JCE in both footnote 10 and paragraph 18.

[8] Namely that implicit in the charge of Conspiracy to Commit Genocide is the notion of concerted action, or joint criminal enterprise, meaning at least two persons sharing a common plan or purpose, and that implicit in the charge of Complicity to Commit Genocide is the participation of at least two persons acting in concert. For more detail, see the arguments made in the Consolidated Response, paras. 20-22.
[9] For this test, the Defence cited Čermak and Markač, 8 March 2005; the Prosecution cited Prosecutor v. Simić, Case N°IT-95-9-T, (TC), 17 October 2003, para. 145.

the Pre-trial Brief cannot be used to put the Accused on notice, citing two ICTY judgements which have held that it can.[13]

9. For the reasons above, the Prosecution asks that JCE be admissible as a mode of a liability, and that the applications be dismissed in their entirety.

The Defence Reply

10. In reply, the Defence for Mr. Bizimungu insists that the Request is based on Rule 73 (A) and Rule 54, not Rule 72 as the Prosecution suggests, and that the Chamber is competent to rule on such matters. The Defence is asking for a declaration in the interests of judicial efficiency.

11. On the merits of the request, the Defence reiterates their arguments that the Indictment must be precise, and that the type of JCE must be pled. The Defence further submits that the Prosecution has:

i. given an erroneous interpretation of the Kupreskić precedent;
ii. confused Conspiracy and Complicity to Commit Genocide with JCE;
iii. focussed on ICTY case law, when ICTR case law is more on point; and has
iv. exaggerated the ease with which Pre-trial Briefs can be considered to correct flaws in Indictments.

Deliberations

12. The Chamber has strong reservations on whether an alleged ambiguity or defect in the Indictment is the proper subject for an application pursuant to Rules 54 and 73. The Defence's intention to rely on Rule 54 is only briefly mentioned in the final Reply, and the Chamber finds that this Rule is in a "Pre-Trial Proceedings" section of the Rules, and is intended for less legally substantive matters, such as summonses, subpoenas, and transfer orders.[14]

13. Regarding the Chambers' competence to rule on such a matter under Rule 73, the Defence cited a number of decisions in support of this proposition in its initial Request. The Chamber notes, however, that Rule 73 operates in these decisions in two contexts, either to determine the relationship between the Statute and the Regulations,[15] or to determine the scope of authority exercised by various organs or functionaries.[16] Although one of the five decisions cited by the Defence, Blaškić, dealt with an alleged defect in the Indictment, the reliance on Rule 73 was dismissed as the matter had already been decided in its "Decision on the Defence Motion to dismiss the Indictment based upon Defects in the Form Thereof", which appears to have been brought on the basis of Rule 72.[17]

[14] Rule 54 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence provides: "At the request of either party or proprio motu, a Judge or a Trial Chamber may issue such orders, summonses, subpoenas, warrants and transfer orders as may be necessary for the purposes of an investigation or for the preparation or conduct of the trial."

Blaskić*, Case N°IT-95-14, "Decision on the Defence Motion to dismiss the Indictment based upon Defects in the Form Thereof", 4 April 1997.

14. This Chamber finds, therefore, that the legal mechanism for raising the issue at bar is not Rule 73. Alleged defects in the Indictment can be raised either as preliminary motions under Rule 72 (A) (ii), or as part of a Motion for Judgement of Acquittal under Rule 98 bis.

15. Rule 72 (A) (ii) provides:

> Preliminary motions, being motions which:
>
> (…)
>
> (ii) allege defects in the form of the Indictment;
>
> shall be in writing and be brought not later than thirty days after disclosure to the Defence of all material and statements referred to in Rule 66 (A) (i) and shall be disposed of not later than sixty days after they were filed and before the commencement of the opening statements provided for in Rule 84.

16. Pursuant to Rule 72 (G), a failure to comply with the time limits prescribed in the rule constitutes a waiver of the right to lodge a motion; however, a Trial Chamber may allow a late submission should good cause be shown. The Chamber notes that the Defence Request was submitted almost a year and a half after the commencement of opening statements on 29 March 2004, and that there have been no submissions on the issue of good cause for delay.

17. Regarding the other method for raising alleged defects in the Indictment, Rule 98 bis, the Chamber notes that such a Motion has already been brought and decided in this case. The Chamber refers the Defence to the earlier 22 November 2005 "Decision on Defence Motions pursuant to Rule 98 bis".

18. Therefore, the Chamber is of the view that Rule 73 is an inappropriate mechanism for such a Request, Rule 72 is time barred, and that a Rule 98 bis application has already been adjudicated. The parties may raise this issue during their final submissions at the end of the case.

FOR THE FOREGOING REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the Defence Request for a declaration that the Indictment does not allege liability for joint criminal enterprise (JCE).

SITTING as Trial Chamber II, composed of Judge Khalida Rachid Khan, presiding, Judge Lee Gacuiga Muthoga and Judge Emile Francis Short (the "Trial Chamber");

BEING SEIZED of "Prosper Mugiraneza's Emergency Motion to Vary Conditions on Interview of Jean Kambanda", filed on 20 March 2006 (the "Motion");

CONSIDERING the "Prosecutor's Response to Prosper Mugiraneza's Motion to Vary Conditions on Interview of Jean Kambanda", filed on 24 March 2006 (the "Response");

RECALLING the "Decision on Prosper Mugiraneza's Motion to Vary the Restrictions in the Trial Chamber's Decision of 2 October 2003 related to Jean Kambanda", dated 24 August 2004 (the "Order of 24 August 2004"), and the "Decision on Prosper Mugiraneza's Extremely Urgent Motion to Vary Conditions of Interview with Jean Kambanda", dated 19 January 2005;

NOW DECIDES the matter solely on the basis of the briefs of the parties pursuant to Rule 73 (A).

Submissions

1. The Defence requests the Chamber to vary its Order of 24 August 2004 which allowed Mugiraneza's Counsel to interview Jean Kambanda in the presence of a Registry representative. It submits the requirement that a representative of the Registry be present at such interview is no longer needed, as the Prosecution has concluded its case without calling Kambanda as a witness. Furthermore, the Defence states that Kambanda is unwilling to be interviewed in the presence of a representative of the Registry. According to the Defence, Kambanda is presently residing in the United Nations Detention Facility in Arusha awaiting to testify in another case presently being heard by the Tribunal. The Defence claims that other Defence Counsel may freely interview Jean Kambanda, but Mugiraneza's Counsel may not, due to the restrictions imposed by the Order of 24 August 2004.

2. The Prosecution submits that the Defence Motion "lacks a legal basis" to request the Chamber to vary its previous order. The Prosecution argues that the restriction was based upon a suggestion of the Defence and the conditions for that restriction were intended to be fair to both parties.

Deliberations

3. In its Order of 24 August 2004, the Chamber stated that

> "as suggested by the Defence and in order to avoid any possible allegation of improper conduct against any party involved in this process, the Trial Chamber is of the view that this interview shall take place in the presence of a neutral and third party, namely a representative of the Registrar."[1]

Save for these restrictions, the Defence would be free to interview Jean Kambanda on terms acceptable to him.

4. The concern facing the Chamber before it handed down its Order was that had the Defence been allowed unrestricted access to Kambanda, and had he then refused to testify for the Prosecution, the Defence may have exposed itself to allegations of improper conduct. The Decision of the Chamber was intended to prevent such allegations. The Prosecution case has closed and Jean Kambanda did not testify as a Prosecution Witness. Thus, the aforementioned considerations informing the Chamber's Order of 24 August 2004 are no longer relevant.

5. Accordingly, the Chamber finds the requirement that a representative of the Registry be present at the interview is no longer necessary.

FOR THE FOREGOING REASONS, THE CHAMBER

GRANTS the Defence Motion in the following terms only:

REMOVES the requirement that a representative of the Registry be present at the interview of Jean Kambanda by Counsel for Mugiraneza;

REQUESTS the Registrar to make arrangements as soon as is practicable to facilitate the interview of Jean Kambanda by Counsel for Mugiraneza, if Jean Kambanda is so disposed.

NOW DECIDES the matter solely on the basis of the briefs of the Defence and the Registrar pursuant to Rule 73 (A).

Submissions of the Parties

The Motion

1. On 19 April 2006, Counsel for Mugiraneza filed a Strictly Confidential Ex Parte Emergency Motion to seal a Decision issued by the Deputy Registrar following an appeal by Defence Counsel to have an administrative decision pertaining to his legal assistant, Ms Cline, revisited. The Deputy Registrar's Decision on the said appeal was filed as a public document, and it is that classification of the filing that is the subject of the instant application.

2. The Motion is premised on grounds that matters relating to a person's health and finances are protected and therefore should not have been publicly disseminated.

3. In his submissions relating to Ms Cline's financial affairs, Counsel states that the Registrar

> "…has seen fit to put Mugiraneza's legal assistant's financial matters literally on the street. Anyone with a computer and a modem will be able to access personal financial information. One hopes that this was a mistake rather than a deliberate attempt to embarrass a member of a defence team."

4. As a footnote on the same point, Counsel goes on to say that

> "[s]tated differently, undersigned counsel hopes that the Deputy Registrar acted without thinking rather than filing the decision as a public document with malice aforethought. It is unthinkable that the Deputy Registrar acted deliberately to embarrass Ms. Cline. If he in fact acted deliberately, it should be considered outrageous conduct."

5. With regard to the publication of Ms Cline's "medical status", Counsel states that

> "[t]he Deputy Registrar's decision also contains information about Ms. Cline's health and an illness she suffered. Information about a person's medical status should be kept confidential by the Tribunal."

6. In addition to the sealing of the Deputy Registrar's Decision, Counsel seeks eight different Orders from the Chamber. Each of those Orders seeks to ensure that any and all matters pertaining to the Deputy Registrar's Decision and the instant Motion be treated as confidential.

The Registrar's Response

7. The Registrar invites the Chamber to examine the Decision of the Deputy Registrar and submits that in respect of the "legal assistant's financial matters", there is almost no information coming within such a description. The Registrar adds that while there is a reference to the DSA rate common to all such assistants, this is information that applies to all staff and contractors and is therefore publicly available. The only other financial information in the impugned Decision is that of two different quotations for an airline ticket, which the Registrar contends do not come within the description of the "legal assistant's financial matters". It is submitted that if any information had been given that related to the legal assistant's personal income or expenditure, these might have been considered to be protected.

8. With regard to the purported publication of "…information about Ms. Cline's health and an illness", the Registrar submits that this must be judged by what is actually in the public Decision. The Decision refers to a two day illness of an unspecified character at an unspecified date. It is submitted that this does not come within the description offered by Counsel.

9. The Registrar further notes that Counsel for Mugiraneza should have sought to discuss the matter with the Deputy Registrar before filing the instant Motion. The Registrar states that had that been done, the Deputy Registrar would have been glad to oblige him with a changed and re-classified filing. Indeed, the re-classification of the public document was requested by the Deputy Registrar immediately the Motion was brought to his attention. The Deputy Registrar emphasises that this would have been done had Counsel simply discussed this matter with him.

10. The Registrar's Response also records the latter's dismay at the language and tenor employed by Counsel in the instant Motion. With regard to the allegation of the Defence that the Deputy Registrar might have acted "without thinking", "with malice aforethought" or "deliberately to embarrass" the legal assistant in his team, the Deputy Registrar assures the Chamber that he remains motivated by the highest regard for all counsel who appear before the Tribunal.

11. Finally, the Registrar submits that the Motion filed by Counsel for Mugiraneza seeks to encourage the Trial Chamber to intervene in respect of an administrative matter and to issue orders to the Registry. The Rules of the Tribunal make provision for review by the Chambers of certain decisions of the Registry if the issues impact on the right of the accused to a fair trial and the duty of the Trial Chamber to do justice in a case. In the jurisprudence of the ad hoc tribunals, if there is a substantive right of an accused implicated in a Registry decision, then the Chamber can intervene. The Registrar contends that it is not immediately apparent what fair trial issue or what right of an accused is at issue here.

Deliberations

12. As a preliminary point, the Chamber notes that the Decision which is the subject of the present Motion has been withdrawn from the public domain and reclassified as confidential. In effect, this means that the principal relief being sought in the present application has been granted so that it is moot for the purposes of this decision.

13. Be that as it may, the Chamber has examined the Deputy Registrar's Decision so as to determine whether or not matters which should have been treated as confidential were published, thereby violating Ms Cline's right to privacy.

14. On the issue of the publication of medical information, the Deputy Registrar's Decision says nothing more than that Ms Cline was ill for two days and as consultants are paid only for the days they actually work, Ms Cline will not be paid Daily Subsistence Allowance (DSA) for that period. The Chamber does not consider this statement to be a breach of Ms Cline's right to privacy.

15. On the issue of "financial information", the Deputy Registrar's Decision refers to a number of points relating to payments of DSA and reimbursement for airline tickets. The Chamber notes that the Daily Subsistence Allowance for any duty station/location is determined and periodically reviewed by the International Civil Service Commission, and is publicly available in much the same way as salary scales of United Nations staff members are easily available and accessible to anyone. The other "financial" matter that is referred to is the cost of Ms Cline's airline ticket from Amsterdam to Houston. The Chamber notes that like DSA, the cost of an airline ticket is not protected, confidential information. The Chamber finds that the Deputy Registrar's Decision makes no mention of Ms. Cline's personal income or expenditure so as to violate her right to privacy.

16. Having carefully examined the Deputy Registrar's Decision in light of the allegations made by the Defence, and having found no violation of Ms Cline's right to privacy nor impropriety in the conduct of Deputy Registrar, and having regard to the fact that the latter's decision has in fact been reclassified, the Chamber finds it unnecessary to discuss or comment on the other reliefs sought and considers them to be superfluous to the present application.

17. Finally, the Chamber also notes with concern the harsh and inappropriate language that Defence Counsel used in his Motion. The Chamber recalls that in respect of a different issue, this Chamber had issued a Decision in which Parties were reminded of the obligation to "conduct themselves in a manner befitting their respective roles."[1] The Chamber finds it necessary to remind Counsel of that advice. Counsel are exhorted to exercise restraint and caution in their choice of language when filing applications before this Chamber.

Submissions

2. The Defence requests, pursuant to Rules 69 and 75, that the Chamber cancels the Witness Protection Orders for Witnesses WDA, WAG, and WDP. It informs the Chamber that these witnesses wish to testify under their own names, and have no fear of reprisals.[1]

Deliberations

4. The Witness Protection Orders, which presently remain in force, granted Protected Witness status to all potential Defence Witnesses for Casimir Bizimungu nominated to the Victims and Witnesses Support Unit in the proper format. The Defence is aware that cancellation of the Witness Protection Orders for these three witnesses means that the Tribunal will not be responsible for their safety.

5. In the determination of protective measures for victims and witnesses, the Trial Chamber may consult the Victims and Witnesses Support Unit. The Victims and Witnesses Support Unit is a unit of the Registry, under the overall authority of the Registrar. The Chamber invited the Registrar to make submissions on the matter. NOW DECIDES the matter solely on the basis of the briefs of the parties, pursuant to Rule 73 (A).

Introduction

1. The Defence Motion concerns the ambit of protective measures ordered with respect to Prosecution witnesses in the Decision of this Chamber of 22 September 2000.[1] Firstly, the Defence seeks to clarify whether or not it is permitted to communicate certain information[2] falling within the scope of those protective measures orders to expert witnesses it proposes to call. Secondly, and relying upon Rule 54 of the Rules, if the Chamber is of the view that the communication of information falling within the scope of those orders, to proposed Defence experts, is prohibited by its Decision of 22 September 2000, the Defence seeks an order permitting it to communicate the said information to proposed expert witnesses. In support of its Motion, the Defence proposes to have each prospective expert witness swear an affidavit containing a confidentiality clause, which it would file with the Registry, prior to disclosing any protected information to him or her. Annexed to the Motion is a sample of that affidavit.

2. On 22 August 2006 – some three months out of time – the Prosecution filed a Response, seeking the Chamber's leave for its submissions to be considered out of time, and opposing the Defence Motion. The Defence replied to the Prosecution Response, submitting that the Prosecution should not be granted leave to respond out of time, and rebutting the substance of the Prosecution's arguments.

3. As a preliminary matter, therefore, the Chamber must determine whether or not to grant the Prosecution leave to respond out of time. The Chamber will then go on to consider the merits of the Defence Motion.

Deliberations

Preliminary Issue – Filing of Prosecution Response Out of Time

4. The Prosecution submits that its omission to respond within the time frame stipulated by the Rules (5 days) was due to inadvertence. It submits that the Chamber has inherent jurisdiction to consider a response filed out of time and, furthermore, that in light of the issue under consideration in this case, it is in the interests of justice for it to do so.

5. The Defence submits that the Prosecution has not advanced sufficient grounds for its failure to respond to the Defence Motion for a period in excess of three months. In the Defence's view, simple oversight is insufficient to justify such a long delay. The Defence notes that the Motion was sent, by email, to eight members of the Prosecution's team, and submits that any grant, by this Chamber, of an extension of time, in circumstances where there has been such a long delay, is an undesirable precedent to set.

6. Rule 73 of the Rules requires a responding party to file a response within five days of receipt of the Motion. The Chamber does, however, have an inherent jurisdiction to consider submissions filed outside that time limit. Whilst the length of the delay and the reasons advanced for that delay are relevant considerations to an exercise of its inherent jurisdiction, the Chamber considers that these factors are not uniquely determinative of the case at hand. This Tribunal is vested with unique powers and responsibilities with regard to the protection of victims and witnesses – notably, by Article 21 of the Statute, and by Rules 69 and 75 of the Rules, which provisions must be read in the context of fundamental guarantees to the Accused. Although the Chamber is concerned at the length of the Prosecution's delay in responding to the Defence Motion, and its oversight with respect to a Motion seeking to clarify or vary the protective measures in place for its witnesses, the Chamber considers it to be in the interests of justice to consider the Prosecution's submissions on such an important issue. The Chamber therefore grants the Prosecution leave to respond out of time, and accordingly considers all of the submissions before it with respect to this issue.

Merits of Defence Motion

7. The relevant protective measures in place for Prosecution witnesses, as ordered by this Chamber in its Decision of 22 September 2000, are as follows:

- The Defence and the Accused are prohibited from sharing, revealing or discussing, directly or indirectly, any documents or any information contained in any documents, or any other information which could reveal or lead to the identification of any individuals so designated to any person or entity other than the Accused, assigned Counsel or other persons working on the immediate Defence team;
- The Defence is required to designate to the Chamber and the Prosecutor all persons working on the immediate Defence team who would have access to any names, addresses, whereabouts and/or other identifying information of persons falling within the ambit of the orders; and
- Defence Counsel is required to advise the Chamber in writing of any changes in the composition of its team, and to ensure that any member leaving the Defence team remit all materials that could lead to the identification of persons falling within the ambit of its protective measures orders.

8. Firstly, the Chamber must determine whether or not a Defence expert witness falls within the scope of the term "other persons working on the immediate Defence team," thereby being permitted to have access to information classified as protected within the ambit of its Decision of 22 September 2000. The Defence submits that this is not clear. The Prosecution submits that an expert witness is clearly not a person working on the Defence team, but rather a mere witness providing expert opinion.

9. The Chamber considers that the term "other persons working on the immediate Defence team" is in fact clear and should be strictly construed so as to permit disclosure of protected information to the Accused, his Counsel and those working in the preparation of the Defence case. Furthermore, the Chamber notes that the persons falling within the scope of this term are recorded with the Chamber in writing, and updated as required, in compliance with this Chamber's Orders of 22 September 2000. The Chamber shares the Prosecution's view that Defence expert witnesses are witnesses and not "other persons working on the immediate Defence team". As such, no protected information can be communicated to them without variation of this Chamber's orders of 22 September 2000. Therefore, the Chamber will now consider whether a variation of its protective measures orders, as provided for under Rule 75 (I) of the Rules, is in the interests of justice.

10. The Defence submits that, in order to prepare its experts, it needs to discuss confidential and protected information with them, including evidence filed under seal and closed-session testimony of witnesses. No details have been provided concerning which protected information is sought to be conveyed to the Defence experts in question. The Prosecution strongly opposes the Defence Motion, submitting that the Defence has advanced insufficient grounds for a variation of the protective measures currently in place for its witnesses.

11. When making its original protective measures orders for Prosecution witnesses, the Chamber took a number of relevant matters into consideration, including its powers and responsibilities under the Statute and the Rules (notably Articles 20 and 21 of the Statute, and Rules 66, 69 and 75 of the Rules), the materials submitted by the Prosecution as a basis for the protective measures sought, and the salient jurisprudence of this Tribunal. In the Chamber's view, the Defence's need to communicate protected information to its experts does not warrant a variation of the protective measures currently in place for the concerned witnesses. Similarly, the fact that Prosecution experts – such as Dr. Alison Des Forges, and Dr. Binaifer Nowrojee – had access to prosecutorial materials in the preparation of their Reports does not assist the Defence in showing why its prospective experts should be afforded unfettered access to protected materials.

12. Finally, the Defence's offer to have each of its experts swear an affidavit containing a confidentiality clause, a sample of which is annexed to its Motion, prior to disclosing confidential information to him or her, does not strengthen its case for the variation of the orders currently in place. The Chamber notes, however, that it is open to entertaining requests for disclosure of protected information on a case-by-case basis, for example, upon the provision of details concerning the information sought to be disclosed, the protected witness concerned, to whom the information is to be provided, and why it is necessary to provide such information to that individual.

FOR THE FOREGOING REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the Defence Motion in its entirety.

NOTING that the Prosecution did not file a Response;

NOW DECIDES the Motion solely on the basis of the briefs of the Parties, pursuant to Rule 73 (A) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules").

Introduction

1. The Defence wishes to call Dr. Helmut Strizek as an expert witness in its case. It submits that Dr. Strizek has health issues that now prevent him from flying in aeroplanes. Thus, it is, at the present time, impossible for him to travel to Arusha. The Defence requests that either the Chamber travels to The Hague in order to hear the witness directly, or, alternatively, that the Chamber authorise the taking of Dr. Strizek's testimony by video-link.

Discussion

2. Rule 90 (A) of the Rules state that witnesses shall, in principle, be heard directly by the Chambers. The seat of the Tribunal is in Arusha, and, under normal circumstances, witnesses travel to Arusha to give testimony.

3. From the confidential submissions filed by the Defence, which include a doctor's certificate attesting to Dr. Strizek's condition and advising against air travel, the Chamber accepts that it would be unwise to require him to fly to Arusha in order to testify.

4. The Chamber finds that health issues which prevent a witness from flying to Arusha are valid grounds for considering alternative methods for receiving testimony.

5. The Defence's preferred option is that the Chamber temporarily relocates from Arusha to The Hague in order to receive the testimony of Dr. Strizek directly. It submits that Rule 4 of the Rules permits a Chamber or Judge to exercise their functions away from the Tribunal if so authorized by the President in the interests of justice. Whilst the Chamber accepts that it is possible for such a measure to be granted under very exceptional circumstances, the Chamber understands that logistical and budgetary considerations seriously restrict this possibility as a viable option.[1]

[1] Prosecutor v. Protais Zigiranyirazo, Case N°ICTR-01-73-T, Decision on Request for Authorisation to Hold Trial Session Away from the Seat of the Tribunal, Office of the President, 12 May 2006.

6. The Defence's alternative request is that the Chamber authorise the taking of his testimony by means of video-link. Although the Rules do not expressly provide for taking testimony by video-link, this option is well developed in the jurisprudence of the Tribunal as a means for receiving the testimony of witnesses who are unable to travel to Arusha.[2] Indeed, the Chamber has already received witness testimony by means of video-link during the Prosecution phase of this trial.[3] A Chamber may order that testimony be taken by means of video-link under Rule 54 of the Rules provided that it is in the interests of justice to do so. In making such an evaluation, the Chamber must weigh the importance of the testimony, the witness's inability or unwillingness to attend, and whether a good reason has been adduced for that inability or unwillingness.[4]

7. The Defence submits that Dr. Strizek is an important witness in its case, and summarises the witness' anticipated testimony. The Chamber is unaware of the position of the Prosecution, as it has not filed a Response. Whilst the Chamber reserves its ruling on the expertise of this witness and also the relevance of his proposed testimony, based upon the submissions of the Defence, and the fact that Dr. Strizek has twice before testified before the Tribunal as an expert witness, the Chamber is prepared to accept that Dr. Strizek may have important testimony to give before the Chamber in this case.

8. The Chamber, being satisfied that Dr. Strizek is unable to travel to Arusha to give testimony directly before the Chamber and that a good reason has been advanced by the Defence, is prepared as an exceptional measure to authorise the taking of his testimony by video-link.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

GRANTS the Motion in the following terms only:

AUTHORISES the taking of Dr. Helmut Strizek's testimony by video-link;

REQUESTS the Registry to make arrangements for the testimony of proposed Expert Witness Dr. Helmut Strizek via video-link.

NOW DECIDES the Motion solely on the basis of the briefs of the Parties, pursuant to Rule 73 (A) of the Rules.

Introduction

1. The Prosecution moves the Trial Chamber, pursuant to Rule 94 (A), to take judicial notice of the following seven facts, which it submits are "facts of common knowledge"[2]:

Fact One:

Between 6 April 1994 and 17 July 1994, genocide against the Tutsi ethnic group occurred in Rwanda.

Fact Two:

Between 6 April 1994 and 17 July 1994, citizens native to Rwanda were severally identified, according to the following ethnic classifications: Hutu, Tutsi, and Twa.

OR

Between 6 April 1994 and 17 July 1994, in Rwanda, Hutu, Tutsi and Twa were protected groups falling within the scope of the Genocide Convention of 1948.

OR

Between 6 April 1994 and 17 July 1994, citizens native to Rwanda were severally identified according to the following ethnic classifications: Hutu, Tutsi, and Twa, which were protected groups falling within the scope of the Genocide Convention of 1948.

Fact Three:

The following state of affairs existed in Rwanda between 6 April 1994 and 17 July 1994: There were throughout Rwanda widespread or systematic attacks against a civilian population based on Tutsi ethnic identification. During the attacks, some Rwandan citizens killed and or caused serious bodily or mental harm to persons perceived to be Tutsi. As a result of the attacks, there were a large number of deaths of persons of Tutsi ethnic identity.

Fact Four:

Between 6 April 1994 and 17 July 1994, there was an armed conflict in Rwanda that was NOT of an international character.

Fact Five:

Between 1 January 1994 and 17 July 1994, Rwanda was a State Party to the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (1948), having acceded to it on 16 April 1975.

Fact Six:

[2] Motion, paragraph 1.

Between 1 January 1994 and 17 July 1994, Rwanda was a State Party to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 and their Additional Protocol II of 8 June 1977, having acceded to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 on 5 May 1964 and having acceded to Protocols Additional thereto of 1977 on 19 November 1984.

Fact Seven:

Before the introduction of multi-party politics in Rwanda in 1991, the office of the Bourgmestre was characterized by the following features:

(a) The Bourgmestre represented executive power at the commune level.

(b) The Bourgmestre was appointed and removed by the President of the republic on the recommendation of the Minister of interior.

(c) The Bourgmestre had authority over the civil servants posted in his commune.

(d) The Bourgmestre had policing duties in regard to maintaining law and order.

2. The Prosecution's request stems from a recent Decision of the Appeals Chamber in Karemera et al.[3] in which the Appeals Chamber, finding that the Trial Chamber had erred, directed the Trial Chamber to take judicial notice, under Rule 94 (A), of the following facts:

The following state of affairs existed in Rwanda between 6 April 1994 to 17 July 1994: There were throughout Rwanda widespread or systematic attacks against a civilian population based on Tutsi ethnic identification. During the attacks, some Rwandan citizens killed or caused serious bodily or mental harm to person[s] perceived to be Tutsi. As a result of the attacks, there were a large number of deaths of persons of Tutsi ethnic identity.[4]

Between 1 January 1994 and 17 July 1994 in Rwanda there was an armed conflict not of an international character.[5]

Between 6 April 1994 and 17 July 1994, there was a genocide in Rwanda against the Tutsi ethnic group.[6]

The Karemera Appeals Chamber also held that the Semanza Appeals Chamber endorsed the Semanza Trial Chamber's decision to take judicial notice of the following facts of common knowledge:

Between 6 April 1994 and 17 July 1994, citizens native to Rwanda were severally identified, according to the following ethnic classifications: Hutu, Tutsi, and Twa.

Between 1 January 1994 and 17 July 1994, Rwanda was a State Party to the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (1948), having acceded to it on 16 April 1975.

Between 1 January 1994 and 17 July 1994, Rwanda was a State Party to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 and their Additional Protocol II of 8 June 1977, having succeeded to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 on 5 May 1964 and having acceded to Protocols Additional thereto of 1977 on 19 November 1984.

Before the introduction of multi-party politics in Rwanda in 1991, the office of the Bourgmestre was characterized by the following features:

(a) The Bourgmestre represented executive power at the commune level.

(b) The Bourgmestre was appointed and removed by the President of the Republic on the recommendation of the Minister of the Interior.

(c) The Bourgmestre had authority over the civil servants posted in his commune.

(d) The Bourgmestre had policing duties in regard to maintaining law and order.

The Karemera Appeals Chamber concluded that these facts are notorious and not reasonably subject to dispute.

3. The Motion is opposed in its entirety by Casimir Bizimungu, Jérôme Bicamumpaka and Justin Mugenzi. Prosper Mugiraneza makes submissions on the characterisation of the conflict within Rwanda during 1994, and urges the Trial Chamber not to take judicial notice of Fact Four above.

4. A prior Prosecution motion for judicial notice of facts of common knowledge under Rule 94 (A) of the Rules was denied by the Trial Chamber on the basis that a Trial Chamber cannot take judicial notice of any document under Rule 94 (A).[7]

Preliminary matters

5. The Defence for Justin Mugenzi filed its Response outside of the time limits given by the Chamber. Counsel for Mugenzi explains that the Mugenzi legal team was busy with other commitments. The Chamber does not find this to be an acceptable reason for the late filing. However, considering the significance of the issues at stake, the Trial Chamber will fully consider the submissions of all the Parties.

DISCUSSION

6. Rule 94 (A) states: "A Trial Chamber shall not require proof of facts of common knowledge but shall take judicial notice thereof." Judicial notice under Rule 94 (A) is mandatory. If a Trial Chamber determines that a fact is one "of common knowledge", it must take judicial notice of it. As the Appeals Chamber stated in the Semanza Appeal Judgement:

> As the ICTY Appeals Chamber explained in Prosecution v. Milošević, Rule 94 (A) "commands the taking of judicial notice" of material that is "notorious." The term "common knowledge" encompasses facts that are not reasonably subject to dispute: in other words, commonly accepted or universally known facts, such as general facts of history or geography, or the laws of nature. Such facts are not only widely known but also beyond reasonable dispute.[8]

The Appeals Chamber also considered the nature of a finding of judicial notice under Rule 94(A), and stated that:

> Whether a fact qualifies as a "fact of common knowledge" is a legal question. By definition, it cannot turn on the evidence introduced in a particular case, and so the deferential standard of review ordinarily applied by the Appeals Chamber to the Trial Chamber's assessment of and inferences from such evidence has no application.[9]

7. The Trial Chamber cannot accept the Defence arguments that the Appeals Chamber rulings on Rule 94 (A) judicial notice in the Karemera Decision, the Semanza Judgement have no applicability in this case. Neither can it accept Justin Mugenzi's argument that the determination that a fact is one of common knowledge is a question of fact, which only the Trial Chamber can make. In essence, the legal effect of the Karemera Decision is that a determination by the Appeals Chamber that any given fact is one of common knowledge and of which judicial notice should be taken under Rule 94 (A) is binding upon all Trial Chambers.

8. Casimir Bizimungu, Jérôme Bicamumpaka and Justin Mugenzi submit that, since the Trial Chamber has already made rulings with respect to most of the facts which form the basis of the present application, these matters are barred from re-litigation by virtue of the doctrine of res judicata. A review of the Trial Chamber's prior Decisions concerning Prosecution requests for judicial notice reveals that, except for Fact Four, none of the facts currently before the Chamber in the present Motion have been the subject of an application for judicial notice before the Trial Chamber under Rule 94 (A), which concerns facts of common knowledge. The Chamber's first Decision on judicial notice, which was brought under both Rule 94 (A) and Rule 94 (B), did not concern any of the facts currently before the Chamber.[10] That Decision related to certain documents, and the Chamber held that it cannot take judicial notice of documents as facts of common knowledge under Rule 94 (A). The Chamber's second Decision on judicial notice dealt exclusively with an application brought under Rule 94 (B) of the Rules, which concerns only adjudicated facts or documentary evidence from other proceedings of the Tribunal.[11] Fact Four has, however, been the subject of a previous application before the Trial Chamber pursuant to Rules 94 (A) of the Rules. In its "Decision on Defence Motions Pursuant to Rule 98 bis" of 22 November 2005, the Trial Chamber declined to take judicial notice of Fact Four, either as an adjudicated fact, or as a fact of common knowledge.[12] Furthermore, in a subsequent decision relating to certification to appeal the Decision on Defence Motions Pursuant to Rule 98 bis, the Trial Chamber stated that the characterization of the conflict in Rwanda as international or non-international in nature was an issue which was still open, and the Defence was at liberty to present evidence on the matter.[13] However, the Trial Chamber considers that the Appeals Chamber's ruling in Karemera, which is binding on all Trial Chambers, requires this Trial Chamber to reconsider its earlier Decision on this issue insofar as it is contrary to the Appeal Chambers ruling. For that reason, the argument based on res judicata cannot be sustained.

9. Casimir Bizimungu, Jérôme Bicamumpaka and Justin Mugenzi argue that the Motion is belated and that granting it would hinder judicial economy and cause them prejudice, since considerable effort has already gone into the preparation of their defence strategies.[14] Mugenzi's Defence argues that granting the Motion would cause Mugenzi particular prejudice, since he is close to completing the presentation of his evidence and, had he known at an earlier stage that the Prosecution was still seeking judicial notice, additional questions could have been asked of his witnesses.[15]

10. Where the Appeals Chamber has taken judicial notice of certain facts as facts of common knowledge, Trial Chambers are bound to follow such findings. It is proper for the Chamber to take judicial notice of such facts at any stage of the Trial. The Trial Chamber is also of the view that the identification of a fact as one of common knowledge fosters judicial economy by dispensing with the need to consider evidence on matters which do not require proof.

11. The Appeals Chamber ruling in Karemera, directing the Karemera Trial Chamber to reconsider its ruling on facts of common knowledge under Rule 94 (A), related to the same facts that the Prosecution formulates as Facts One, Three and Four in the present Motion. Due to the binding nature of the Appeals Chamber finding, the Trial Chamber thus takes judicial notice under Rule 94 (A) of Facts One, Three and Four above.

12. The Trial Chamber recalls that the Semanza Trial Chamber took judicial notice, under Rule 94 of the Rules[16] of, among others, Facts Five and Six above, a position which was subsequently upheld on appeal in both the Semanza Appeals Chamber Judgement,[17] and endorsed in the Karemera Decision.[18] Thus, the Chamber takes judicial notice of these two facts as facts of common knowledge under Rule 94 (A) of the Rules.

13. In relation to Fact Two, the Prosecution proposes three alternatives in relation to which it seeks judicial notice. Judicial notice of the first alternative was taken by the Semanza Trial Chamber, and subsequently endorsed by the Semanza Appeals Chamber. Judicial notice of the second alternative was taken by the Karemera et al. Trial Chamber, and subsequently endorsed by the Appeals Chamber. The third alternative proposed by the Prosecution encompasses the facts embodied in the first two alternatives. As neither of the first two alternatives has been disturbed on appeal, the Chamber takes judicial notice of the third alternative since it comprises all of the facts endorsed by the Appeals Chamber.

14. Casimir Bizimungu and Jérôme Bicamumpaka submit that the Prosecution has not shown how Fact Seven is relevant to the proceedings and therefore it should not be admitted as a fact of common knowledge.[19] The Trial Chamber agrees. The Appeals Chamber noted in the Semanza Judgement that:

> The Appeals Chamber affirms that Rule 94 of the Rules is not a mechanism that may be employed to circumvent the ordinary requirement of relevance and thereby clutter the record with matters that would not otherwise be admitted.[20]

Before the Trial Chamber enters into a consideration of whether a fact is one of common knowledge of which judicial notice can be taken under Rule 94 (A) of the Rules, that fact should be relevant to the issues that fall to be decided in the case. The Prosecution has not attempted to demonstrate the relevance of Fact Seven to the case against the Accused, and its relevance is not evident to the Trial Chamber, as is the case with Facts One through Six. Therefore the Trial Chamber does not presently take judicial notice of Fact Seven as a fact of common knowledge under Rule 94 (A) of the Rules.

FOR THE FOREGOING REASONS, THE CHAMBER

GRANTS the Motion in part, by taking judicial notice under Rule 94 (A) of the following facts of common knowledge:

> (i) Between 6 April 1994 and 17 July 1994, genocide against the Tutsi ethnic group occurred in Rwanda.
> (ii) Between 6 April 1994 and 17 July 1994, citizens native to Rwanda were severally identified according to the following ethnic classifications: Hutu, Tutsi, and Twa, which were protected groups falling within the scope of the Genocide Convention of 1948.

[19] Response of Casimir Bizimungu, paragraphs 23, 163-164; Response of Jérôme Bicamumpaka, paragraph 28.
[20] Semanza, Judgement (AC), paragraph 189.

(iii) The following state of affairs existed in Rwanda between 6 April 1994 and 17 July 1994: There were throughout Rwanda widespread or systematic attacks against a civilian population based on Tutsi ethnic identification. During the attacks, some Rwandan citizens killed and or caused serious bodily or mental harm to persons perceived to be Tutsi. As a result of the attacks, there were a large number of deaths of persons of Tutsi ethnic identity.

(iv) Between 6 April 1994 and 17 July 1994, there was an armed conflict in Rwanda that was NOT of an international character.

(v) Between 1 January 1994 and 17 July 1994, Rwanda was a State Party to the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (1948), having acceded to it on 16 April 1975.

(vi) Between 1 January 1994 and 17 July 1994, Rwanda was a State Party to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 and their Additional Protocol II of 8 June 1977, having acceded to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 on 5 May 1964 and having acceded to Protocols Additional thereto of 1977 on 19 November 1984.

DENIES the Motion in respect of Fact Seven.

NOTING that the Prosecution did not file a response to the Article 28 Motion;

CONSIDERING the Statute of the Tribunal (the "Statute") and the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules"), particularly Article 28 of the Statute and Rules 54, and 68 of the Rules;

NOW DECIDES the Motion solely on the basis of the briefs of the Parties, pursuant to Rule 73 (A) of the Rules.

Introduction

1. On 24 February 2006, the Defence for Casimir Bizimungu filed a Confidential Motion, relying on Rule 68 of the Rules, for disclosure of the Report of French Judge Jean-Louis Bruguière ("Bruguière Report", or "Report"), which concerns the 6 April 1994 fatal attack on then Rwandan President Habyarimana's plane. On 11 May 2006, the Defence filed a related Motion, relying on Article 28 of the Statute and Rule 54 of the Rules, requesting the Chamber to order the cooperation of France in procuring the Bruguière Report. Because of the related nature of the requests, the Chamber will now rule upon them together.

Submissions

THE RULE 68 MOTION

The Defence Request

2. The Defence for Casimir Bizimungu moves the Trial Chamber to issue an order, pursuant to Rule 68 (A) of the Rules, directing the Prosecution to disclose the Bruguière Report. If the Prosecution is not in possession of the Report, the Defence requests the Chamber to order the Prosecution to obtain a copy of it and to disclose it to the Defence.

3. The Defence notes that the Prosecution failed to respond to Casimir Bizimungu's previous requests for the Report in compliance with Rule 68,[3] and annexes its correspondence with the Prosecution requesting the document.[4] It further submits that the Bruguière Report is a well identified document known to the Prosecution.[5]

4. The Defence asserts that the Bruguière Report will provide evidence relevant to several of the Indictment's counts. In general, these arguments can be summarised as follows: (i) the Report shows

[3] Prosecutor v. Blaskić, Decision on the Production of Discovery Materials, 27 January 1997, ruled that in response to a request for disclosure, the Prosecution must: State whether the material is in its possession; and state whether in its opinion the material is likely to be exculpatory. Or it may state that although the material may be exculpatory, it should not be disclosed for some reasons.

[4] This correspondence comprises the following annexes: Annex C, Divulgation à la défense de Casimir Bizimungu du Mémorandum Hourigan et du Rapport Bruguière en Vertu de l'article 68 du Règlement de procédure et de preuve, dated 10 June 2004; Annex D, Prosecutor's Response to the "Request for Disclosure of Documents Pursuant to Rule 68, dated 14 June 2004; Annex E, Deuxième demande de divulgation du Rapport Bruguière en vertu de l'article 68 du Règlement de procédure et de preuve, dated 22 June 2004; and Annex F, Reply to the Defence's "Second Request for Disclosure of the Bruguière Report Pursuant to Rule 68, dated 1 July 2004.

[5] In support of this assertion, the Defence relies upon a dossier de presse (Annex A), which includes press coverage of: the Commission Rogatory convened by Judge Bruguière with the Prosecution's consent, and former Prosecutor Carla Del Ponte's statements that her office was working closely with Bruguière intending to use his findings to determine whether to open an investigation of its own.

that the shooting down of the plane by the Rwandan Patriotic Front ("RPF") was the main cause of the massacres, thereby diverting or at least mitigating responsibility for them;[6] (ii) the Report calls into question the Prosecution's theory of a conspiracy by negating responsibility for the alleged triggering event; (iii) the Report has a bearing on the state of mind of government ministers at the time; (iv) the Report is relevant to the level of government control over the situation in Rwanda at the time; (v) the Report explains events in the context of resumed hostilities between the RPF and the Rwandan government, thereby showing the necessity of civil defence measures, including the establishment of roadblocks; and (vi) the Report is relevant to the classification of the conflict as international or non-international, and therefore alleged violations of the Geneva Conventions, because it may contain information regarding Ugandan assistance to the RPF.

5. In addition to its relevance to allegations in the Indictment, the Defence also asserts that the Report's information implicating the RPF in Habyarimana's death will impeach numerous Prosecution witnesses, especially those over whom the RPF exerts considerable control. Many witnesses in this case either live or are detained within Rwanda's borders; and thus, the Defence asserts that their testimony is subject to the RPF's approval.

The Prosecution's Response

6. In response, the Prosecution submits that it is not better situated to obtain the document than the Defence. Judge Bruguière denied each of the Defence's three requests for the document on the grounds that it is sealed pursuant to Article 11 of the French Code on criminal proceedings.

7. The Prosecution also maintains that the Bruguière Report's investigation into the attack upon President Habyarimana's plane is irrelevant to the Accused's case. According to the Prosecution, the Trial Chamber's oral decision of 1 June 2005 (reaffirmed on 23 February 2006) ruled that the Indictment is not based upon any alleged involvement by the Accused in the downing of the President's plane. Although this ruling reiterated the Defence's right to present its case in the manner it deems most appropriate, it also directed the Defence not to delve into Habyarimana's assassination in great detail.

The Defence Reply

8. The Defence submits that the Prosecution's failure to deny knowledge of the Bruguière Report is a tacit admission that it is in its possession.

9. Bizimungu argues that it is his right to tell his side of the story and, therefore, exculpatory evidence under Rule 68 should not be strictly limited to "the formulation of the indictment".

THE ARTICLE 28 MOTION

10. In the Article 28 Motion, the Defence seeks the same material via another means, requesting that the Chamber order the French government to cooperate by disclosing the Bruguière Report to Casimir Bizimungu. For the purposes of the Article 28 Motion, the Defence relies upon many of the factual allegations in its Rule 68 Motion.

[6] The Defence relies on numerous sources in support of this contention, including: Annex B, Report of the Special Rapporteur of the Human Rights pursuant to Resolution S-31 of the Commission and the Decision 1994/223 of the Economic and Social Council, Witness QU's statement that the person who shot him/her said they did so in retaliation because the Head of State had been killed, T. 17 March 2004, p. 15, Witness D's testimony that the massacres perpetrated after 6 April 1994 were mainly caused by the crash of the President's plane, T. 15 June 2004, p. 58, line 4., and Witness Nkuliyingoma's report that ethnic hostilities resumed following Habyarimana's plane crash, T. 8 July 2004, p. 17.

11. The Defence submits that it is seeking disclosure of a well-known document that it has specifically identified. Although not in the public domain, this report attracted a lot of media attention and publicity. Furthermore, in his communications with the Defence, Judge Bruguière acknowledged the existence of the document by refusing to disclose it.

12. The Defence argues that the relevance of the Report to the criminal responsibility of the Accused is a question of fact which varies from case to case, depending on the positions occupied by the Accused and the circumstances under which they found themselves at the moment those events took place.

13. The Defence notes that Judge Bruguière refused to disclose the report, and includes an annexure to the Motion consisting of email communications between Defence Counsel and Judge Bruguière in the course of which the Judge states: (i) under French law the report is not to be disclosed to third persons;[7] and (ii) there is no domestic avenue for judicial review of his inability to disclose the report to third persons.

14. The Prosecution did not file a response to the Article 28 Motion.

Deliberations

The Rule 68 Motion

15. Rule 68 (A) obliges the Prosecution to disclose material

> "which in the actual knowledge of the Prosecutor may suggest the innocence or mitigate the guilt of the accused or affect the credibility of Prosecution evidence."[8]

These obligations are of a continuous nature.[9]

16. The Prosecution makes the initial determination of whether information and materials are exculpatory.[10] Where the Defence believes that exculpatory evidence or materials in the Prosecution's custody or control have not been disclosed, it may request that the Trial Chamber order disclosure pursuant to Rule 68. For this request to succeed the Defence must sufficiently identify the material sought and make a sufficient showing that it is exculpatory.[11]

17. The Chamber finds that the materials provided by the Defence have sufficiently identified the material sought, the Bruguière Report, for the purposes of Rule 68.

18. Moving to the exculpatory character of the Bruguière Report, the Chamber notes that several of Bizimungu's arguments on this point were advanced jointly by the Defence — albeit in less detail — in their request for reconsideration of the Chamber's Oral Ruling of 1 June 2005, where the issue of who shot down the plane was ruled improper for the cross-examination of Prosecution Expert Witness Dr. Alison Des Forges.

19. As noted in its Reconsideration of Oral Ruling of 1 June 2005 on Evidence Relating to the Crash of the Plane Carrying President Habyarimana, the Chamber has reviewed the jurisprudence of the Tribunal on this issue.[12] The trend has been to allow limited questioning of witnesses regarding the responsibility for the shooting down of the President's plane,[13] but Trial Chambers have generally been more reluctant to deal at length with this issue because they have found that its resolution will not assist them in addressing the criminal responsibility of the accused in their respective trials.[14]

20. The Chamber reiterates that the answer to the question, "Who shot down President Habyarimana's plane?" has no bearing on the responsibility of the Accused in this trial. The charges against Casimir Bizimungu and his co-Accused are not based upon their alleged responsibility or involvement in former President Habyarimana's assassination. Thus, evidence as to who is responsible for the crash of the President's plane would not assist the Chamber in determining the guilt or innocence of the Accused.

21. The Chamber understands that the Defence strategy with regard to the Bruguière Report does not rest on denying the responsibility of the Accused for bringing down Habyarimana's plane. The Defence seeks to show that the RPF shot down former President Habyarimana's plane, and that this action destabilised Rwanda and aroused the Rwandan people to such a degree that the country moved beyond the control of the government, and thus of the Accused. Without addressing this argument in detail, the Chamber notes that its essence – as it relates to the charges against the Accused – is not the identity of President Habyarimana's assassins, but rather the circumstances faced by the Rwandan government after his death. The Defence can make this argument just as effectively without the Bruguière Report. Arguments related solely to the historical record, as opposed to the specific charges against the Accused, are beyond the scope of this trial.

22. The Chamber notes that arguments related to the nature of the conflict – whether it is a non-international or international armed conflict under the Geneva Conventions – are moot as a result of its Decision on the Prosecution's Motion for Judicial Notice, which took judicial notice, as a fact of Bagosora et al.,* T. 25 September 2002, pp.39-41; T. 22 January 2004, pp. 53-55 (cross-examination of prosecution witness Romeo Dallaire); T. 27 January 2004, pp. 82-83 (cross-examination of prosecution witness Romeo Dallaire); T. 12 May 2005, pp. 32-33 (testimony of defence witness Dr. Helmut Strizek); Prosecutor v. Nyiramasuhuko et al., T. 15 June 2004, pp.57-58 (allowing the defence to "put their case" regarding responsibility for shooting down the plane to prosecution witnesses on cross-examination as long as they did not go into unnecessary detail); T. 5 October 2004, pp.37-40 (cross-examination of prosecution witness André Guichaoua).

[14] For example, in Ntagerura et al., the Chamber ruled that the report and testimony of a proposed expert witness dealing with this issue would not aid the Chamber in considering issues relevant to the trial. Ntagerura et al., T. 4 July 2002, pp. 7-8. In Karemera et al., the Chamber denied a similar request under Rule 68, finding that Accused Nzirorera had failed to show how materials relating to the assassination of President Habyarimana could suggest the innocence or mitigate the guilt of the accused, or affect the credibility of the prosecution evidence. Karemera et al., Decision on the Defence Motion for Disclosure of Exculpatory Evidence, 7 October 2003, para. 15. In a series of later decisions in the same case the Karemera et al. Chamber denied specific requests for the Bruguière Report, reiterating that the charges in that case are not based on any alleged responsibility of the Accused in the assassination of President Habyarimana, and that evidence regarding the shooting down of the plane could not relieve the government Ministers of their alleged individual criminal responsibility for international crimes committed in Rwanda during 1994. Karemera et al., Decision on Accused Nzirorera's Motion for Inspection of Materials, 5 February 2004, para. 11; Décision Relative à la Requête de Joseph Nzirorera aux Fins d'Obtenir la Coopération du Gouvernement Français, 23 February 2005, para. 11; Decision on Joseph Nzirorera's Application for Certification to Appeal the Decision Denying his Request for Cooperation to Government of France, 31 March 2005, para. 6; Decision on Joseph Nzirorera's Motion to Compel Inspection and Disclosure, 5 July 2005, para. 12.

common knowledge under Rule 94 (A), that the armed conflict in Rwanda in 1994 was non-international.[15]

23. Regarding the credibility of Prosecution witnesses, the Chamber rejects the Defence argument that the Report, which the Defence submits will contradict statements made by RPF officials to the international community, can be used to impeach the credibility of Prosecution witnesses living in Rwanda on the basis that their testimony is controlled by the current RPF government. If anything, the Bruguière Report may be relevant to the RPF's credibility, which is not at issue before this Tribunal and does not fall within the scope of the term "Prosecution evidence" under Rule 68 (A). While evidence of RPF control over Prosecution witnesses might affect such witnesses' credibility, the Defence has not demonstrated that the Bruguière Report would enlighten the Chamber on such matters. Thus, the Chamber finds that the Defence has failed to make a sufficient showing that the Bruguière Report may affect the credibility of Prosecution witnesses.

24. The Chamber therefore rules that the Defence for Casimir Bizimungu has failed to show the exculpatory character of the Bruguière Report for the purposes of Rule 68.

The Article 28 Motion

25. Article 28 of the Statute mandates State cooperation with the Tribunal in the "investigation and prosecution of persons accused of committing serious violations of international humanitarian law".[16] Pursuant to this Article, States are required to comply with requests or orders issued by Trial Chambers regarding, among other things, the "production of evidence" and "the service of documents".[17] The criteria to be satisfied by the party seeking an order for State cooperation with the production of evidence or service of documents under Article 28 of the Statute are: (i) the party seeking the material must specifically identify, to the extent possible, the documents sought; (ii) the party must articulate the document's relevance to the trial; and (iii) the party must show that its efforts to obtain the documents have been unsuccessful.[18]

26. The Chamber finds that the Defence has identified the material sought, the Bruguière Report, with sufficient specificity for the purposes of Article 28 of the Statute.

27. Nonetheless, with respect to the relevance of the Bruguière Report to this trial, the Chamber notes its ruling that the Defence failed to show the exculpatory character of the Report for the purposes of its request under Rule 68. For the same reasons – notably, (i) that the Indictment charges none of the Accused with shooting down President Habyarimana's plane; (ii) that the identity of Habyarimana's assassins are not relevant to any Defence based on the inability to control the country after his killing; and (iii) that the Defence has not shown that the Report would be helpful in assessing the credibility of witnesses – the Chamber finds that the Defence has failed to show the relevance of the Bruguière Report to this trial for the purposes of Article 28.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA ("Tribunal"),

SITTING as Trial Chamber II, composed of Judge Khalida Rachid Khan, presiding, Judge Lee Gacuiga Muthoga and Judge Emile Francis Short (the "Trial Chamber");

BEING SEIZED of "Prosper Mugiraneza's Motion Pursuant to Rule 66 for Records of All Payments Made Directly or Indirectly to Witness D", filed on 23 June 2006 (the "Motion");

CONSIDERING the "Prosecutor's Request for Leave to Respond Out of Time to Mr. Prosper Mugiraneza's Motion Pursuant to Rule 66 for Records of All Payments Made Directly or Indirectly to Witness D", filed on 22 August 2006 (the "Response");

RECALLING the Chamber's Oral Ruling of 16 June 2004 ordering Defence Counsel to avoid questions relating to the nature of Witness D's witness protection programme;

NOW DECIDES the matter solely on the basis of the briefs of the parties pursuant to Rule 73 (A) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules").

Introduction

1. On 16 June 2004, this Chamber ordered the Defence for Casimir Bizimungu to refrain from cross-examining Prosecution Witness D regarding the specifics of the witness protection programme he is in. The Defence for Prosper Mugarineza (the "Defence") now requests that the Chamber order disclosure of the financial details of that programme, as well as any other payments made directly or indirectly to Witness D by the Tribunal and "other entities", arguing that this information is exculpatory under Rule 68.

Preliminary matters

2. The Prosecution states that its failure to respond to the Motion within five days of receiving it, as required under Rule 73 of the Rules, was inadvertent.[1] It invokes the Chamber's inherent power to admit the response in the interests of justice.

3. The Chamber notes the importance of the issue raised by the Defence motion, specifically the Chamber's duty to strike an appropriate balance between its responsibility to protect witnesses and its obligation to guarantee the rights of the Accused. Despite the Chamber's concern regarding the length of the Prosecution's delay, the Chamber recalls that Witness D has already testified and finds that the delay did not impact the proceedings. Thus, given the importance of the issues before it, the Chamber will consider all submissions before it in the interests of justice.

Discussion

4. The Chamber notes that Prosper Mugiraneza refers to Rule 66 of the Rules in the title of his Motion but exclusively to Rule 68 of the Rules in the body of the Motion. The Chamber assumes that the reference to Rule 66 in the title is in error and rules on the request pursuant to Rule 68.

5. The Defence avers that the extent of the financial benefit received by Witness D is relevant to the Witness's motivation for providing testimony favourable to the Prosecution and therefore relevant to the Witness's credibility. The Defence suggests that the statement of payments submitted by the Prosecution on 15 June 2004 (Prosecution Exhibit 56) is incomplete.

6. Despite the Chamber's Oral Ruling preventing cross-examination regarding the specifics of the witness protection programme, the Defence submits—on the basis of a recent decision in Karemera et al.[2] – that the Prosecution should be forced to disclose not only direct payments made by the Prosecution to Witness D, but also all other "funds expended on Witness D's behalf by the Tribunal and other entities", including funds expended in connection with Witness D's witness protection programme. It submits that disclosure of these funds and explanations for their expenditure on the Witness's behalf will not reveal Witness D's identity or location or otherwise threaten the Witness's security.

7. The Defence acknowledges the Trial Chamber's concerns expressed in the Karemera et al. Decision regarding the possibility that future informants might use information of payments made to a witness as a bargaining tool. Therefore, the Defence does not request that the disclosure be made public.

8. According to the Prosecution, the Defence admits: (i) that the Prosecution has already made sufficient disclosures regarding payments to Witness D; and (ii) that the Trial Chamber forbade cross-examination regarding the specific benefits of Witness D's witness protection programme. Therefore, the Prosecution avers that Prosper Mugiraneza's Motion is a "disguised appeal" of the Chamber's prior Oral Ruling.

9. The Prosecution submits that, under the Statute and the Rules, the Chamber is independent, competent to make its own rulings, and has equal authority to all other Trial Chambers. While a Defence application for reconsideration on the basis of an Appeal Chamber decision may be appropriate, the present Defence application on the basis of another Trial Chamber's ruling is not. If the Defence motion is granted as a result of another Trial Chamber's decision, there will be no finality to this Chamber's decisions.

10. Under Rule 68 (A), the Prosecution is obliged to disclose material

> "which in the actual knowledge of the Prosecutor may suggest the innocence or mitigate the guilt of the accused or affect the credibility of Prosecution evidence."[3]

The Prosecution's obligations are ongoing.[4] Where the Defence believes that exculpatory material in the Prosecution's custody or control has not been disclosed, it may request that the Trial Chamber order disclosure. Before the Chamber will grant a request under Rule 68, the Defence must sufficiently identify the material sought and make a prima facie showing that it is exculpatory.[5] Where the Defence specifically requests information or material covered by Rule 68 (A) that is not within the possession or control of the Prosecution and that the Defence has been unable to procure through its own efforts, the Prosecution should attempt to obtain and disclose the relevant information or material if it is in a better position than the Defence to do so.[6]

11. The Chamber recalls that its Oral Ruling of 16 June 2004 restricting questioning on the specifics of Witness D's witness protection programme reflected the Chamber's concern that the identity of the witness might be revealed. The specific question which led to the ruling concerned whether the witness had been given a new identity as part of that programme. The Prosecution represented that the Witness had specifically been instructed by the administrators of the witness protection programme not to answer that question or any other question which might make it easier to determine the Witness's location or identity.[7]

12. Despite the Prosecution's claim that the issue raised has already been decided by the Chamber, the Chamber finds that its Oral Ruling of 16 June 2004 did not determine whether information regarding the financial benefits received by Witness D is exculpatory for the purposes of disclosure under Rule 68. Moreover, the Chamber notes that the Prosecution does not argue that the information is not exculpatory for the purposes of Rule 68. Nor has the Prosecution requested relief from disclosure under Rule 68 (D), or Rule 66 (C), provisions which allow such relief where disclosure

> "may prejudice further or ongoing investigations, or for any other reason may be contrary to the public interest or affect the security interests of any State."

The Prosecution has not revealed a detailed statement of monies expended on behalf of Witness D to the Chamber.

13. The Chamber notes that not all payments made on behalf of witnesses are exculpatory for the purposes of Rule 68. Some expenses, such as transportation and accommodation costs connected with investigations and hearings, are reasonable and necessary and do not tend to undermine their credibility.[8] The Chamber is of the view that some expenses associated with a witness protection programme are also likely to be reasonable and necessary and therefore not exculpatory under Rule 68.[9] The Chamber is also mindful that the sum total of monies distributed under a witness protection programme would be deceptive without knowing the cost of living in the country administering the program, exchange rates, as well as other economic factors.[10] Such details might be difficult to disclose without compromising the safety of the Witness by potentially revealing his whereabouts. Nonetheless, the Chamber cannot determine the question before it, specifically, whether indirect and direct payments made to Witness D are exculpatory for the purposes of Rule 68, without seeing a detailed statement of payments, including details of all expenses connected with the witness protection programme. Therefore, the Chamber, pursuant to its authority to issue orders necessary for the conduct of trial under Rule 54, orders the Prosecution to provide such a detailed statement of expenses, which should be filed with the Chamber ex parte and strictly confidential. The Chamber reserves its decision on the central issue of whether these payments are exculpatory for the purposes of Rule 68 until it has had time to review the Prosecution's disclosure made pursuant to this order.

FOR THE FOREGOING REASONS, THE CHAMBER

ORDERS the Prosecution to provide the Chamber with a detailed statement of all expenses incurred on Witness D's behalf and on behalf of members of his family, including the details of all expenses connected with the witness protection programme he is enrolled in, to be filed with the Chamber ex parte and strictly confidential;

RESERVES its final decision on the Defence motion until the Chamber has had a chance to review the Prosecution materials submitted pursuant to the above Order.

BEING SEIZED of "Casimir Bizimungu, Justin Mugenzi and Jérôme Bicamumpaka's Written Submissions Concerning the Issues Raised at the Hearing of 31 March 2006 in Relation to the Cross-Examination of Witness Augustin Kayinamura (Formerly Inga)", filed on 2 April 2006 (the "Motion");

RECALLING the Chamber's Oral Ruling of 20 February 2004 regarding access to and use of closed-session testimony from other proceedings before the Tribunal;

HEREBY DECIDES the matter solely on the basis of the briefs of the parties pursuant to Rule 73 (A) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules").

Introduction

1. At the hearing of 31 March 2006, during its cross-examination of Defence Witness Augustin Kayinamura (formerly INGA), the Prosecution sought to use the transcript of prior testimony given by the witness in closed session in the matter of the Prosecutor v. Gacumbitsi. The Defence objected to the Prosecution's use of the transcript on the grounds that (i) the transcript had not been communicated to the Defence in advance, which was a violation of the established practice of this Chamber; and (ii) the use of closed session testimony from another trial before the Tribunal during open session and without the permission of the Chamber that ordered the closed session is a violation of that Chamber's order as well as prior orders of this Chamber. Alternatively, the Defence argued that if the Prosecution is allowed unfettered access to all closed session transcripts from all proceedings before the Tribunal, then the principle of equality of arms requires that the Defence must also have such access.

2. The Prosecution acknowledged that its use of the transcript in open session was improper, but that the remedy was simply to move to closed session. Nonetheless, the Prosecution argued that its use of the closed session testimony was proper as the Prosecution is a single entity that is party to all proceedings before the Tribunal.

3. The Chamber requested written submissions on the issues raised; the Defence filed its joint Motion on 3 April 2006, and the Prosecution filed its response on 10 April 2006.

Deliberations

Advance Communication of Documents to be Used in Cross-Examination

4. The Chamber reaffirms its Oral Rulings of 26 October 2004[1] and of 5 October 2006,[2] where it directed that a party seeking to use a document in cross-examination must, prior to the commencement of its cross-examination, inform the other side and provide a copy of the document to opposing counsel.

Access to, and Use of, Closed Session Transcripts from Other Proceedings

5. The Parties disagree over the interpretation of Rule 75 (F) and the Appeals Chamber's Decision of 16 November 2005 regarding the effect of witness protection measures granted for Defence witnesses on the Prosecution.[3] The Prosecution implies that the addition of subsection (F) to Rule 75 and the subsequent Appeals Chamber decision effectively overruled this Chamber's Oral Ruling of 20 February 2004, which required any party who seeks access to closed session transcripts from another proceeding to make an application to the original Chamber which ordered the closed session for permission to access the transcript. The Prosecution argues that the effect of the Appeals Chamber's ruling that the Prosecution is party to all proceedings suggests, by inference, that the Prosecution is not required to seek permission to access and use protected materials in cross-examination. The Defence argues that Rule 75 (F) is limited to the context of the Prosecution's disclosure obligations under the Rules, and that the Appeals Chamber's decisions affirmed this.

6. Rule 75 (F) states, "Once protective measures have been ordered in respect of a … witness" in one case, such protective measures "shall continue to have effect mutatis mutandis" in any other case, but "shall not prevent the Prosecutor from discharging any disclosure obligation" in another case. The original Chamber retains continuing jurisdiction over material and evidence sealed pursuant to a protective order. A protected witness' subsequent actions, including giving unprotected testimony in another trial, are irrelevant to the continuing applicability of the original protective order.

7. In the Bizimungu Appeals Chamber Decision, the Appeals Chamber relied on its 6 October 2005 decision on a similar matter in the Prosecutor v. Bagosora, where it found that underlying Rule 75 (F)

> "is the proposition that evidence gained by one Prosecution team without the knowledge of others 'may suggest the innocence or mitigate the guilt of an accused in another case, or affect the credibility of Prosecution evidence in that other case'".[4]

The Bagosora Appeals Chamber Decision held that witness protection orders should not be construed as restricting the Prosecution's disclosure obligations under Rule 68 of the Rules. Members of the Prosecution working on any proceedings before the Tribunal should be able to access any exculpatory material for purposes of disclosure, even if that material is protected by order of another Trial Chamber.[5] The Bizimungu Appeals Chamber Decision confirmed this ruling.[6] In the Chamber's view, the Appeals Chamber's rulings are limited to circumstances involving the Prosecution's disclosure obligations under Rule 68.[7] The Appeals Chamber did not state that the Prosecution shall have access to all closed session transcripts in all cases for all purposes.

8. Based upon the above-referenced decisions of the Appeals Chamber, Rule 75 (F), and this Chamber's Oral Ruling of 20 February 2004, the Chamber finds that the Prosecution is obliged to seek the permission of the original Trial Chamber if it wishes to use closed session testimony from other proceedings for any reason other than to fulfil its disclosure obligations under the Rules. Here, the [5] Bagosora Appeals Chamber Decision, para. 44.

[6] Bizimungu Appeals Chamber Decision, para. 4.
[7] While the Bagosora and Bizimungu Appeals Chamber Decisions involved disclosure under Rule 68, the plain language of Rule 75 (F), which refers explicitly to "any disclosure obligations under the Rules", and the jurisprudence of other Trial Chambers suggests that Rule 75 (F) authorizes the Prosecution to disclose otherwise protected materials in fulfilment of any disclosure obligation under the Rules. For example, Prosecutor v. Nahimana et al., Case N°ICTR-99-52-T, Decision on Disclosure of Transcripts and Exhibits of Witness X, 3 June 2004, paras. 4, 6 (disclosure of closed session testimony pursuant to Rules 66 (A) (ii) authorized without prior permission of original Trial Chamber pursuant to Rule 75 (F)).

Prosecution should have sought the permission of the Gacumbitsi Chamber before using the closed session testimony for the purpose of cross-examination.

Exclusion of the Testimony Elicited Using the Closed-Session Transcripts

9. The Parties also disagree as to the appropriate remedy, if any. The Defence requests that the portions of the cross-examination arising from the closed session transcript be stricken from the record pursuant to Rule 95 of the Rules. The Prosecution argues that it obtained the evidence by proper means, and that Rule 95 was therefore inapplicable in this instance. In addition, the Prosecution argues that although it has not complied with the Chamber's practice direction regarding the provision of materials to the opposing party before their use during cross-examination, any potential resulting prejudice was avoided. Moreover, any violation of the Gacumbitsi Chamber's closed session order was cured when the Chamber ordered that the cross-examination proceed in closed session.

10. Rule 95 of the Rules provides that > "no evidence shall be admissible if obtained by methods which cast substantial doubt on its reliability or if its admission is antithetical to, and would seriously damage, the integrity of the proceedings".

11. The Chamber is of the view that the methods used by the Prosecution to obtain the closed session transcripts did nothing to cast any doubt on their reliability, or the reliability of the cross-examination testimony arising from these transcripts during the 31 March 2006 hearing.[8]

12. The remaining question is whether admission of testimony elicited using the closed session transcripts obtained in violation of a prior ruling of this Chamber as well as the protective orders of the Gacumbitsi Chamber is "antithetical to, and would seriously damage, the integrity of the proceedings". The Chamber notes that Rule 95 does not require automatic exclusion of all unlawfully obtained evidence.[9] Rather,

> "in applying the provisions of Rule 95, this Tribunal considers all the relevant circumstances and will only exclude evidence if the integrity of the proceedings would indeed otherwise be seriously damaged".[10]

13. The closed session transcripts from Gacumbitsi were used to ask the Witness questions regarding his ethnicity, his knowledge of an alleged warrant for his arrest for genocide in Rwanda, and whether he was involved in killing a household servant named Bimenyimana. The Prosecution argues that the Defence needed no prior preparation for these three simple questions and thus was not prejudiced. The Accused do not claim they were prejudiced or otherwise explain why exclusion of the relevant testimony is necessary in order to avoid serious damage to the integrity of the proceedings. Indeed, during the hearing of 31 March 2006, Defence Counsel for Accused Mugenzi, stated

> "in this particular case, the mischief, if any, may be small. And we're not talking about, if I can use the crude expression, putting the toothpaste back in the tube."[11]

14. The Chamber considers the following circumstances relevant to the issue raised regarding the integrity of the proceedings under Rule 95:

[8] Compare, Prosecutor v. Ndayambaje, Case N°ICTR-96-8-T, Decision on Ndayambaje's Confidential Motion to Have Detainee Testimony Declared Inadmissible (TC), 25 October 2004, para. 18 ("Given that the concerned evidence were testimonies given under oath or affirmation before the Chamber, the Chamber finds that, the Defence fails to show that the evidence these detained witnesses has given was obtained by methods which cast substantial doubt on its reliability …").
[9] Prosecutor v. Brdanin, Case N°IT-99-36-T, Decision on the Defence "Objection to Intercept Evidence" (TC), 3 October 2003, para. 54.
[10] Prosecutor v. Bizimungu et al., Case N°ICTR-99-50-T, Decision on Prosper Mugirnaeza's Renewed Motion to Exclude His Custodial Statements from Evidence, 4 December 2003, para. 29; Brdanin, Decision on the Defence "Objection to Intercept Evidence", para. 61.
[11] T. 31 March 2006, p. 35.

- The prejudice to the Accused, if any, caused by the Prosecution's violation of the Gacumbitsi Chamber's protective order was small;
- It is in the interest of justice that the parties place all available evidence before the Trial Chamber and that the Chamber hears and evaluates such evidence;[12]
- The Prosecution's use of the closed-session transcript was based on a colourable, if mistaken, interpretation of Appeals Chamber jurisprudence that it mistakenly believed had changed the prior procedure regarding use of closed-session testimony from other proceedings, as opposed to a blatant disregard of that procedure;
- The evidence sought to be excluded is not the wrongfully obtained closed-session transcripts themselves, but rather testimony given under oath in answer to questions arising from these transcripts, and subject to re-examination by the Defence for Mugenzi.

In the Chamber's view these circumstances do not require exclusion in order to prevent serious damage to the integrity of the proceedings.

15. The Chamber stresses that the admission into evidence of the testimony arising from the wrongfully obtained closed-session transcripts does not imply approval by the Chamber of the means by which the transcripts were obtained.

FOR THE FOREGOING REASONS, THE CHAMBER

GRANTS the Motion in part;

DECLARES that it is the general practice established by this Chamber that a party seeking to use a document in cross-examination must, prior to the commencement of its cross-examination, inform the other side and provide a copy of the document to opposing counsel;

ORDERS that the Prosecutor shall not, without leave of the original Trial Chamber, use material sealed by that Chamber for any purpose other than in fulfilment of its disclosure obligations under the Rules;

DENIES the Defence Motion in all other respects.

NOTING ALSO the oral submissions made by the Parties, concerning the Motion, during the proceedings in this case of 21 August 2006;

NOW DECIDES the matter solely on the basis of the briefs of the parties, pursuant to Rule 73 (A).

Introduction

1. In its Motion, the Prosecution seeks two types of relief relating to the witnesses to be called to testify in Casimir Bizimungu's defence. Firstly, the Prosecution seeks an order which will compel the Bizimungu Defence to furnish the Prosecution with full witness statements for its witnesses. Secondly, the Prosecution seeks an order varying Order (h)[1] of the Trial Chamber's Decision on Casimir Bizimungu's Motion for Protection of Defence Witnesses, of 27 June 2005, so as to require Casimir Bizimungu to provide the Prosecution with the personal particulars of his witnesses.[2]

2. Although the Bizimungu Defence filed a Response on 30 May 2005 which opposed the Motion in principle, it subsequently disclosed to the Prosecution, and filed with the Chamber, the following materials:[3]

> (i) Witness statements and will say statements for alibi witnesses (seven witnesses in total), including the witnesses' full names, addresses and telephone numbers; and
> (ii) Witness statements and will say statements for the witnesses it intended to call to testify during the trial session which took place between August and October 2006, including:
>
> - each witness' full name,
> - the name of his or her father and mother,
> - the witness' date and place of birth,
> - the witness' religion,
> - the witness' address in 1994,
> - the witness' occupation in 1994, and,
> - in relation to Rwandan witnesses, the witness' ethnicity.

3. On 13 June 2006, the Defence for Prosper Mugiraneza filed a Memorandum in relation to the Motion, submitting that the Motion was without merit and should be denied.

4. During the proceedings in this case of 21 August 2006, the Defence for Casimir Bizimungu requested that the Prosecution withdraw its Motion in light of the disclosure of the materials outlined in paragraph two, above. The Prosecution declined to withdraw the Motion.[4]

5. The Chamber notes that the relief sought by the Prosecution specifically relates to the Accused Casimir Bizimungu. This is made clear by the fact that the Prosecution specifically seeks to vary Order (h) of this Chamber's Decision on protective measures for Casimir Bizimungu's witnesses. The Motion does not seek any general relief. Accordingly, the Chamber considers the merits of the Motion

[1] Order (h) states: "The disclosure to the Prosecution of the names, addresses, whereabouts of, and other identifying data which reveal or may identify Defence witnesses, and any other information in the supporting material on the file with the Registry is prohibited until such time as the Chamber is assured that the witnesses have been afforded an adequate mechanism for protection. The Defence is authorised to disclose any material to the Prosecution in a redacted form until such a mechanism is in place, and in any event, the Defence is under no obligation to reveal the identifying data to the Prosecutor sooner than twenty-one (21) days before the witness is due to testify at trial, unless the Chamber decides otherwise pursuant to Rule 69 (A) of the Rules."

[2] The Prosecution seeks the Order to be varied so as to require the provision of the following details with respect to Casimir Bizimungu's witnesses: (1) date and place of birth; (2) name of parents; (3) religion; (4) ethnicity; (5) occupation in 1994; (6) address in 1994; (7) current address.

solely on the basis of the Prosecution's brief, as required by Rule 73 (A) of the Rules – that is, specifically with regard to the Accused Casimir Bizimungu.

Preliminary matter – Request for 'Confidential Status' to be assigned to Annexure

6. In its Response, the Defence seeks an order from the Chamber that the Annexure to the Prosecution Motion, which contains samples of witness testimony summaries previously disclosed to the Prosecution, be assigned confidential status, and removed from the public record. The basis for the Defence request is that the material concerned is extracted from the Defence's Pre-trial Brief, which was assigned confidential status. The Chamber has reviewed the material in question and notes that it contains brief and general summaries of the witness' testimony, and a reference to the witness' pseudonym. Due to the nature of the material concerned, the Chamber considers that assigning confidential status to this material is not required in order to safeguard the privacy and security of the witnesses concerned. The Chamber notes that there are different considerations in assigning confidential status to an entire Pre-trial Brief, which do not necessarily concern the particular pages which have been extracted from it. The Defence's application therefore falls to be rejected.

Regarding the provision of full witness statements by the Bizimungu Defence

7. The Prosecution Motion firstly seeks an order requiring the Defence to provide full witness statements for its witnesses. The Motion does not specify in respect of which witnesses full statements are sought, therefore the Chamber considers that the Motion is seeking the provision of full witness statements for all witnesses to be called in Casimir Bizimungu's defence. On 9 June 2006, the Bizimungu Defence provided either full witness statements, signed by each witness, or detailed will-say statements in respect of each witness who was to testify during the August to October trial session. The Chamber is therefore of the view that the provision of this material by the Defence has rendered the first part of the Prosecution's Motion moot, as regards the witnesses in relation to whom the 9 June 2006 disclosure was made.

8. In relation to the provision of full witness statements, therefore, the issue which remains to be resolved is whether the Chamber should order the Bizimungu Defence to disclose full witness statements for its remaining witnesses (i.e. in relation to whom disclosure was not made on 9 June 2006).

9. In support of its request for an order requiring the provision of full witness statements, the Prosecution has relied upon Rule 73 ter of the Rules, seeking that the Defence be ordered to "comply strictly with the provisions of Rule 73 ter (B)".[5] Rule 73 ter, entitled "Pre-Defence Conference", empowers the Chamber to hold a conference prior to the commencement, by the Defence, of its case.[6] Rule 73 ter (B) bestows a discretionary power upon the Chamber to make certain orders with respect to the management of the Defence case during such a conference and before the commencement of the Defence case (emphasis added). Rule 73 ter (B) also empowers the Chamber to order the Defence to provide copies of the written statements of each witness whom the Defence intends to call. Again, pursuant to the Rule, the Chamber is empowered to exercise that discretion during the Pre-Defence Conference.

10. On 31 October 2005, this Chamber in fact held a Pre-Defence Conference in accordance with the provisions of Rule 73 ter.[7] During that conference, the Chamber specifically considered whether or not it should grant the Prosecution's request to order the Defence (of each of the Accused) to provide full witness statements of the witnesses whom it intended to call, as provided for by Rule 73 ter (B) of the Rules. After considering the submissions of both the Prosecution and Defence on this point, the Chamber declined to exercise its discretion in favour of the Prosecution's request.

[5] See Prosecution Motion, p. 9.
[6] See Rule 73 ter (A).
[7] T., 31 October 2005 (closed session).

11. The Chamber considers that the Prosecution's Motion amounts to an attempt to seek reconsideration of this Chamber's Rule 73 ter rulings of 31 October 2005. The grounds advanced for the relief sought – that since the Defence for Justin Mugenzi provided full witness statements to the Prosecution, the Bizimungu Defence should also be required to do so; and that the provision of full witness statements by the Bizimungu Defence will assist the Prosecution in preparing its case – were known to the Chamber on 31 October 2005. Furthermore, in deciding whether or not to exercise its discretion in favour of ordering the Defence to provide full witness statements to the Prosecution, the Chamber considered whether it was in the interests of justice to do so. The Chamber therefore does not consider that a new fact has been discovered that was not known to the Chamber on 31 October 2005, or that there has been a material change in circumstances since that date, or that there is reason to believe that its original Decision was erroneous or constituted an abuse of power on the part of the Chamber, resulting in injustice thereby warranting the exceptional remedy of reconsideration.[8] Accordingly, the Chamber declines to order that the Bizimungu Defence provide full witness statements of its remaining witnesses.

Regarding the request for variation of Order (h) of Chamber's Decision of 27 June 2005

12. Two matters remain to be considered regarding the Prosecution's request for a variation of Order (h) of 27 June 2005. The first matter is whether, with regard to Rule 75(I) of the Rules, the Prosecution has provided sufficient grounds for any change being made to the 21 day time stipulation in Order (h), such that a variation reducing, or disposing with, this time limit is warranted. The second matter is whether Order (h) should be varied so as to require the Defence to provide personal particulars of each of its witnesses, either forthwith, or on a date to be specified.

13. As regards the first matter – whether there are grounds for interfering with the 21 day time stipulation for the provision of personal information, in Order (h) – presently, the Defence is under no obligation to disclose identifying data to the Prosecutor sooner than 21 days before the witness is due to testify at trial. The Prosecution submits that this Order should be varied

> "in the interests of justice, judicial economy, fairness… and to enable the Prosecutor to have adequate information and time to conduct background investigation on the witnesses".[9]

14. The Chamber finds that the Prosecution has failed to adduce sufficient grounds to warrant an interference with the 21 day time stipulation in Order (h). In deciding whether or not to grant protective measures in respect of Casimir Bizimungu's witnesses, and in deciding the exact form such measures should take, the Chamber took into account a number of relevant matters, including its various powers and duties under the Statute and the Rules, as well as the material advanced in support of the application. The time stipulation in Order (h) was fixed after careful consideration of what was required to safeguard the privacy and security of the witnesses. Insufficient reasons have been advanced to merit an interference with this time stipulation.

15. As regards the second matter – whether Order (h) should be varied so as to require the Defence to provide full personal particulars of each of its witnesses – the Chamber considers that this part of the Prosecution Motion has been rendered moot, except in relation to that part of the Prosecution's request which seeks the disclosure of the current residential address for each of Casimir Bizimungu's witnesses. The Prosecution has advanced no reason as a basis for its request for the provision of Bizimungu witnesses' current residential address. The Chamber is of the view that revealing the current address of Defence witnesses has the potential to compromise the witnesses' privacy, safety and security, due to the potential for intimidation and coercion. It therefore declines to order the provision of Casimir Bizimungu's witnesses' current residential addresses to the Prosecution. Finally the Chamber notes that, having regard to its disinclination to interfere with the 21 day time stipulation in Order (h), the Defence will continue to be required to provide identifying information of its witnesses – other than the witness' current residential address – no sooner than 21 days before the witness is scheduled to testify at trial.

FOR THE FOREGOING REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the Defence request for an order that the Annexure to the Prosecution Motion be filed confidentially.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA ("the Tribunal")

SITTING as Trial Chamber II, composed of Judge Khalida Rachid Khan, presiding, Judge Lee Gacuiga Muthoga and Judge Emile Francis Short (the "Chamber");

BEING SEIZED of the "Casimir Bizimungu's Motion to Cancel Protective Measures for Defence Witness WFQ4", dated on 17 October 2006, (the "Motion");

RECALLING the "Decision on Casimir Bizimungu's Motion for Protection of Defence Witnesses", dated 27 June 2005, and the "Reconsideration of Decisions on Protective Measures for Defence Witnesses Pursuant to Appeals Chamber Ruling of 16 November 2005", dated 17 February 2005 (together, the "Witness Protection Orders");

NOW DECIDES the matter solely on the basis of the briefs of the parties pursuant to Rule 73 (A) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules");

Introduction

1. The Defence requests, pursuant to Rules 69 and 75 of the Rules, that the Chamber sets aside the protective measures for Witness WFQ4. It informs the Chamber that this witness wishes to testify unprotected under his true identity, and has no fear of reprisals.

Preliminary matter

2. The Chamber requested confidential submissions from the Witness and Victim Support Section of the Registry (the "WVSS") on the complete withdrawal of protective measures for Witness WFQ4, pursuant to Rule 69 (B) of the Rules. The WVSS expressed no objection to the complete withdrawal of protective measures.[1]

Discussion

3. The Witness Protection Orders, which presently remain in force, granted Protected Witness status to all potential Defence Witnesses for Casimir Bizimungu nominated to the Victims and Witnesses Support Unit in the proper format. The Defence is aware that cancellation of the Witness Protection Orders for Witness WFQ4 means that the Tribunal will not be responsible for his safety.

4. Based upon the clear indication from Counsel that Witness WFQ4 does not require the Tribunal's protection, and the expression of no objection from the WVSS, the Chamber is prepared to grant the request for cancellation of the Witness Protection Orders in respect of Witness WFQ4.

FOR THE FOREGOING REASONS, THE CHAMBER

GRANTS the Defence Motion, and

CANCELS the Witness Protection Orders for Witness WFQ4

HEREBY DECIDES the motion.

Introduction

1. On 22 September 2006 the Trial Chamber granted in part the Prosecution's Motion for Judicial Notice.[1] In so doing, it relied on the Appeals Chamber's Decision in Karemera, which clarified the nature of judicial notice under Rule 94 (A) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules"), and directed that certain facts be recognized by the Trial Chamber as facts of common knowledge pursuant to that rule.[2]

2. The Defence for Mugenzi now seeks certification, under Rule 73 (B) of the Rules, to appeal the Trial Chamber's Decision on the Prosecutor's Motion for Judicial Notice. Mugiraneza supports Mugenzi's application, but suggests that he might not join Mugenzi in appealing if certification is granted. The Bizimungu Defence joins Mugenzi's application, and expresses its intention to file submissions with the Appeals Chamber if certification is granted. The Prosecution opposes Mugenzi's application and argues that Mugiraneza's and Bizimungu's submissions are improper.

3. On 1 December 2006, the Appeals Chamber dismissed three motions for reconsideration of the Karemera Appeals Chamber Decision.[3]

Preliminary issue

4. The Prosecution suggests that Mugiraneza's and Bizimungu's submissions are procedurally improper and frivolous, and prays that the Chamber dismiss them and sanction their respective Counsel. The Chamber disagrees with the Prosecution's characterization of Bizimungu's submissions, which clearly state his intention to join Mugenzi in seeking certification to appeal the Trial Chamber Decision.[4]

5. Mugiraneza's Memorandum is procedurally improper. Mugiraneza states that he does not seek certification to appeal, but offers arguments in support of Mugenzi's application and challenges the Chamber's judicial notice of the existence of a non-international armed conflict. Nonetheless, the Chamber will consider Mugiraneza's arguments, as he was also affected by the Chamber's Decision.

6. The Chamber declines the Prosecution's invitation to dismiss the submissions and sanction the Counsel for Bizimungu or Mugiraneza.

Discussion

7. Rule 73 (B) states that leave to file an interlocutory appeal of a decision may be granted if the issue involved "would significantly affect the fair and expeditious conduct of the proceedings or the outcome of the trial" and where "immediate resolution may materially advance the proceedings".[5]

8. Judicial notice of a fact of common knowledge provides an alternative means for the Prosecution to meet its burden of proof on issues of fact, such as the existence of a non-international conflict. As such, the Chamber finds that the decision to take judicial notice is one that could significantly affect the outcome of the trial.[6] Therefore the Chamber will consider whether immediate resolution of the issues by the Appeals Chamber would materially advance the proceedings.

9. Mugenzi submits that immediate resolution of this issue by the Appeals Chamber may materially advance the proceedings because there is serious doubt as to the correctness of the legal principles applied in the Trial Chamber Decision. According to Mugenzi and Bizimungu, the Trial Chamber is not bound to take judicial notice of the "facts of common knowledge" from the Karemera Appeals Chamber Decision. Mugenzi argues that the Trial Chamber misunderstood a question of fact for a question of law when it determined that it was bound to take judicial notice of certain specified facts.

10. Mugenzi adds that the Trial Chamber should grant certification so the Appeals Chamber can clarify the nature of the judicial notice taken. Mugiraneza argues that the Karemera Appeals Chamber Decision was based on the Appeals Chamber's misinterpretation of its judgement in Semanza, and that judicial notice should not be taken of "relevant facts", because this deprives the accused of the "right" to contest them.[7] Bizimungu argues that, because he did not have the opportunity to argue the issues before the Appeals Chamber, the Trial Chamber's application of the Karemera Appeals Chamber Decision to this case contravenes his right to be heard.

11. Mugenzi also argues that the Trial Chamber Decision was particularly unfair to him given that he had finished presenting his Defence before the Decision was rendered. Specifically, Mugenzi suggests that the consequence of the Trial Chamber Decision is that the Prosecution has been allowed to re-open its case and introduce factual evidence without allowing Mugenzi to respond. Mugenzi also argues that it is unfair for the Trial Chamber to take judicial notice of a fact after hearing contrary evidence. Bizimungu argues that fairness requires the Chamber to consider the stage of the proceedings and its own prior decisions before taking judicial notice of any fact.

12. The Appeals Chamber recently reaffirmed the principles of the Karemera Appeals Chamber Decision, stressing "whether a fact qualifies as 'a fact of common knowledge' under Rule 94 (A) is a

[5] Rule 73 (B) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence.

[6] "[A]llowing judicial notice of a fact of common knowledge – even one that is an element of an offence, such as the existence of a 'widespread or systematic' attack – does not lessen the Prosecution's burden of proof or violate the procedural rights of the Accused. Rather, it provides an alternative way that the burden can be satisfied, obviating the necessity to introduce evidence documenting what is already common knowledge". Karemera Appeals Chamber Decision, para. 37 (citing Prosecutor v. Semanza, Case N°ICTR-97-20-A, Judgement (AC), 20 May 2005, para. 192.

[7] The Chamber notes that, pursuant to Rule 94 (A) and the relevant jurisprudence, judicial notice may only be taken of relevant facts, and cannot be taken of irrelevant facts.

legal question" that "does not turn on evidence introduced in a particular case".[8] In dismissing the request for reconsideration, the Appeals Chamber addressed many of the arguments that Mugenzi and Bizimungu seek to raise on appeal if this Chamber were to grant certification.

13. Regarding the binding nature of the Karemera Appeals Chamber Decision on Trial Chambers, the Appeals Chamber stated:

> The Appeals Chamber recalls that in the Decision on Judicial Notice it determined that the Trial Chamber has no discretion to rule that a fact of common knowledge must be proved through evidence at trial. This determination was based on an interpretation of Rule 94 (A) of the Rules. The express language of this Rule does not allow the Trial Chamber the discretion to require proof of facts of common knowledge. Such discretion only exists for matters of judicial notice which fall within the ambit of Rule 94 (B) of the Rules, that is, adjudicated facts or documentary evidence from other proceedings of the Tribunal.[9]

In reaching this conclusion the Appeals Chamber considered and rejected submissions to the effect that (i) "failing to allow the Trial Chamber the discretion not to take judicial notice of a fact of common knowledge given the late stage of the trial proceedings, ... would be unfair to [Karemera] and the other Applicants", and (ii) "that even if the Appeals Chamber found a certain fact to be a fact of common knowledge, it does not necessarily follow that judicial notice of that fact must be taken in a particular case".[10] The Appeals Chamber rejected the request

> "to leave discretion to the Trial Chamber to decline to take judicial notice of facts of common knowledge, if, considering the stage of the proceedings or other facts, it believes that it is unfair to do so".[11]

14. In the Reconsideration Decision, the Appeals Chamber also addressed the argument that, because it purported to bind all trial chambers, the Karemera Appeals Chamber Decision violated "the principle of inter partes proceedings and was inconsistent with the audi alteram partem doctrine". Similar arguments were raised by Bizimungu in his submissions. The Appeals Chamber rejected this argument, noting that

> "[p]arties in other cases are not prevented from challenging the implication of the Decision on Judicial Notice in their respective cases in proceedings before their respective Trial Chambers".[12]

The parties have been afforded this opportunity in the case at hand.

15. The arguments raised by the Defence have already been considered and rejected by the Karemera Appeals Chamber Reconsideration Decision. Requesting the Appeals Chamber to revisit these legal principles would not materially advance the proceedings.[13]

FOR THE FOREGOING REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the Defence Application.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA ("the Tribunal")

SITTING as Trial Chamber II, composed of Judge Khalida Rachid Khan, presiding Judge, Lee Gacuiga Muthoga and Judge Emile Francis Short (the "Trial chamber");.

BEING SEIZED of the "Requête confidentielle en extrême urgence du Dr Casimir Bizimungu en vue d'entendre le témoin WDK par voie de vidéoconférence", filed on 3 November 2006 (the "Motion");

CONSIDERING the "Prosecution response to Requête confidentielle en extrême urgence du Dr. Casimir Bizimungu en vue d'entendre le témoin WDK par voie de vidéoconférence", dated 8 November 2006 and filed on 9 November 2006;

Introduction

1. Defence Witness WDK resides in a European country and refuses to travel to Arusha to testify. The Defence asks that she be allowed to testify via video-link from The Hague or another suitable destination. It bases its request on Rules 54 and 71 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("the Rules"), arguing that the interests of justice and the rights of the Accused justify hearing her testimony in this manner.

2. The Prosecution asserts that he would not oppose the request provided that the Prosecution's right to cross-examination is guaranteed.

Discussion

3. Rule 90 (A) of the Rules states that witnesses shall, in principle, be heard directly by the Chambers. The seat of the Tribunal is in Arusha, and, under normal circumstances, witnesses travel to Arusha to give testimony. Although the Rules do not expressly provide for taking testimony by video-link, this option is well developed in the jurisprudence of the Tribunal as a means for receiving the testimony of witnesses who are unable or unwilling to travel to Arusha. A Chamber may authorize testimonies by video-link under Rule 54 of the Rules where it is in the interests of justice, based on a consideration of the importance of the testimony, the inability or unwillingness of the witness to attend and, whether a good reason has been adduced for that inability or unwillingness.[1] Where the witness is unwilling to attend, his refusal must be genuine and well-founded, giving the Chamber reason to believe that the testimony would not be heard unless the video-link is authorized.[2]

Importance of the testimony

4. The Defence intends to call Witness WDK as an alibi witness for the Accused. It submits that she is an important witness who is expected to testify that she saw the Accused in Kinshasa, D.R.C., several times between April and July 1994. The Chamber accepts that Witness WDK may have important testimony to give in this case.

Inability or Unwillingness to Attend

5. The Defence asserts that Witness WDK is a single-parent who is responsible for taking care of her five-year old son. The only other person who can care for the child is the witness' own mother, who normally lives with the witness. However, the witness' mother has been hospitalized for several months and is currently unable to perform this role. The witness is the only support available to her young son and her sick mother.

6. The Chamber notes the jurisprudence cited by the Defence in support of its application. These decisions allowed witnesses to testify via video-link due to their particular family obligations – they were nursing mothers with young children – which prevented them from travelling to The Hague to give testimony before the ICTY.

7. The Defence further submits that an additional reason for allowing testimony via video-link in this case is that the Witness is her family's only source of income, and her employment status does not allow her to leave work for more than a day. To support its argument, the Defence cites a decision from the Karera case in which the Chamber considered that:

> practical inconveniences related to family or work, do not in themselves justify testimonies through video-link. However a 10 % of the source of income of a refugee who supports a family is more than a "practical inconvenience". Furthermore, the concerns of the witness are based on his own past experience. The Chamber accepts his reason for refusing to travel to Arusha.[3]

8. The Defence has established that the particular family obligations of Witness WDK prevent her from travelling to Arusha. Thus, a good reason has been adduced for the inability of Witness WDK to attend.

9. The Prosecution's right to cross-examine the witness is guaranteed, and the Chamber finds that receiving Witness WDK's testimony via video-link will not prevent effective cross-examination by the Prosecution.

10. Accordingly, the Chamber, in the interests of justice, is prepared to authorize the taking of her testimony by video-link from The Hague or other such suitable venue that the Tribunal is able to arrange.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

GRANTS the Motion in the following terms only:

AUTHORIZES the taking of Witness WDK's testimony by video-link from The Hague or other such suitable venue that the Tribunal is able to arrange;

REQUESTS the Registry, in consultation with the parties, to make arrangements for the testimony of proposed Witness WDK via video-link.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA (the "Tribunal"),

SITTING as Trial Chamber II: composed of Judge Khalida Rachid Khan, presiding, Judge Lee Gacuiga Muthoga and Judge Emile Francis Short (the "Trial Chamber"):

BEING SEIZED of "Casimir Bizimungu's View Urgent Motion for an Order Applying Rule 70 to Specific Information to be Provided to the Defense by the United States Government", filed on 2 November 2006 (the "Motion");

CONSIDERING the "Prosecutor's Response to Dr. Casimir Bizimungu's Very Urgent Motion for an Order Applying Rule 70 to Specific Information to be Provided to the Defence by the United States Government", filed on 9 November 2006 (the "Response").

CONSIDERING the Statue of the Tribunal (the "Statute") and the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules"), particularly Article 20 of the Statute and Rule 70 of the Rules;

Submissions

1. The Defence requests the Trial Chamber to issue an order for the provisions of Rule 70 to apply mutantis mutandis to any information to be provided to the Defence by the United States Government (the "U.S.") in response to the request by the Defence.

2. The Defence submits that the U.S. is prepared to provide information in response to the request upon the condition of confidentiality and only if the Trial Chamber issues an order expressly providing that the provisions of Rule 70 would apply to any information so provided. The U.S. further requires that the Defence sign an agreement equivalent to that which applies when information is provided by the U.S. to the Office of the Prosecutor.

3. The Defence quotes the Appeals Chamber in submitting that the purpose of Rule 70

"is to encourage States, organisations, and individuals to share sensitive information with the Tribunal. The Rule creates an incentive for such cooperation by permitting the sharing of information on a confidential basis and by guaranteeing information providers that the confidentiality of the information they offer and of the information's sources will be protected."[1]

While the protection of Rule 70 applies to information provided in confidence to the Prosecutor, the Defence submits that, in the Interests of justice, the same rule should apply to the Defence.

4. The Prosecutor submits that since the provisions of Rule 70 relate only to the Prosecutor and not the Defence, it is not open to the Defence to bring an application under that Rule. In response, the Defence argues that if the Prosecutor's assertion is true. It restricts the right of the Accused to adequate facilities to prepare his defence and the principle of equality of arms between the parties. The Defence believes that the information being sought from the U.S. contains material relevant to the preparation and presentation of the defence of the Accused.

5. The Prosecutor argues that the Defence application must fail because the Chamber has not been apprised as to the relevance and probative value of the information being sought, as required by Rule 89. The Prosecutor submits that the Chamber is being asked to consider the Motion based only upon the Defence's assessment of the nature and essence of the proposed evidence.

6. In response, the Defence argues that Rule 89 relates to the admissibility of evidence at trial, and not to the current situation. The Defence contends that it is not, at this stage, required to disclose the nature and character of the information being sought from the U.S. Government which information the latter seems willing to share with Casimir Bizimungu. The U.S. position is that information shared with either party before international tribunals should be subject to the same protection of confidentiality.

Deliberations

7. Rule 70 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence reads as follows:

(A) Notwithstanding the provisions of Rules 66 and 67, reports, memoranda, or other internal documents prepared by a party, its assistants or representatives in connection with the investigation or preparation of the case, are not subject to disclosure or notification under the aforementioned provisions.

(B) If the Prosecutor is in possession of information which has been provided to him on a confidential basis and which has been used solely for the purpose of generating new evidence. that initial information and its origin shall not be disclosed by the Prosecutor without the consent of the person or entity providing the initial information and shall in any event not be given in evidence without prior disclosure to the accused.

(C) If. after obtaining the consent of the person or entity providing information under this Rule, the Prosecutor elects to present as evidence any testimony, document or other material so provided, the Trial Chamber, notwithstanding Rule 98, may not order either party to produce additional evidence received from the person or entity providing the initial information, nor may the Trial Chamber for the purpose of obtaining such additional evidence itself summon that person or a representative of that entity as a witness or order their attendance.

(D) If the Prosecutor calls as a witness the person providing or a representative of the entity providing information under this Rule, the Trial Chamber may not compel the witness to answer any question the witness declines to answer on grounds of confidentiality.

(E) The right of the accused to challenge the evidence presented by the Prosecution shall remain unaffected subject only to limitations contained in Sub-Rules (C) and (D).

(F) Nothing in Sub-Rule (C) or (D) above shall affect a Trial Chamber's power under Rule 89 (C) to exclude evidence if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the need to ensure a fair trial.

8. The language of Rule 70, as it stands within the ICTR Rules of Procedure and Evidence, does not envisage a Defence request for similar protection. The Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the International Criminal Tribunal for Yugoslavia, however, expressly provides that the provisions of Rule 70 "shall apply mutatis mutandis to specific information in the possession of the accused" so that a Trial Chamber may, upon an application by the Defence, afford it with the type of protection provided for by Rule 70.

9. The Chamber notes the Prosecutor's objections to the present application, which are based on the provisions of Rule 89 (B) and (C). Rule 89 (B) stipulates that

> In cases not otherwise provided for in this Section, a Chamber shall apply rules of evidence which will best favour a fair determination of the matter before it and are consonant with the spirit of the Statute and the general principles of law.

10. The Chamber takes the view that although the language of although the ICTR Rule 70 is limited to applications by the Prosecutor, broadening the ambit of that Rule to include applications by the Defence would serve to foster equality of arms between the Parties, is consistent with the Rule's rationale, and is, therefore "consonant with the spirit of the Statue".

11. At this stage of the proceedings, the Chamber is not required to make an assessment as to relevance and probative value of the information being sought. The Defence is in the process of seeking information in the possession of the U.S., which it believes is material to the presentation of its case. The U.S. is prepared to provide the requested information, but only on condition that it is afforded the protection of confidentiality guaranteed by Rule 70. Once the information has been obtained, it is still open to the Defence to decide on whether or not it wishes to present as evidence any testimony document or other material so provided to it. Should the Defence elect to present such evidence, it would be open to the Prosecutor to challenge it. Although any challenge by the Prosecutor would be subject to the limitations stipulated paragraphs (C) and (D) of Rule 70, sub-rule (F) clearly preserves the Chamber's power to apply the terms of Rule 89 (C) and exclude any evidence which it finds to be irrelevant or lacking in probative value

GRANTS the Motion; and

ORDERS that the provisions of Rule 70 shall apply mutatis mutandis to the specific information obtained by the Defence for Casimir Bizimungu from the Government of the United States in response to the Defence request of 16 August 2006.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA ("Tribunal"),

SITTING as Trial Chamber II, composed of Judge Khalida Rachid Khan, presiding, Judge Lee Gacuiga Muthoga and Judge Emile Francis Short (the "Trial Chamber");

BEING SEIZED of "Casimir Bizimungu's Motion in Support of Justin Mugenzi's Motion for a Review of the Registry's Decision to Include a Condition in Respect of Payment Within the Proposed Special Services Agreement to be Offered to Mr. Herman Cohen", filed on 8 July 2006 (the "Motion");

CONSIDERING

(i) Justin Mugenzi's Motion for a Review of the Registry's Decision to Include a Condition in Respect of Payment Within the Proposed Special Services Agreement to be Offered to Mr. Herman Cohen, filed on 6 July 2006 (the "Mugenzi Motion");

(ii) Justin Mugenzi's Notice of Withdrawal of Motions Dated 29 March and 4 July 2006 Concerning Witness Herman Cohen, filed 17 August 2006;

(iii) The Registrar's Submission in Respect of Casimir Bizimungu's Motion in Relation to the Remuneration of Proposed Expert Witnesses, filed 23 August 2006 (the "Registrar's Submissions");

NOTING that the Prosecution filed no Response;

NOW DECIDES the Motion:

Introduction

1. The Defence for Casimir Bizimungu moves the Chamber to order the Registrar to reconsider his decision to make offer of payment to its potential expert witnesses conditional upon their being eventually qualified as expert witnesses by the Chamber.

2. The same request was originally made by the Defence for Justin Mugenzi. The Defence for Casimir Bizimungu then joined with the Defence for Justin Mugenzi, adopting its submissions in their entirety, and requesting the same relief. The Defence for Justin Mugenzi subsequently withdrew its Motion; however the Defence for Casimir Bizimungu did not. The Registrar then filed submissions under Rule 33 (B) of the Rules.

Discussion

3. In his submissions, the Registrar clarifies that > "[it] is standard procedure for the Registrar to attach a condition to the effect that remuneration will be based on the determination by the Chamber of the expertise of the proposed expert witness. This was based on a policy decision adopted in April 2005 following a Decision by the President dated 18 April 2005"[4487],

4. In that case, and following a voir dire hearing, the Trial Chamber in the case of The Prosecutor v. Pauline Nyiramasuhuko et al. ruled that a proposed expert brought by the Defence, Mr. Edmond Babin, did not in fact qualify as an expert witness. Nonetheless, the Trial Chamber allowed him to testify before the Tribunal as a factual witness. Following his testimony, a disagreement ensued between the Defence and the Registry over payment, with the Registry claiming that he should not be paid for his services as an expert witness, since he had not testified as such. The Defence claimed that there was nothing in the contract that made payment conditional upon the Chamber's qualification of the witness as an expert. The matter was raised before the President of the Tribunal, who, acting in exercise of his authority to review decisions of the Registrar under Rules 19 and 33 (A) of the Rules, ruled that the Accused did not have a "protective right or interest in the case that warrant[ed] a review of the Registrar's decision", and that the issues raised in the Motion did not threaten the interests of justice.[4488] Despite this jurisdictional ruling, the President recommended that the Registrar reconsider his decision in this particular case "in fairness to [Mr. Babin]", since the contract has not stated that his payment was conditional upon his qualification as an expert by the Tribunal, however recommended that in future "there is need for the Registry to clarify its position with regard to proposed expert witnesses who are not accepted as such by the Trial Chamber". The President further suggested that the Registrar's position could be conveyed in future contracts with proposed expert witnesses.[4489] Having reviewed the Decision of the President, this Chamber finds that the Decision does not amount to a policy ruling regarding the correctness of conditional payment clauses in all contracts for potential expert witnesses.

5. The Defence submits that the conditional payment offered by the Registrar for its expert witnesses violates its rights under Article 20 (4) (e) of the Statute, which provides the Accused with the right "[to] examine, or have examined, the witnesses against him or her and to obtain the attendance and examination of witnesses on his or her behalf under the same conditions as witnesses against him or her." The Defence further submits that conditional payment violates the principle of equality of arms. The Chamber recalls that the Appeals Chamber has held that the principle of equality of arms is an aspect of the right to a fair trial. At a minimum, a fair trial must entitle the accused to adequate time and facilities for his or her defence, under conditions that do not place him or her at a substantive disadvantage as regards his or her opponent.[4490] This right does not imply that the Chambers are charged to ensure parity of resources between the Prosecutor and the Defence, such as the material equality of financial or personal resource.[4491]

6. According to Rule 94 bis, the Party calling the expert witness must file the expert's statement with the opposing party as soon as possible and with the Chamber not later than twenty-one days before the expert is expected to testify.[4492] Within fourteen days, the opposing party is expected to notify the Chamber whether or not it accepts the witness' qualification as an expert, whether it accepts the expert witness statement, and whether it wishes to cross-examine the expert.[4493] Thus, inherent in the procedure laid down in the Rules is the risk that commissioned work by a potential expert will be challenged by the opposing party, and ultimately rejected by the Chamber.

7. Where an Accused is found to be indigent, the expenses of the Defence are borne by the Tribunal, including payment for the services of an expert witness. The Chamber understands that the purpose of the conditional payment term in the contract for services offered to the expert witness is aimed at managing the Tribunal's budgetary limitations and accounting obligations.[4494] The Defence submits that such a condition may discourage potential expert witnesses from agreeing to prepare a report or to testify for the Defence.

8. In the Chamber's opinion, it is not acceptable as a general policy to request potential expert witnesses to gamble on whether or not the Tribunal will pay them for their work. The Chamber finds that imposing such a risk on the witnesses themselves may lead to indigent Accused persons failing to secure the services of well-qualified experts, and ultimately depriving the Chamber of useful expert testimony relevant to the case. Such a situation may lead to a violation of the Accused's right to a fair trial by denying the Accused adequate facilities to prepare his or her defence. Thus, in order to protect the rights of the Accused, the Chamber directs the Registrar to reconsider his general policy regarding the terms the Registry offers to potential Defence expert witnesses in this case.

9. Nonetheless, the Chamber recognises that the Tribunal's resources are finite, and the Registrar must ensure that they are used fairly and efficiently. Whilst the Chamber does not find acceptable as a general policy the imposition of conditional payment clauses for potential expert witnesses, the Chamber considers that such a clause may be permissible in exceptional cases where the Registrar is of the opinion that there is no likelihood that the potential expert witness will be qualified as an expert by the Chamber. In such an exceptional case, a contractual provision stating that payment in full or in part for the services of the proposed expert witness will be conditional upon eventual qualification by the Chamber, would not compromise the Accused's rights, as provided for under the Statute.

FOR THE FOREGOING REASONS, THE CHAMBER

GRANTS the Motion, in the following terms only:

DIRECTS the Registrar to reconsider his general policy regarding the terms the Registry offers to potential Defence expert witnesses in this case, in light of the Chamber's findings above.

Ces attaques ont eu pour conséquence la mort d'un très grand nombre de personnes appartenant à l'ethnie tutsie.

Avant l'instauration du multipartisme au Rwanda en 1991, la fonction de bourgmestre présentait les traits suivants :

a) Le bourgmestre représentait le pouvoir exécutif à l'échelon communal.

b) Le bourgmestre était nommé par le Président de la République – qui mettait fin à ses fonctions – sur recommandation du Ministre de l'Intérieur.

c) Le bourgmestre avait autorité sur les agents de l'administration officiant dans sa commune.

d) Le bourgmestre avait des attributions de police dans le cadre du maintien de l'ordre.

2. La requête du Procureur se fonde sur une décision rendue récemment dans l'affaire Karemera et consorts[4497] par la Chambre d'appel qui, ayant conclu que la Chambre de première instance avait commis une erreur, a invité celle-ci à dresser, en application de l'article 94 (A) du Règlement, le constat judiciaire des faits ci-après :

> La situation suivante existait au Rwanda entre le 6 avril et le 17 juillet 1994 : sur tout le territoire rwandais, des attaques généralisées ou systématiques ont été dirigées contre une population civile en raison de son appartenance ethnique tutsie. Au cours des attaques, certains Rwandais ont tué des personnes considérées comme étant des Tutsis ou ont porté une atteinte grave à leur intégrité physique ou mentale. Ces attaques ont eu pour conséquence la mort d'un très grand nombre de personnes appartenant à l'ethnie tutsie[4498].
> Entre le 1er janvier 1994 et le 17 juillet 1994, un conflit armé non international s'est déroulé au Rwanda[4499].
> Entre le 6 avril 1994 et le 17 juillet 1994, un génocide a été perpétré au Rwanda contre le groupe ethnique tutsi[4500].

La Chambre d'appel saisie de l'affaire Karemera, a également conclu que la Chambre d'appel saisie de l'affaire Semanza avait entériné la décision de la Chambre de première instance de dresser le constat judiciaire des faits de notoriété publique suivants :

[4497] Le Procureur c. Édouard Karemera et consorts, affaire n°ICTR-98-44-AR73(C), Décision faisant suite à l'appel interlocutoire interjeté par le Procureur de la décision relative au constat judiciaire (Chambre d'appel), 16 juin 2006 (ci-après, la « Décision Karemera »).
[4498] Décision Karemera, par. 26 à 32.
[4500] Ibid., par. 33 à 38.

Entre le 6 avril et le 17 juillet 1994, les citoyens rwandais autochtones étaient individuellement identifiés selon la classification ethnique suivante : Tutsis, Hutus et Twas.

Entre le 1er janvier et le 17 juillet 1994, le Rwanda était un des Etats parties à la Convention pour la prévention et la répression du crime de génocide (1948), puisqu'il y avait adhéré le 16 avril 1975.

Entre le 1er janvier et le 17 juillet 1994, le Rwanda était un des États Parties aux Conventions de Genève du 12 août 1949 et au Protocole additionnel II auxdites Conventions adopté le 8 juin 1977, puisqu'il avait adhéré aux Conventions de Genève du 12 août 1949 le 5 mai 1964 et aux Protocoles additionnels à ces conventions de 1977 le 19 novembre 1984.

Avant l'instauration du multipartisme au Rwanda en 1991, la fonction de bourgmestre présentait les traits suivants :

a) Le bourgmestre représentait le pouvoir exécutif à l'échelon communal.

b) Le bourgmestre était nommé par le Président de la République – qui mettait fin à ses fonctions – sur recommandation du Ministre de l'Intérieur.

c) Le bourgmestre avait autorité sur les agents de l'administration officiant dans sa commune.

d) Le bourgmestre avait des attributions de police dans le cadre du maintien de l'ordre.

La Chambre d'appel saisie de l'affaire Karemera a estimé que ces faits étaient notoires et ne pouvaient raisonnablement souffrir aucune contestation.

3. Casimir Bizimungu, Jérôme Bicamumpaka et Justin Mugenzi rejettent l'intégralité de la requête. Prosper Mugiraneza a déposé des écritures relatives à la définition du caractère du conflit qui s'est déroulé au Rwanda en 1994 et exhorte la Chambre de première instance de ne pas dresser le constat judiciaire du fait n° 4 énoncé ci-dessus.

4. Une précédente requête du Procureur en constat judiciaire de faits de notoriété publique au titre de l'article 94 (A) du Règlement a été rejetée par la Chambre de première instance au motif qu'elle ne pouvait pas, au titre de l'article 94 (A), dresser le constat judiciaire de documents[4501].

Questions préliminaires

5. La Défense de Justin Mugenzi a déposé sa réponse en dehors du délai prescrit par la Chambre en expliquant qu'elle était requise par d'autres engagements. La Chambre estime que ce n'est pas un motif valable ; toutefois, eu égard à l'importance des questions en jeu, elle s'attachera à un examen approfondi des écritures de toutes les parties.

Délibération

6. L'article 94 (A) est ainsi libellé : « La Chambre de première instance n'exige pas la preuve de ce qui est de notoriété publique, mais en dresse le constat judiciaire ». Le constat judiciaire prévu par l'article 94 (A) du Règlement est obligatoire. Une fois que Chambre de première instance a conclu qu'un fait est « de notoriété publique » elle doit en dresser le constat judiciaire. C'est ainsi que la Chambre d'appel a déclaré ce qui suit dans l'arrêt Semanza :

> Comme la Chambre d'appel du TPIY l'a précisé dans l'affaire Le Procureur c. Milošević, l'article 94 (A) du Règlement fait « obligation » de dresser le constat judiciaire d'informations « notoires ». L'expression « de notoriété publique » s'applique aux faits qui ne sont pas [4501] Décision relative à la requête du Procureur intitulée : Prosecutor's Motion for Judicial Notice Pursuant to Rules 73, 89 and 94, rendue le 2 décembre 2003, par. 25 et 26.

raisonnablement l'objet d'une contestation. En d'autres termes, il s'agit de faits communément admis ou universellement connus, tels que de grands faits historiques, des données géographiques ou les lois de la nature. Ces faits doivent non seulement être largement connus, mais aussi échapper à toute contestation raisonnable[4502].

La Chambre d'appel a également eu à statuer sur la définition qu'il convient de donner à la conclusion qu'un constat judiciaire doit être dressé en vertu de l'article 94 (A) du Règlement et a dit ce qui suit :

> La question de savoir si un fait remplit les conditions requises pour être considéré comme un « fait de notoriété publique » est d'ordre juridique. Par définition, la réponse ne saurait dépendre des éléments de preuve versés au dossier dans telle ou telle affaire. En conséquence, bien que la Chambre d'appel, lorsqu'elle réexamine les décisions de première instance, ait l'habitude de se ranger à la manière dont la Chambre de première instance a apprécié les éléments de preuve et aux conclusions que celle-ci en a tirées cette règle ne s'applique pas aux faits de notoriété publique[4503].

7. La Chambre de première instance ne peut admettre les arguments de la Défense selon lesquels les motifs invoqués par la Chambre d'appel à l'appui de la Décision Karemera et l'arrêt Semanza ne sont pas pertinents en l'espèce. Elle ne peut pas non plus soutenir, comme le fait Justin Mugenzi, que la question de savoir si un fait remplit les conditions requises pour être considéré comme un fait de notoriété publique est d'ordre factuel et que seule la Chambre de première instance peut y répondre. En droit, la Décision Karemera signifie que la décision de la Chambre d'appel de considérer qu'un fait est de notoriété publique et qu'un constat judiciaire doit en être dressé en vertu de l'article 94 (A) du Règlement s'impose à toutes les Chambres de première instance.

8. Selon Casimir Bizimungu, Jérôme Bicamumpaka et Justin Mugenzi, la Chambre de première instance ayant déjà rendu des décisions quant à la plupart des faits qui constituent le fondement de la présente requête, ceux-ci ne peuvent plus faire l'objet d'un nouveau procès, en vertu du principe de l'autorité de la chose jugée. Il appert de l'examen des décisions antérieures rendues par la Chambre de première instance relativement aux requêtes du Procureur en constat judiciaire que, sauf le fait n°4, aucun des autres faits susmentionnés n'a fait l'objet d'une requête déposée devant la Chambre de première instance en vertu de l'article 94 (A) du Règlement qui vise les faits de notoriété publique. La première de ces décisions, qui concernait une demande de constat judiciaire fondée sur les paragraphes (A) et (B) dudit article, n'avait trait à aucun des faits énoncés dans la requête dont la Chambre est actuellement saisie[4504]. Elle avait trait à certains documents et la Chambre avait conclu qu'elle ne pouvait dresser le constat judiciaire de documents au titre des faits de notoriété publique prévus à l'article 94 (A) du Règlement. La deuxième décision faisait suite à une requête déposée en vertu de l'article 94 (B) du Règlement qui porte uniquement sur des faits ou des moyens de preuve documentaires admis lors d'autres affaires portées devant le Tribunal[4505]. En revanche, le fait n°4 a déjà fait l'objet d'une requête déposée devant la Chambre de première instance en vertu de l'article 94 (A) du Règlement. Dans sa décision relative aux requêtes de la Défense intitulée Decision on Defence Motions Pursuant to Rule 98 bis rendue le 22 novembre 2005, la Chambre de première instance avait refusé de dresser le constat judiciaire du fait n°4 comme fait admis, ou comme fait de notoriété publique[4506]. En outre, dans une décision ultérieure relative à une requête de la Défense en autorisation d'interjeter appel de la décision intitulée Decision on Defence Motions Pursuant to Rule 98 bis, la Chambre de première instance avait conclu que la question de savoir si le conflit rwandais avait un caractère international ou non international n'avait pas encore été tranchée et qu'il était loisible à la Défense de présenter des éléments de preuve à ce sujet[4507]. La Chambre de première instance estime cependant que la décision rendue par la Chambre d'appel dans l'affaire Karemera s'imposant à toutes les Chambres de première instance, elle est tenue de réexaminer sa décision antérieure en la matière dans la mesure où elle est contraire à celle de la Chambre d'appel. En conséquence, l'argument fondé sur le principe de l'autorité de la chose jugée ne saurait être admis.

9. Casimir Bizimungu, Jérôme Bicamumpaka et Justin Mugenzi estiment que la requête est tardive et qu'y faire droit irait à l'encontre de l'objectif d'économie judiciaire et serait préjudiciable aux accusés qui ont déjà consenti des efforts considérables pour préparer leurs stratégies de défense[4508]. Selon la Défense de Mugenzi, faire droit à la requête serait particulièrement préjudiciable à celui-ci, étant donné que la présentation de ses moyens est presque achevée et qu'il aurait posé des questions supplémentaires à ses témoins s'il avait été informé plus tôt que le Procureur introduirait une autre requête en constat judiciaire[4509].

10. Lorsque la Chambre d'appel a dressé le constat judicaire de faits dont elle considère qu'ils sont de notoriété publique, les Chambres de première instance sont tenues de suivre ses conclusions. La Chambre doit dresser le constat judiciaire de tels faits quel que soit le stade de la procédure. La Chambre de première instance est aussi d'avis que qualifier un fait comme étant de notoriété publique va dans le sens de l'économie judiciaire en dispensant de l'obligation d'établir formellement des faits qui n'ont pas à être prouvés.

11. La Décision Karemera, par laquelle la Chambre d'appel invite la Chambre de première instance à réexaminer sa décision relative aux faits de notoriété publique en vertu de l'article 94 (A), porte sur les mêmes faits que ceux présentés par le Procureur dans sa requête comme faits n°1, 3 et 4. Les décisions de la Chambre d'appel s'imposant à elle, la Chambre de première instance dresse le constat judiciaire des faits n°1, 3 et 4 ci-dessus en vertu de l'article 94 (A) du Règlement.

12. La Chambre de première instance rappelle que la Chambre de première instance saisie de l'affaire Semanza avait notamment dressé, en vertu de l'article 94 du Règlement[4510], le constat judiciaire des faits n°5 et 6 susmentionnés et que sa décision avait été confirmée en appel par l'arrêt Semanza[4511] et entérinée par la Décision Karemera[4512]. En conséquence, la Chambre de première instance dresse, en vertu de l'article 94 (A) du Règlement, le constat judiciaire de ces deux faits qui sont des faits de notoriété publique.

13. En ce qui concerne le fait n°2, le Procureur demande que soit dressé le constat judiciaire de l'une des trois formulations qu'il a proposées. La première de celles-ci est tirée de la décision rendue par la Chambre de première instance dans l'affaire Semanza et approuvée par la Chambre d'appel. La deuxième est tirée de la décision rendue par la Chambre de première instance dans l'affaire Karemera et consorts et confirmée par la Chambre d'appel. La troisième est une fusion des deux premières. Aucune des deux premières formulations n'ayant été rejetée en appel, la Chambre dresse le constat judiciaire de la troisième formulation qui comprend l'ensemble des faits admis par la Chambre d'appel.

[4511] Arrêt Semanza, par. 191 à 194.
[4512] Décision Karemera, par. 28 et 29.

14. Selon Casimir Bizimungu et Jérôme Bicamumpaka, le Procureur n'ayant pas établi en quoi le fait n°7 était pertinent au procès, ce fait n'a donc pas à être considéré comme un fait de notoriété publique[4513]. La Chambre de première instance partage cet avis. La Chambre d'appel, pour sa part, a relevé ceci dans l'arrêt Semanza :

> La Chambre d'appel souligne que l'on ne saurait se servir de l'article 94 du Règlement pour contourner la condition de base relative à la pertinence de la preuve et, partant, encombrer le dossier d'éléments qui, autrement, ne seraient pas reçus[4514].

Avant que la Chambre de première instance n'examine le point de savoir si un fait est un fait de notoriété publique dont le constat judiciaire peut être dressé en vertu de l'article 94 (A) du Règlement, encore faut-il que ce fait soit pertinent à l'espèce. Le Procureur ne s'est pas efforcé d'établir la pertinence du fait n°7 au procès, et la Chambre estime que contrairement aux faits n°1 à 6, la pertinence de ce fait n'est pas manifeste. Aussi, la Chambre ne dresse-t-elle pas le constat judiciaire du fait n°7 en vertu de l'article 94 (A) du Règlement relatif aux faits de notoriété publique.

PAR CES MOTIFS, LA CHAMBRE

FAIT DROIT en partie à la requête et dresse, en vertu de l'article 94 (A) du Règlement, le constat judiciaire des faits de notoriété publique suivants :

i) Entre le 6 avril et le 17 juillet 1994, un génocide a été commis contre le groupe ethnique tutsi au Rwanda ;

ii) Entre le 6 avril et le 17 juillet 1994, les citoyens rwandais autochtones étaient individuellement identifiés selon la classification ethnique suivante : Tutsis, Hutus et Twas, qui étaient des groupes protégés visés par la Convention de 1948 sur le génocide ;

iii) La situation suivante existait au Rwanda entre le 6 avril et le 17 juillet 1994 : sur tout le territoire rwandais, des attaques généralisées ou systématiques ont été dirigées contre une population civile en raison de son appartenance ethnique tutsie. François Karera, Decision on Defence Motion for Protection of Witnesses, 9 February 2006 (ICTR-2001-74)

Introduction

1. The trial in the instant proceedings is set to begin the week of 11 September 2006. In its confidential Motion of 12 September 2005, the Prosecution moves the Chamber, under Article 21 of the Statute of the Tribunal (the "Statute") and Rules 54, 69, 73, and 75 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules"), to issue protective orders for potential witnesses who have not affirmatively waived their rights to protective measures, and who may presently reside (i) in Rwanda, (ii) in other countries in Africa, and (iii) outside the continent of Africa.[1] The Prosecution submits that these potential witnesses fear for their safety and that these fears are justified by the dangers and insecurities described in the reports annexed to the Motion.

2. The Defence replies that the protective measures sought by the Prosecution should be denied for lack of a factual basis in support of the potential witnesses' alleged security concerns, and for infringement of the rights of the Accused.[2] The Defence argues that the Prosecution makes no attempt to show a connection between the alleged danger of threat, assault, or killing and the Accused in terms of time, place, or circumstance. The Defence further states that the Prosecution seeks to prohibit the Accused from personally possessing any material that contains any identifying information, except when he is in the presence of Counsel, and thus intrudes upon the rights of the Accused. Finally, the Defence submits that the security information provided by the Prosecution is outdated and cannot form a proper basis for an informed decision by the Chamber.

3. Pursuant to the Chamber's request at the Status Conference on 12 January 2006[3] the Prosecution amended the Motion on 17 January 2006.[4] The Prosecution indicated (1) the potential Prosecution witnesses for which protection is sought, and (2) the potential Prosecution witness for which the right to protective measures is waived.

4. In its Decision of 7 June 2006, the Chamber ordered the Witnesses and Victims Support Section ("WVSS"), pursuant to Rule 34 (A) (i) of the Rules, to "[r]ecommend the adoption of protective measures for victims and witnesses in accordance with Article 21 of the Statute".[5] The Chamber ordered WVSS

"to consult with each potential Prosecution witness seeking protective measures about the necessity for protection, and to determine the nature of the protection deemed necessary in order to implement appropriate protective measures, and to so inform the Chamber."[6]

5. In its submissions to the Chamber pursuant to Rule 33 (B) of the Rules, the Registrar states that potential witnesses AKG, AHL, AJY, AKJ, BGH, AJS, AJC, AKK, AJZ, BHB, ALP, BHJ and AKE raised serious security concerns during interviews and in written affidavits.[7] The Registrar has recommended protective measures for these potential witnesses, which are implemented by the Chamber in the disposition below. The Registrar submits that the potential witnesses have these security concerns because of their professions, residences and names, and because some of their family members in their areas of residence were widely known during the 1994 genocide. As such, disclosure of their identities to the public may lead to serious reprisals against them.

Deliberations

6. Article 21 provides the Chamber with authority to order protective measures for victims and witnesses. Rule 75 elaborates several specific witness protection measures that may be ordered. Subject to these measures, Rule 69 (C) requires the identity of witnesses to be disclosed to the Defence in adequate time for preparation of its case.

7. Measures for the protection of witnesses are granted on a case-by-case basis. The jurisprudence of this Tribunal requires that the witnesses for whom protective measures are sought must have a real fear for their own safety or the safety of their families, and that there must be an objective justification for this fear,[8] as such protective measures are not automatically granted when security concerns are raised by the potential witnesses. These fears may be expressed by persons other than the witnesses themselves. Furthermore, measures for privacy and security of witnesses and victims must be consistent with the rights of the Accused, including his right to a fair and public trial and to adequate time and facilities for the preparation of his defence,[9] as guaranteed under Article 20 of the Statute.

8. The protective measures requested in the Motion include prohibiting public disclosure of identifying information of the potential witnesses, using pseudonyms in all communications between the Parties, and requesting the Defence team and the Accused to keep all identifying information confidential. The Chamber finds that such measures have been granted regularly by the Tribunal.

9. Both the Prosecution and the Registrar have submitted that the potential witnesses fear for their safety and that these fears are justified by the dangers and insecurities described in the reports attached as annexes to the Motion and the Registrar's Request. The Chamber has considered the general security situation in Rwanda, as well as the risks to victims and potential witnesses in and outside Rwanda described in the annexes to the Motion and the Registrar's Request. In light of the supporting material, the Chamber concludes that the fears expressed by potential Prosecution witnesses for their own safety or the safety of their family members, in and outside Rwanda, are justified.

Juvénal Rugambarara*, Decision on the Prosecutor's Motion for Protective Measures for Victims and Witnesses to Crimes Alleged in the Indictment, 31 January 2006, para. 9 (the "Rugambarara Decision"); Prosecutor v. Tharcisse Renzaho, Decision on the Prosecutor's Motion for Protective Measures for Victims and Witnesses to Crimes Alleged in the Indictment, 17 August 2005, paras. 7, 10 (the "Renzaho Decision"); Prosecutor v. Mika Muhimana, Decision on Defence Motion for Protective Measures for Defence Witnesses, 6 July 2004, para. 17 (the "Muhimana Decision"); *Prosecutor v. 10. The Chamber has considered the Registrar's recommended protective measures for potential witnesses designated with the pseudonyms AKG, AHL, AJY, AKJ, BGH, AJS, AJC, AKK, AJZ, BHB, ALP, BHJ and AKE. The Chamber has carefully considered the protective measures in light of the prevailing security situation in Rwanda,[10] the fact that some of the potential witnesses continue to reside in the same areas as they did in 1994, and the fact that, if identified during their potential testimonies, before the Chamber, their lives may be endangered.

11. The Prosecution also seeks to prohibit the Accused from personally possessing any material that contains identifying information of witnesses, including redacted or unredacted witness statements, unless the Accused is, at the time of possession, in the company of Counsel. The Prosecution further requests that the authorities at the United Nations Detention Facility be instructed to ensure compliance with this prohibition. In the Chamber's view, the Accused should have access to identifying information, including witness statements.[11] Denying the Accused this right is unnecessarily restrictive in respect of his or her rights under Article 20.[12] The Chamber is satisfied that the protection of the Prosecution witnesses will be sufficiently guaranteed by prohibiting the Defence team and the Accused from sharing, or otherwise revealing, identifying information to any person or entity other than the Accused and persons designated as members of the Defence team.

12. The Prosecution moves the Chamber to grant deadlines for disclosure of non-redacted witness statements twenty-one (21) days before the witness is due to testify in court, rather than by reference to the date of commencement of the trial. Since the Prosecution disclosed identifying information and non-redacted witness statements for all potential witnesses on 11 July 2006, this request becomes moot.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

I. GRANTS the Prosecution Motion in part, and accordingly

II. ORDERS that the names, addresses, whereabouts of, and other identifying information concerning potential Prosecution witnesses AKG, AHL, AJY, AKJ, BGH, AJS, AJC, AKK, AJZ, BHB, ALP, BHJ and AKE be sealed by the Registry and not included in any public or non-confidential records of the Tribunal;

III. ORDERS that the names, addresses, whereabouts of, and other identifying information concerning potential Prosecution witnesses AKG, AHL, AJY, AKJ, BGH, AJS, AJC, AKK, AJZ, BHB, ALP, BHJ and AKE be communicated only to WVSS personnel by the Registry in accordance with the established procedure, and only in order to implement protective measures for the concerned individuals;

IV. ORDERS that any names, addresses, whereabouts of, and other identifying information which might identify or assist in identifying potential Prosecution witnesses AKG, AHL, AJY, AKJ, BGH, AJS, AJC, AKK, AJZ, BHB, ALP, BHJ and AKE on file in the Tribunal's public records, or any other information which would reveal the identities of the concerned witnesses, be expunged from those documents;

V. PROHIBITS the disclosure to the public or the media, of the names, addresses, whereabouts of, and any other identifying data or any other information on file with the Registry, or any other information which would reveal the identity of potential Prosecution

Protais Zigiranyirazo, Decision on the Transfer of Detained Witnesses, 22 September 2005 (ICTR-2001-73)

Introduction

1. Pursuant to Rules 90 bis, 54, 73 (A) and 73 bis (B) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules"), the Prosecution requests, in its Motion for Transfer and in its Corrigendum, (i) an order temporarily transferring Witnesses BKW, ALQ, BHI, AEY and AHP, who are currently detained in Rwanda, to the Detention Facility of the Tribunal in Arusha, (ii) an order that the Registrar of the Tribunal transmit the order of transfer to the authorities of Rwanda, (iii) an order that these persons be returned at a time that the Chamber so decides to the Rwandan authorities and (iv) any other order that the Chamber deems fit and proper.[1]

2. The Prosecution estimates (a) that the presence of Witness BKW will be required by the Prosecution the week of 9 October 2006; and (b) that the presence of Witnesses ALQ, BHI, AEY and AHP will be required by the Prosecution the week of 16 October 2006.[2]

3. The Prosecution submits that it has complied with the provisions of Rule 90 bis (B) (i) to ensure that the presence of these witnesses is not required for any criminal proceedings in progress in Rwanda during the period the witnesses are required to be present at the Tribunal.[3]

4. The Prosecution also moves the Chamber, in its Motion for Protective Measures, under Article 21 of the Statute of the Tribunal (the "Statute") and Rules 54, 69, 73, and 75 of the Rules, to issue protective orders in identical terms to those ordered by the Chamber in its Decision of 4 September 2006[4] for Witnesses AHQ, AHO, BGU, and AJP.[5] The Prosecution submits that Witnesses AHQ, AHO and BGU appeared in the Prosecution's Submission of 17 January 2006,[6] but were unavailable in Rwanda at the time the Witnesses and Victims Support Section (the "WVSS") acted pursuant to the Chamber's Decision of 7 June 2006.[7] Further, Witness AJP was recently added to the Prosecution witness list to replace a deceased witness. The Prosecution asks the WVSS to make contact with these witnesses and make a recommendation about their protective status to the Chamber.[8]

[8] The Motion for Protective Measures, para. 3.

5. Rule 90 bis (B) of the Rules stipulates in its first two paragraphs that:

> (B) The transfer order shall be issued by a Judge or Trial Chamber only after prior verification that the following conditions have been met:
>
> (i) The presence of the detained witness is not required for any criminal proceedings in progress in the territory of the requested State during the period the witness is required by the Tribunal;
> (ii) Transfer of the witness does not extend the period of his detention as foreseen by the requested State.

6. The conditions for ordering the transfer of a detained witness are not specified in the Rules, and therefore the Judge or the Chamber enjoys large discretion in considering the elements presented in the Motion for Transfer.[9] The Chamber is of the view that the letter dated 5 September 2006 from the Minister of Justice of Rwanda, the most appropriate authority to guarantee the pertinent information on the status of the detainees, read with the request submitted by the Prosecutor, fully meets both requirements as prescribed in Rule 90 bis (B), namely, that the detainees whom the Prosecutor wishes to call are not required for any criminal proceedings in Rwanda during the said period, and that their stay at the Tribunal will not extend the period of their detention.

7. The Chamber considered the submissions of the Registrar concerning the situation in Rwanda, as well as his recommended protective measures for witnesses in its Decision of 4 September 2006. The Chamber further considers the current Motion for Protective Measures, which requests that identical protective measures be extended to Prosecution Witnesses AHQ, AHO, BGU and AJP. The Chamber also notes that Witnesses BKW, ALQ, BHI, AEY and AHP, who are subjects of the Motion for Transfer, also affirmatively requested protective measures, as stated in the Prosecution's Submission of 17 January 2006.[10] The Chamber reaffirms its conclusion stated in the Decision of 4 September 2006 that the fears expressed by the potential Prosecution witnesses for their own safety or the safety of their family members, in and outside Rwanda, are justified. Furthermore, as the trial is set to begin on 18 September 2006, the Chamber extends the protective measures contained in its Decision of 4 September 2006 to Prosecution Witnesses AHQ, AHO, BGU, AJP, BKW, ALQ, BHI, AEY and AHP.

8. The Chamber is concerned about the confidential filing of this Motion for Transfer. It is the Chamber's view that the transparency of the proceedings are served by the filing of documents as public documents; the confidentiality should be reserved for exceptional circumstances, for instance where the protection of a witness is at stake.[11] In the present case, the Chamber considers that only the letter from the Minister of Justice could be deemed to be confidential because it contains identifying information related to the witnesses.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

I. ORDERS that the confidentiality of the Motion for Transfer be lifted by the Registrar while the letter from the Minister of Justice of Rwanda remain confidential and under seal;

II. ORDERS, pursuant to Rule 90 bis (B) of the Rules, that Prosecution Witness BKW be transferred to Arusha, before 9 October 2006, until as soon as practically possible after the individual's testimony has ended;

III. ORDERS, pursuant to Rule 90 bis (B) of the Rules, that the presence of Witnesses ALQ, BHI, AEY and AHP will be required by the Prosecution the week of 16 October 2006, until as soon as practically possible after each individual's testimony has ended;

IV. REMINDS the Registrar of his obligations under Rule 90 bis of the Rules;

V. REQUESTS the Government of the Republic of Rwanda, in accordance with this Order, to cooperate with the Prosecutor and the Registrar and, in conjunction with the Government of the United Republic of Tanzania, the Registrar and the WVSS, to take the necessary measures to implement the present decision; and

VI. ORDERS that the protective measures, as previously ordered in its Decision of 4 September 2006, be extended to Witnesses AHQ, AHO, BGU, AJP, BKW, ALQ, BHI, AEY and AHP.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA (the "Tribunal"),

SITTING as Trial Chamber II, composed of Judge Arlette Ramaroson, Presiding, Judge William H. Sekule and Judge Solomy Balungi Bossa (the "Chamber");

BEING SEIZED OF the Accused Bisengimana's « Requête de la Défense aux fins d'admission de l'attestation du commandant du quartier pénitentiaire des Nations-Unies en lieu et place d'un témoignage oral conformément à la Règle 92 bis (A) et (B) du Règlement de Procédure et de Preuve »,[1] filed on 20 January 2006 (the "Motion");

NOTING that the Prosecutor did not file any Response;

CONSIDERING the Statute of the Tribunal (the "Statute"), and the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules"), in particular Rule 92 bis of the Rules;

HEREBY DECIDES the Motion on the basis of the written submissions of the Defence, pursuant to Rule 73 (A) of the Rules;

RECALLING that during the Pre-Sentencing Hearing held on 19 January 2006, the Chamber invited the Defence to comply with the Provisions of Rule 92 bis of the Rules, in particular, Sub-Rules (A) and (B), if it wished to have admitted the Declaration of 22 December 2005, allegedly made by the [1] "Defence Motion for the admission of the written statement made by Commander of UNDP in lieu of oral testimony in accordance with Rule 92 bis (A) and (B)", attached to which are: (1) a Decision by the Registrar dated 23 January 2006 appointing Mr. Matar Diop as the President Officer to witness the declaration dated 22 December 2005 made by Mr. Saidou Guindo, Commander of UNDF; (2) the Attestation dated 26 January 2006 in conformity with Rule 92 bis (B), attesting that Mr. Saidou Guindo, in the presence of Mr. Matar Diop, confirmed that the contents of the declaration dated 22 December 2005 are true and correct to the best of his knowledge; (3) a Declaration by the Witness dated 26 January 2006 that the declaration he made on 22 December 2005 is true to the best of his knowledge; and (4) the declaration dated 22 December 2005 by Mr. Saidou Guindo concerning the character of the Accused Paul Bisengimana while he was in detention at the UNDF (the "Declaration of 22 December 2005").

Commander of the United Nations Detention Facilities (the "UNDF"), relating to the Accused's behaviour while in detention;[2]

CONSIDERING that the Defence brings the Motion pursuant to Rule 92 bis (A) of the Rules, which provides as follows:

> Rule 92 bis: Proof of Facts Other Than by Oral Evidence
>
> (A) "A Trial Chamber may admit, in whole or in part, the evidence of a witness in the form of a written statement in lieu of oral testimony which goes to proof of a matter other than the acts and conduct of the accused as charged in the indictment.
>
> (i) Factors in favour of admitting evidence in the form of a written statement include, but are not limited to, circumstances in which the evidence in question:
>
>
> (e) relates to issues of the character of the Accused; or
> (f) relates to factors to be taken into consideration in determining sentence (…)";

CONSIDERING the Defence submissions that the Declaration of 22 December 2005 meets the criteria for admissibility under Rule 92 bis of the Rules as identified above, in particular because the witness declared, in the presence of an authorised official appointed by the Registrar of the Tribunal, that the contents of the requested statement are true and correct to the best of his knowledge and belief;

ALSO CONSIDERING that the Defence requests the Chamber to admit the Declaration of 22 December 2005 into evidence, taking into account its relevance and probative value in support of mitigating the sentence to be passed against the Accused especially as it bears on the good character of the Accused while in detention and as it will enlighten the Chamber in arriving at a fair and equitable sentence.

Deliberations

NOTING that the Defence request falls squarely within the ambit of Rule 92 bis of the Rules since the Declaration of 22 December 2005 satisfies the threshold requirements that the evidence sought to be adduced goes to proof of a matter other than the acts and conduct of the Accused as charged in the Indictment and that it in fact relates to factors to be taken into consideration in determining sentence;

NOTING ALSO that the Declaration of 22 December 2005 is accompanied by a duly witnessed declaration by the Commander of the UNDF, Mr. Saidou Guindo himself, indicating that the contents of the Declaration are true and correct to the best of his knowledge, the Chamber finds the Declaration of 22 December 2005 to be admissible under Rule 92 bis of the Rules.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

GRANTS the Motion and admits the Declaration of 22 December 2005 in lieu of the oral testimony of the Commander of the UNDF, Mr. Saidou Guindo.

I. Introduction

A. Overview of the Case

1. Paul Bisengimana (the "Accused"), former bourgmestre of Gikoro commune in Kigali-Rural préfecture, has pleaded guilty to aiding and abetting the murder and extermination of Tutsi civilians at Musha Church and Ruhanga Protestant Church and School (the "Ruhanga Complex") in Gikoro commune between 13 and 15 April 1994.

2. From 7 April 1994, massacres of Tutsis and murders of political opponents were perpetrated throughout the territory of Rwanda by militiamen, military personnel and gendarmes. In every region of the country, Tutsis fled from the massacres and sought refuge in places they thought to be safe. In many of these places, the refugees were attacked and killed, often with the complicity of the authorities.

3. The massacres in Gikoro commune started on 7 April 1994. Thousands of Tutsi civilians, fleeing from the on-going attacks in Kigali-rural préfecture, sought refuge in Musha Church in Gikoro commune between 8 and 13 April 1994. On or about 12 April 1994, with the knowledge of the Accused, members of the Rwandan Army distributed weapons to Interahamwe militiamen and civilians at Musha Church to be used to attack the refugees.

4. On or about 13 April 1994, in the presence of the Accused, Rwandan Army soldiers, Interahamwe, armed civilians and communal policemen launched an attack against the Tutsi civilians at Musha Church using guns, grenades, machetes and pangas. A civilian militiaman set fire to the Church during the attack. More than a thousand Tutsis were killed as a result of the attack. The Accused was present when a Tutsi civilian named Rusanganwa was murdered at that location.

5. Many Tutsi civilians had also sought refuge at the Ruhanga Protestant Church and School in Gikoro commune between 8 and 10 April 1994. Between 10 and 15 April 1994, an attack was launched on the Ruhanga Complex by a brigadier, soldiers from the Presidential Guard, civilian militiamen and communal policemen. The attackers used guns, grenades, machetes and pangas. Many Tutsi civilians were killed. Paul Bisengimana knew of the previous attack at Musha Church and, despite his position as bourgmestre of Gikoro commune, did not take any steps to protect the Tutsis refugees.

6. On 7 December 2005, Trial Chamber II (the "Chamber") accepted the guilty plea of the Accused and found him guilty of having aided and abetted the commission of murder and extermination as crimes against humanity.

B. THE INDICTMENT

7. Under the Amended Indictment of 1 December 2005 (the "Indictment"), the Prosecution charged Paul Bisengimana for his individual responsibility on five counts: genocide (Art. 6 (1) and 6 (3) of the Statute[1]), complicity in genocide (Art. 6 (1)), and murder (Art. 6 (1)) extermination (Art. 6 (1)) and rape (Art. 6 (1) and 6 (3)) as crimes against humanity. At the second further appearance of the Accused on 7 December 2005, the Prosecution withdrew the counts of genocide, complicity in genocide and rape as crimes against humanity. The Indictment is annexed to this judgement (Annex C).

C. SUMMARY OF THE PROCEDURE

8. On 4 December 2001, Paul Bisengimana was arrested in Mali. On 11 March 2002, the Accused was transferred to the United Nations Detention Facility in Arusha (the "UNDF"). On 18 March 2002, the Accused made his initial appearance and pleaded not guilty to all counts.

9. On 19 October 2005, the Parties filed a joint motion for consideration of a guilty plea agreement between Paul Bisengimana and the Office of the Prosecutor.[2]

10. On 17 November 2005, during his further appearance, the Accused pleaded guilty to murder and extermination as crimes against humanity pursuant to Article 6 (1) of the Statute.[3] The Chamber dismissed the joint motion for consideration of a guilty plea agreement for not being unequivocal. On behalf of the Accused, the Chamber entered a plea of not guilty regarding the counts of murder and extermination and duly noted the plea of not guilty for all the other counts.[4]

11. The Indictment was filed on 1 December 2005.

12. On 7 December 2005, during his second further appearance, the Accused pleaded guilty to the counts of murder and extermination as crimes against humanity pursuant to Article 6 (1) of the Statute.[5] The Chamber found the Accused guilty of having aided and abetted the commission of murder (Count 3) and extermination (Count 4) as crimes against humanity pursuant to Article 6 (1) of the Statute.[6] The Chamber granted the Prosecution motion for withdrawal and dismissal of the remaining counts but denied the Prosecution request for acquittal on these counts because the Prosecution had failed to justify its motion on this point.[7]

13. A Pre-Sentencing Hearing was held on 19 January 2006.

14. A full review of the procedural history is annexed to this judgement (Annex A).

D. The Tribunal and Its Jurisdiction

15. The Judgement in the case of Prosecutor v. Paul Bisengimana is rendered by Trial Chamber II of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda (the "Tribunal"), composed of Judge Arlette Ramaroson, presiding, Judge William H. Sekule, and Judge Solomy B. Bossa.

16. The Tribunal is governed by the Statute annexed to Security Council Resolution 955 and by the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the Tribunal (the "Rules").[8]

17. The Tribunal was established to prosecute persons responsible for serious violations of international humanitarian law committed in the territory of Rwanda and Rwandan citizens responsible for such violations committed in the territory of neighbouring States. The Tribunal has jurisdiction over acts of genocide, crimes against humanity, and serious violations of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II thereto, committed between 1 January 1994 and 31 December 1994.

II. The Guilty Plea

A. Applicable Law

18. The Chamber notes that there is no specific provision in the Statute regarding guilty pleas and plea agreements. The relevant provisions of the Rules regarding the procedure relating to guilty pleas and plea agreements are Rule 62 (B) and Rule 62 bis.[9]

B. The Guilty Plea of 7 December 2005

19. On 7 December 2005, after Paul Bisengimana pleaded guilty to murder (Count 3) and extermination (Count 4) as crimes against humanity pursuant to Article 6 (1) of the Statute, the Chamber proceeded to verify the validity of the plea.

20. The Chamber summarised the consequences of the plea. It indicated that when an accused pleads not guilty, he is presumed innocent until his guilt is established beyond reasonable doubt. In consequence, an accused pleading not guilty has a right to a fair trial; to cross-examine Prosecution

[8] Originally adopted by the Judges of the Tribunal on 5 July 1995, the Rules were last amended on 7 June 2005 during the Fifteenth Plenary Session.

[9] Rule 62: Initial Appearance of Accused and Plea

(B) If an accused pleads guilty in accordance with Rule 62 (A) (v), or requests to change his plea to guilty, the Trial Chamber shall satisfy itself that the guilty plea:

(i) is made freely and voluntarily;

(ii) is an informed plea;

(iii) is unequivocal; and

(iv) is based on sufficient facts for the crime and accused's participation in it, either on the basis of objective indicia or of lack of any material disagreement between the parties about the facts of the case.

Thereafter the Trial Chamber may enter a finding of guilt and instruct the Registrar to set a date for the sentencing hearing.

Rule 62 bis: Plea Agreement Procedure

(A) The Prosecutor and the Defence may agree that, upon the accused entering a plea of guilty to the indictment or to one or more counts of the indictment, the Prosecutor shall do one or more of the following before the Trial Chamber:

(i) apply to amend the indictment accordingly;

(ii) submit that a specific sentence or sentencing range is appropriate;

(iii) not oppose a request by the accused for a particular sentence or sentencing range.

(B) The Trial Chamber shall not be bound by any agreement specified in paragraph (A)

(C) If a plea agreement has been reached by the parties, the Trial Chamber shall require the disclosure of the agreement in open session or, on a showing of good cause, in closed session, at the time the accused pleads guilty in accordance with Rule 62 (A) (v), or requests to change his or her plea to guilty.

witnesses, to call Defence witnesses, and to testify in his defence. The Chamber asked the Accused if he understood that by pleading guilty, he was renouncing these rights. The Accused responded that he understood and that he consciously waived these rights.[10]

21. Pursuant to Rule 62 (B) (i), (ii), and (iii) of the Rules, the Chamber first asked if the guilty plea was made freely and voluntarily; in other words, if the Accused was fully aware of what he was doing and was not threatened or pressured to so plea. The Accused answered that he was aware of what he was doing, that there were no threats against him, and that he pleaded guilty of his own will.[11]

22. Secondly, the Chamber asked the Accused if the plea was informed: that is if the Accused clearly understood the nature of the charges brought against him and the consequences of the plea for each of the counts.[12] The Accused answered that he pleaded "advisedly."[13]

23. Thirdly, the Chamber asked the Accused if his plea was unequivocal: that is whether the Accused knew that the plea was not compatible with any defence that would contradict it. The Accused answered that there was absolutely no incompatibility.[14]

24. Further, the Chamber notes the following elements of the Plea Agreement: the Accused elected freely, "with full knowledge of the facts," to plead guilty;[15] the Accused decided to plead guilty after a long reflection during which he became fully aware of the scope and consequences of the offences he had committed;[16] the Accused decided to change his plea after being fully briefed on the legal consequences of so changing and having accepted these consequences;[17] the Accused's decision to plead guilty was voluntary, informed and unequivocal.[18]

25. In its oral ruling of 7 December 2005, the Chamber was satisfied that, on account of the absence of any disagreement on the part of the Prosecutor and the Accused about the facts of the case, the plea was based on sufficient facts to establish the crimes and the participation of the Accused in their commission. The Chamber stated that the requirements of Rule 62 (B) were met and it therefore declared the Accused guilty of having aided and abetted the commission of the crimes of murder and extermination as crimes against humanity pursuant to Article 6 (1) of the Statute.[19] The Chamber granted the Prosecution motion for withdrawal and dismissal of the counts to which the Accused had pleaded not guilty.[20] However, the Chamber denied the Prosecution motion for acquittal on those counts because the Prosecution had failed to justify its motion on this point.[21]

III. Case on Merits

27. Paul Bisengimana is married and is the father of ten children. He had seven children with his first wife, Dorca Kantarama, who died in 1991. He later married Marie Hérondine Mukandagijimana, with whom he had two children. He adopted his second wife's child.[27]

28. Paul Bisengimana went to primary school in Gikoro commune. He completed the "premier cycle" of his secondary education in Rwamagana in three years. He then went to Byumba école normale, which he left in 1970 with a teacher's D 5 certificate.[28]

29. From 1970 to 1974, Paul Bisengimana worked in his native commune as a teacher. From 1974 to 1978, he was headmaster of a secondary school in Nyanza. From 1978 to 1981, he was Presiding Judge of the Cantonal Court of Nyamata, Kigali préfecture.[29] In May 1981, he was appointed bourgmestre of Gikoro commune, a position he held until 1994, when he went into exile.[30]

B. Factual and Legal Findings

1. Individual Criminal Responsibility for Aiding and Abetting Pursuant to Article 6 (1) of the Statute

a. The Indictment

30. In support of the counts of murder and extermination, the Indictment alleges that during April 1994, in the Bugesera region of Kigali-Rural préfecture, Paul Bisengimana acting individually and/or in concert with others, was responsible for killing or causing persons to be killed during mass killing events in Gikoro commune and its environs, as part of a widespread and systematic attack against a civilian population on political, ethnic or racial grounds.[31] For all the acts adduced in support of this charge, the Prosecutor alleges that the Accused either planned, or otherwise aided and abetted in the planning, preparation or execution of the said offence pursuant to Article 6 (1) of the Statute.[32]

b. Applicable Law

31. Article 6 (1) reflects the principle that criminal responsibility for any crime in the Statute is incurred not only by individuals who physically commit the crime, but also by individuals who participate in and contribute to the commission of the crime in other ways, such as by aiding and abetting.[33]

32. "Aiding" means assisting another to commit a crime.[34] "Abetting" means facilitating, encouraging, advising or instigating the commission of a crime.[35] In legal usage, including that of the Statute and of the case law of the Tribunal and the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (the "ICTY"), the two terms are so often used conjunctively that they are treated as a single broad legal concept.[36]

33. Aiding and abetting is a form of accessory liability. The actus reus of the crime is not performed by the accused but by another person referred to as the principal offender.[37] The accused's participation may take place at the planning, preparation or execution stage of the crime and may take the form of a positive act or omission, occurring before or after the act of the principal offender.[38] The Prosecution is required to demonstrate that the accused carried out an act of substantial practical assistance, encouragement, or moral support to the principal offender, culminating in the latter's actual commission of the crime.[39] While the assistance need not be indispensable to the crime,[40] it must have a substantial effect on the commission of the crime.[41]

34. Mere presence at the crime scene may constitute aiding and abetting where it is demonstrated to have a significant encouraging effect on the principal offender, particularly if the individual standing by was the superior of the principal offender or was otherwise in a position of authority.[42] In those circumstances, an omission may constitute the actus reus of aiding and abetting, provided that this failure to act had a decisive effect on the commission of the crime.[43]

35. However, it is not necessary that the person aiding and abetting the principal offender be present during the commission of the crime.[44]

36. The mens rea of aiding and abetting is demonstrated by proof that the aider and abettor is aware that his act is assisting the commission of the crime by the principal offender.[45] The aider and abettor must have known the intent of the principal offender, and although he need not know the precise offence being committed by the principal offender, he must be aware of the essential elements of the crime.[46] With respect to an aider and abettor who is in a position of authority vis-à-vis the principal offender, his mens rea may be deduced from the fact that he knew that his presence would be interpreted by the principal offender as a sign of support or encouragement.[47]

C. THE PLEA AGREEMENT

37. Paul Bisengimana was appointed bourgmestre of Gikoro commune by the President of the Republic of Rwanda[48] upon the recommendation of the Minister of the Interior. He acknowledges that as bourgmestre, he represented executive power at the communal level.[49] Further, he had administrative authority over the entire commune and was responsible for ensuring peace, public order and the safety of persons and property, and for the implementation of local laws and regulations, as well as government policy.[50] The Accused admits that he had a duty to protect the population, prevent or punish the illegal acts of the perpetrators of attacks against persons or property.[51] Further, he was responsible for informing the central government of any situation worthy of interest in Gikoro commune.[52]

38. By his own account, the Accused's position as bourgmestre meant that he exercised both de jure and de facto authority over all public servants and other holders of public office within Gikoro commune,[53] including, but not limited to, the conseillers de secteur.[54] The conseillers de secteur represented executive power at the secteur level and were responsible for maintaining law and order in their respective secteurs.[55]

39. Paul Bisengimana acknowledges that he had a duty to protect the population, prevent or punish the illegal acts of the perpetrators of the attacks at Musha Church and Ruhanga Complex but that he failed to do so.[56] He admits that he had the means to oppose the killings of Tutsi civilians in Gikoro commune, but that he remained indifferent to the attacks.[57] With respect to the Musha Church massacres, Paul Bisengimana acknowledges that his presence during the attack would have had an encouraging effect on the perpetrators and given them the impression that he endorsed the killing.[58]

40. In the following sections, the Chamber will consider the individual criminal responsibility of the Accused under Article 6 (1) of the Statute in relation to the counts to which he has pleaded guilty.

2. Crimes Against Humanity (Article 3 of the Statute)

a. General Elements of the Crime

41. For an enumerated act under Article 3 of the Statute to qualify as a crime against humanity, it must be proved that the crime was committed as part of a widespread or systematic attack against any civilian population on national, political, ethnic, racial or religious grounds.

i. The Attack

42. The Chamber recalls that 'attack' has been defined as "an unlawful act, event, or series of events of the kind listed in Article 3 (a) through (i) of the Statute."[59]

43. The Chamber notes that, based on the practice of this Tribunal and the ICTY, the applicable standard is "widespread or systematic" and not "widespread and systematic."[60]

[59] Kajelijeli, Judgement (TC), para. 867; Semanza, Judgement (TC), para. 327.
[60] The French version of the Statute requires that the attack be widespread and systematic, whereas the English version requires that the attack be widespread or systematic. In the practice of both the ICTR and the ICTY, the English version has been accepted, accepted as being consonant with customary international law, Kunarac et al., Judgement (AC), para. 93.

44. The "widespread" element of the attack has been given slightly different meanings in the Tribunal's judgements.[61] The Chamber notes, however, that this element is always taken to refer to the scale of the attack, and sometimes to the number of victims. The Chamber adopts the Kajelijeli Judgement definition, which is "large scale, involving many victims."[62]

45. The Chamber, agreeing with the Kajelijeli Judgement, finds that "systematic" describes the organised nature of the attack.[63]

46. In the Plea agreement, the Accused admits that from 7 April 1994, massacres of the Tutsi population and the murder of numerous political opponents were perpetrated throughout the territory of Rwanda, including Gikoro commune. These crimes were carried out by militiamen, military personnel, and gendarmes.[64]

47. Based on the facts contained in the Plea Agreement, the Chamber is convinced that widespread attacks were committed in Gikoro commune in April 1994 because the attacks resulted in a lager number of victims.

ii. The Attack Must Be Directed Against a Civilian Population

48. The Akayesu Judgement definition of 'civilian population' has been consistently followed in the jurisprudence of the Tribunal:[65]

> […] people who are not taking any active part in the hostilities, including members of the armed forces who laid down their arms and those persons placed hors de combat by sickness, wounds, detention or any other cause. Where there are certain individuals within the civilian population who do not come within the definition of civilians, this does not deprive the population of its civilian character.[66]

49. As noted in Blaškić Judgement,

> "the specific situation of the victim at the moment the crimes were committed, rather than his status, must be taken into account in determining his standing as a civilian."[67]

50. Moreover, the term "population" does not require that crimes against humanity be directed against the entire population of a geographical territory or area.[68] The Trial Chamber in Semanza Judgement further clarified that:

> The victim(s) of the enumerated act need not necessarily share geographic or other defining features with the civilian population that forms the primary target of the underlying attack, but such characteristics may be used to demonstrate that the enumerated act forms part of the attack.[69]

51. The Chamber agrees with this jurisprudence.

52. In the Plea Agreement, the Accused admits that massacres of the Tutsi population and the murder of numerous political opponents were perpetrated.[70] He further admits that the attacks against Tutsi civilians gathered at Musha Church and at Ruhanga Protestant Church and School in Gikoro commune were part of the ongoing attacks against Tutsi civilians occurring in most parts of Rwanda during April 1994.[71]

53. Based on the facts contained in the Plea Agreement, the Chamber is convinced that the widespread attacks in Gikoro commune were committed against a civilian population.

iii. The Attack Must Be Committed on Discriminatory Grounds

54. The Chamber recalls the Akayesu Judgement where the "discriminatory grounds" element was considered to be jurisdictional in nature, limiting the jurisdiction of the Tribunal to crimes committed on "national, political, ethnic, racial or religious grounds."[72] Nonetheless, in the Kajelijeli Judgement the Chamber noted that:

> such acts committed against persons outside the discriminatory categories need not necessarily fall out with the jurisdiction of the Tribunal, if the perpetrator's intention in committing these acts is to support or further the attack on the group discriminated against on one of the enumerated grounds.[73]

55. In the Plea Agreement, Paul Bisengimana acknowledges that massacres of the Tutsi population and the murder of numerous political opponents were perpetrated.[74] He acknowledges that from 7 April 1994, in all regions of the country, Tutsis fleeing from massacres sought refuge in locations that they considered to be safe. In many of these places, the refugees were attacked, abducted, and massacred, often with the complicity of some of the authorities.[75]

56. Based on the Plea Agreement, the Chamber finds that the widespread attacks against the civilian population were committed on discriminatory grounds because most of the victims were Tutsis.

iv. The Mental Element of Crimes Against Humanity

57. The Chamber agrees with the reasoning in the Kajelijeli Judgement that "the accused must have acted with knowledge of the broader context of the attack and knowledge that his act formed part of the attack on the civilian population."[76]

58. In the Plea Agreement, the Accused admits that from 7 April 1994, massacres of the Tutsi population and the murder of numerous political opponents were perpetrated in Gikoro commune.[77] He acknowledges that the attacks against the Tutsi civilians gathered at Musha Church and at Ruhanga Protestant Church and School were part of the ongoing attacks against Tutsi civilians which were occurring in most parts of Rwanda.[78]

59. Based on the Plea Agreement, the Chamber is convinced that the Accused knew the broader context of the attacks occurring in Rwanda in April 1994 and knew that his acts formed part of widespread attacks committed against Tutsi civilians.

b. Findings

60. The Chamber finds that the attacks at Musha Church and at Ruhanga Protestant Church and School in Gikoro commune in April 1994 were launched against Tutsi civilians on discriminatory grounds and were of a widespread nature because they resulted in a large number of victims.

3. Crimes Against Humanity – Extermination

a. Indictment

61. Count 4 of the Indictment charges the Accused with extermination as a crime against humanity under Article 3 (b) of the Statute and states that:

> During the month of April 1994, in the Bugesera region of Kigali-Rural préfecture, Republic of Rwanda, Paul Bisengimana acting individually and in concert with others, was responsible for killing or causing persons to be killed, during mass killing events in Gikoro commune and its environs, as part of a widespread and systematic attack against a civilian population on political, ethnic or racial grounds.[79]
>
> Between 6 and 21 April 1994, there existed widespread or systematic attacks occurring throughout Rwanda, directed against a civilian population on political, ethnic or racial grounds.[80]
>
> Paul Bisengimana aided and abetted in the planning, preparation, or execution of the killing of Tutsi civilians and by his acts or through persons he assisted with his knowledge and consent.[81]
>
> As a direct consequence of his conduct including the provision of moral support to the attackers by Paul Bisengimana, thousands of civilian men, women and children were killed.[82]
>
> Paul Bisengimana's affirmative acts during the month of April 1994, viz: aiding and abetting in the killing of Tutsi civilians in Musha church in Gikoro commune and at the Ruhanga Protestant Church, Ruhanga cellule, Gicaca secteur, Gikoro commune are specified at paragraphs 17 – 20 and 24 – 28 above, and are hereby reiterated and incorporated herein by reference.[83]

b. The Plea Agreement

62. Paul Bisengimana acknowledges his guilt for having aided and abetted the commission of extermination as a crime against humanity.[84]

63. The Accused acknowledges that between 8 and 13 April 1994, more than a thousand Tutsi civilians sought refuge at Musha Church, situated in Rutoma secteur, Gikoro commune, Kigali-Rural préfecture, having fled from attacks against Tutsi civilians occurring throughout the préfecture.[85]

64. The Chamber notes that whereas the Indictment mentions that Juvénal Rugambarara was among the persons present during the attack on Musha Church,[86] his name is not mentioned in the Plea Agreement.[87] The Chamber has noted this difference but is of the opinion that it does not affect the validity of the Accused's plea, nor his responsibility for the commission of the offence.

65. The Accused acknowledges that:

a) On or about 12 April 1994, weapons such as guns and grenades were distributed to Interahamwe militiamen and other armed civilians at Musha Church by members of the Rwandan Army.[88]
b) He was aware of this and the fact that these weapons would be used to attack Tutsi civilians seeking refuge at Musha Church.[89]
c) On or about 13 April 1994, an attack was launched against the Tutsi civilians seeking refuge at Musha Church. The attackers used guns, grenades, machetes, pangas and other traditional weapons.[90]
d) This attack resulted in the killing of more than a thousand Tutsi civilians.[91]
e) During the attack, a civilian militiaman named Manda set fire to the Church, causing the death of many refugees.[92]
f) The Accused was present during the attack, along with Laurent Semanza, soldiers from the Rwandan Army, Interahamwe militiamen, armed civilians and communal policemen.[93]
g) His presence at Musha Church during the attack would have had an encouraging effect on the perpetrators and given them the impression that he endorsed the killing of Tutsi civilians gathered there.[94]

66. Paul Bisengimana acknowledges that he had the means to oppose the killings of Tutsi civilians in Gikoro commune, but that he remained indifferent to the attack.[95]

ii. Events at Ruhanga Protestant Church and School

67. The Accused acknowledges that between 8 and 10 April 1994, many Tutsi civilians sought refuge at Ruhanga Protestant Church and School, situated in Ruhanga cellule, Gicaca secteur, Gikoro commune, Kigali-Rural préfecture, having fled from attacks against Tutsi civilians occurring throughout the préfecture.[96]

68. The Accused acknowledges that

a) Between 10 and 15 April 1994, Brigadier Rwabukumba, along with soldiers from the Presidential Guard, civilian militiamen, and communal policemen, launched an attack against the Tutsi civilians seeking refuge in Ruhanga Complex.[97]

b) During this attack, the attackers used guns, grenades, machetes, pangas and other traditional weapons, killing many of the Tutsi refugees.[98]
c) Despite his position as bourgmestre, and his knowledge of the facts that the refugees at Musha church had been attacked on 13 April 1994, he took no active steps to protect the Tutsi refugees who sought refuge at Ruhanga Complex between 10 and 15 April 1994.[99]

69. Paul Bisengimana acknowledges that he had the means to oppose the killings of Tusti civilians in Gikoro commune, but that he remained indifferent to the said attacks.[100]

c. Applicable Law

70. The Chamber recalls that extermination consists of an act or a combination of acts, which contributes to the killing of a large number of individuals.[101] It is irrelevant that the Accused's participation in the act is remote or indirect. It is the large number of killings that distinguishes the crime of extermination from the crime of murder.[102]

71. To establish the mens rea of extermination, the Prosecution must prove that the accused intended the killings, or was reckless or grossly negligent as to whether the killings would result and was aware that his acts or omissions formed part of a mass killing event.[103] The accused must also be shown to have known of the vast scheme of collective murders directed against a civilian population on discriminatory grounds and to have been willing to take part in that scheme.[104] As an aider or abettor of extermination as a crime against humanity, the Chamber should consider whether the Accused knew of the criminal intent of the principal perpetrator and knew that his actions assisted in the commission of the crime.

72. Therefore, in order to be convicted of extermination as a crime against humanity, an accused must have (i) participated in the mass killing of others, or in the creation of conditions of life leading to the mass killing of others; (ii) intended the killings, or been reckless or grossly negligent as to whether the killings would result; and (iii) been aware that his acts or omissions formed part of a mass killing event.[105]

d. Findings

i. Musha Church Massacres

73. Based on the facts admitted by the Accused and recalling the Chamber's findings that the attack on Musha Church in Gikoro commune was launched against Tutsi civilians on discriminatory grounds, was widespread and resulted in a large number of victims, the Chamber finds that this attack amounts to extermination.

[105] Kayishema and Ruzindana, Judgement (TC), para. 144; Bagilishema, Judgement (TC), para. 89.

74. The Chamber finds that the Accused participated in the attack against Musha Church by being present and that he was aware that his presence would have encouraged the criminal conduct of the perpetrators of the attack.

75. The Chamber is convinced that the Accused knew of the criminal intent of the principal perpetrators because of his admission that he was aware that arms had been distributed to Interahamwe militiamen and other armed civilians at Musha Church and that these weapons would be used to attack the Tutsi population who had sought refuge there.

76. Accordingly, the Chamber is satisfied that Paul Bisengimana's presence at Musha Church on or about 13 April 1994 aided and abetted the extermination of Tutsi civilians there.

ii. Ruhanga Protestant Church and School Massacres

77. Based on the facts admitted by the Accused and recalling the Chamber's findings that the attack on Ruhanga Protestant Church and School in Gikoro commune which occurred after the attack on Musha Church was launched against Tutsi civilians on discriminatory grounds, was widespread and resulted in a large number of victims, the Chamber finds that this attack amounts to extermination.

78. The Chamber finds that although the Accused may not have been present during the attack, he had reason to know that an attack would be launched against the Tutsi civilians gathered there because of the earlier attack on Musha Church. Moreover, the Chamber finds that despite the Accused's position as bourgmestre of Gikoro commune, he did not take any active steps to protect these Tutsi civilians. Although the Accused acknowledges that he had a duty to protect these civilians, the Chamber considers that the Accused failed protect the refugees.

79. The Chamber is convinced that, as a person of authority, the Accused's omission to act to prevent the attack amounts to gross negligence. The Chamber finds that the Accused must have known that his omission to act would allow the massacres to take place.

80. In light of these circumstances, the Chamber is satisfied that the Accused knew the criminal intent of the perpetrators of the attack on the Ruhanga Complex.

81. Therefore, the Chamber considers that the Accused's omission to act aided and abetted the commission of the extermination of Tutsi civilian refugees at Ruhanga Protestant Church and School.

iii. General Findings

82. The Chamber finds that the Accused is individually criminally responsible pursuant to Article 6 (1) of the Statute for aiding and abetting the extermination of members of the Tutsi population at Musha Church and Ruhanga Church and School in Gikoro commune in April 1994. The Chamber finds the Accused guilty of extermination as a crime against humanity under Article 3 (b) of the Statute and convicts him accordingly.

4. Crimes Against Humanity – Murder

a. Indictment

83. Count 3 of the Indictment charges the Accused with murder as a crime against humanity under Article 3 (a) of the Statute and states that:

> During the month of April 1994, in the Bugesera region of Kigali-Rural préfecture, Republic of Rwanda, Paul Bisengimana acting individually was responsible for killing or causing persons to be killed in Gikoro commune and its environs, as part of a widespread and systematic attack against a civilian population on political, ethnic or racial grounds.[106]

Paul Bisengimana aided and abetted in the planning, preparation, or execution of the killing of Tutsi civilians, by his acts or through persons he assisted, with his knowledge and consent.[107]

Among the Tutsi civilians killed as a consequence of Paul Bisengimana's conduct are a Tutsi man called Rusanganwa. In that regard, Paul Bisengimana was present during the attack at Musha church in Rutoma secteur, Gikoro commune, on 13 April 1994, when Rusanganwa, who had sought refuge at the said location, was murdered.[108]

b. The Plea Agreement

84. The Accused acknowledges his guilt for having aided and abetted the commission of murder as a crime against humanity.[109]

85. The Accused acknowledges that during the attack at Musha Church on 13 April 1994, he was present when a Tutsi man called Rusanganwa, who had sought refuge there, was murdered.[110]

86. The Accused acknowledges that he had the means to oppose the killings of Tutsi civilians in Gikoro commune, but that he remained indifferent to the attack.[111]

c. Applicable Law

87. The Chamber recalls that murder is the intentional killing of a person, or the intentional infliction of grievous bodily harm knowing that such harm is likely to cause the victim's death or being reckless as to whether death will result, without lawful justification or excuse.[112] Murder is punishable as a crime against humanity when committed as part of a widespread or systematic attack against a civilian population on discriminatory grounds. The Chamber recalls that it is the scale of the killings that distinguishes extermination from murder as a crime against humanity.[113]

88. With respect to the Accused's mens rea as an aider or abettor of murder as a crime against humanity, the Chamber should consider whether the Accused knew of the criminal intent of the principal perpetrator and knew that his actions assisted in the commission of the crime.

d. Findings

89. As a preliminary matter, the Chamber recalls that the French version of the Statute describes the culpable act in Article 3 (a) of the Statute as 'assassinat', that is premeditated murder, whereas the English version of the same article describes it as 'murder.'[114] The Chamber further recalls that in the original French version of the Plea Agreement, Rusanganwa was 'assassiné'[115] that is murdered with premeditation. This fact is not disputed. However, the Chamber recalls that it is not alleged that the Accused directly committed the murder nor that he shared the intent of the principal offender, but that he aided and abetted the crime. Therefore, the Chamber must examine if the mens rea of the Accused was that of an aider and abettor when Rusanganwa's murder was committed, in other words whether he knew the criminal intent of the principal perpetrator and he knew that his presence encouraged the commission of the crime.

90. The Chamber also notes that a reading of the Indictment[116] suggests that there are several murder charges against the Accused. However, the Plea Agreement only refers to the murder of Rusanganwa, committed during the attack at Musha Church.[117] Accordingly, the Chamber has only examined the facts in support of the specific murder alleged in the Indictment and acknowledged by the Accused, where one victim is clearly identified.

91. The Chamber has already found that the attack at Musha Church was a widespread attack against a civilian population on discriminatory grounds.

92. It is not disputed that a Tutsi man named Rusanganwa was murdered with premeditation. On the basis of the facts admitted by the Accused, the Chamber finds that the Accused was present when Rusanganwa was murdered during the attack at Musha Church.

93. The Chamber is convinced that Paul Bisengimana knew that the murder of Rusanganwa was part of a widespread attack against Tutsis civilians on ethnic grounds. The Chamber is also convinced, based on the factual circumstances of the case that Paul Bisengimana knew the criminal intent of the perpetrator of the murder of Rusanganwa. The Chamber recalls its reasoning at Paragraph 75 in support of this finding.

94. The Chamber finds that the Accused participated in Rusanganwa's murder by being present when the crime was committed. The Accused was aware that his presence would encourage the criminal conduct of the principal perpetrator and give the impression that he endorsed the murder. Moreover, the Chamber recalls that the Accused acknowledges that he had the means to oppose the killings of the Tutsi civilians but that he remained indifferent to the attacks.

95. The Chamber is satisfied that the Accused is individually criminally responsible pursuant to Article 6 (1) of the Statute for aiding and abetting the murder of a Tutsi civilian named Rusanganwa at Musha Church in Gikoro commune in April 1994. Consequently, the Chamber finds the Accused guilty of murder as a crime against humanity under Article 3 (a) of the Statute.

e. Cumulative Convictions

i. Applicable Law

96. The Chamber recalls that the general test for cumulative convictions was reaffirmed in the Krstić Judgement:

> The established jurisprudence of the Tribunal is that multiple convictions entered under different statutory provisions, but based on the same conduct, are permissible only if each statutory provision has a materially distinct element not contained within the other. An element [115] The French version of the Plea Agreement which is the original states that Rusanganwa was "assassiné" during the attack at paragraph 37.

[116] Indictment, para. 39.
[117] Plea Agreement, para. 37.

is materially distinct from another if it requires proof of a fact not required by the other element. Where this test is not met, only the conviction under the more specific provision will be entered. The more specific offence subsumes the less specific one, because the commission of the former necessarily entails the commission of the latter.[118]

97. The Čelebići Judgement explains that when facts are regulated by two different provisions, a conviction should be entered only under the provision that contains an additional materially distinct element.[119]

98. The Chamber takes note that the distinct elements test for permissible cumulative convictions should not be applied mechanically or blindly. The ICTY Appeals Chamber has urged that this test be applied carefully to avoid prejudice to the accused. [120]

ii. Findings

99. The Chamber has reflected on the fact that the Plea Agreement was initially based on the 31 October 2005 Indictment which charged the Accused for his direct participation in the murder of Rusanganwa.[121] This Indictment charged the Accused for cutting the arm of Rusanganwa with a machete, after which Rusanganwa bled to death. In contrast, the 1 December 2005 Indictment on which the Plea Agreement is now based only refers to the Accused's presence during the attack at Musha Church when a Tutsi man called Rusanganwa was killed.[122]

100. In the instant case, both Rusanganwa's murder the extermination at Musha Church were planned and prepared by the principal perpetrators. The Chamber considers that the murder of Rusanganwa is included in the crime of extermination committed at Musha Church because Rusanganwa was one of the civilian victims killed during this widespread attack on discriminatory ground.

101. In the instant case, the Chamber has found that the Accused had the required mens rea of an aider and abettor: he knew the criminal intent of the principal perpetrators of extermination and murder, that those crimes were planned and that his presence assisted the commission of the crime. Upon reflection, the Chamber considers that the same set of facts proves the mental element of aiding and abetting murder and extermination as crimes against humanity at Musha Church.

102. The Chamber observes that the charges of extermination and murder at Musha Church are supported by the same set of facts and that the offences were committed with the same mode of participation on the part of the Accused. Thus, in that regard, the crimes of aiding and abetting murder and extermination as crimes against humanity are not materially distinct.

103. The Chamber considers that the murder of Rusanganwa is best understood as an offence included in the crime of extermination committed at Musha Church. Consequently, two convictions on the basis of ideal concurrence of crimes would not be justified in these circumstances as they would not provide a better or more complete description of the entire criminal conduct of the Accused. The Chamber considers that the Accused should only be convicted of extermination as a crime against humanity for the offences committed at Musha Church, this crime being more specific than the crime of murder in light of its large scale which is an additional materially distinct element.

104. The Chamber recalls that on 7 December 2005, the Accused was found guilty of murder and extermination as crimes against humanity after it accepted the guilty plea of the Accused.

105. At this stage of the proceedings, the Chamber decides that it is in the interests of justice and the fairness of the proceedings to enter a conviction only with respect to the count of extermination as a crime against humanity and not with respect to the count of murder. Accordingly, the Chamber will sentence the Accused only with respect to the extermination conviction.

IV. Issues Relating to the Sentence

A. Applicable Texts and Principles

106. The Chamber recalls that the Tribunal was established to contribute to the process of national reconciliation and to the restoration and maintenance of peace and to ensure that the violations of international humanitarian law in Rwanda were halted and effectively redressed.[123] The Chamber considers that a fair trial and, in the event of a conviction, a just sentence, contribute towards these goals.

107. The Chamber will sentence Paul Bisengimana pursuant to the provisions of Articles 22 and 23 of the Statute and Rules 100 and 101 of the Rules. The Chamber notes that the only penalty the Tribunal can impose is a prison term. Under Rule 101 (A) of the Rules, such a term shall not exceed life imprisonment.

108. The Statute and the Rules do not provide for specific penalties for any of the crimes within the jurisdiction of the Tribunal.

109. Consequently, the determination of the sentence is left to the discretion of the Chamber. In exercising that discretion, the Chamber shall, pursuant to Article 23 (2) of the Statute and Rule 101 (B) of the Rules, consider a number of factors including the gravity of the offence, any aggravating or mitigating circumstances, the personal circumstances of the convicted person and the general practice regarding prison sentences in the courts of Rwanda.

110. The Chamber understands its obligation to ensure that the sentence is commensurate with the individual circumstances of the offender.[124]

111. The Chamber recalls that aggravating circumstances must be proved beyond reasonable doubt, while mitigating circumstances must be proved on a balance of probabilities.[125]

B. Aggravating Circumstances

1. Prosecution's Submissions on the Gravity of the Offence and the Official Position of the Accused

112. The gravity and heinous nature of extermination and murder as crimes against humanity and their absolute prohibition render their commission inherently aggravating. Further, the magnitude of the crimes committed in Rwanda in 1994, resulting in the killing of several thousand civilians within 100 days, shock the collective conscience[126] and constitutes an aggravating factor.[127] Paul Bisengimana's actions and omissions directly resulted in the massacre of many Tutsi civilians.[128]

[126] Prosecution Sentencing Brief, para. 35; T. 19 January 2006 p. 5.

113. Paul Bisengimana, as bourgmestre of Gikoro commune, bore special responsibilities: he had the duty and the authority to protect the population, prevent, or punish illegal acts.[129] Paul Bisengimana was under a duty to uphold a higher degree of morality than is usually demanded.[130] Paul Bisengimana's education enabled him to know and appreciate the dignity and value of human life.[131] He was enlightened enough to be aware of the need for and value of a peaceful co-existence between communities.[132]

114. The involvement of the peasant population in the massacres was facilitated by their misplaced belief in their leadership and an understanding that the encouragement of the authorities guaranteed that they could kill Tutsi civilians and loot their property with impunity.[133]

115. In spite of all these factors, Paul Bisengimana took no active steps to protect Tutsi refugees, but stood aside and watched.[134]

116. The Chamber notes that the Defence did not make any submissions on aggravating circumstances.

2. Findings

117. The Chamber recalls that the seriousness of the crimes and the extent of the involvement of the Accused in their commission are factors to be considered in assessing aggravating circumstances. Crimes against humanity are inherently aggravating offences because they are heinous in nature and shock the collective conscience of mankind.[135]

118. The Chamber recalls that the Accused acknowledges that his crime consisted of direct and indirect acts leading to physical or mental torture and death as part of a widespread or systematic attack against a civilian population on ethnic grounds.[136]

119. The Chamber finds that the Accused's participation in aiding and abetting extermination and murder as crimes against humanity constitute a gross violation of international humanitarian law and is an aggravating factor.

120. The Chamber finds that the Accused's position as bourgmestre of Gikoro commune during the events, and the fact that he was an educated person, are aggravating factors. As representative of the executive power at the communal level, the Chamber finds that the Accused had a duty to protect the population in the commune, he did not take any action to prevent the massacres which occurred there. Instead, he knowingly encouraged the killers at Musha Church by being present when the attack was launched that resulted in the death of more that a thousand Tutsi refuges. Further, he failed to prevent the subsequent massacres at Ruhanga Protestant Church and School, which resulted in many Tutsis being killed. The Chamber finds that Paul Bisengimana was an educated person who could appreciate the dignity and value of human life and was aware of the need for and value of a peaceful co-existence between communities.

121. However, there is no evidence to support the Prosecution's allegation that the involvement of the peasant population in the massacres was facilitated by their misplaced belief in their leadership and their understanding that the encouragement of the authorities guaranteed that they could kill Tutsi civilians and loot their property with impunity.

C. MITIGATING CIRCUMSTANCES

1. Parties' General Submissions

122. The Prosecution submits that there are "compelling mitigating circumstances."[137] The Prosecution stresses that a finding that there are mitigating circumstances relates to the assessment of the sentence and in no way derogates from the gravity of the crime. Such a finding mitigates the punishment, not the crime.[138]

123. The Defence submits that the Chamber has a large discretionary power with regard to the mitigating circumstances[139] and recalls that many mitigating circumstances have been found both by this Tribunal and by the ICTY.[140]

124. The Defence raised eight mitigating circumstances which in its view may assist the Chamber in determining a fair sentence. The Defence is fully aware that mitigation of punishment in no way reduces the gravity of the crime or the guilty verdict.[141]

2. Applicable Law

125. The Chamber recalls that mitigating circumstances may not be directly related to the offence[142]

126. The Chamber notes that the jurisprudence of the Tribunal and the ICTY has identified several reasons why the guilty plea may have a mitigating effect: the showing of remorse,[143] repentance,[144] the contribution to reconciliation,[145] the establishment of the truth,[146] the encouragement of other perpetrators to come forward,[147] the sparing of a lengthy investigation and trial and thus time, effort and resources[148] and the fact that witnesses are relieved from giving evidence in court.[149] The timing of the guilty plea is also a factor.[150]

127. With respect to the issue of substantial cooperation of the Accused with the Prosecutor, under Rule 101 (B) (ii), the Chamber recalls that the Defence indicated that the Accused did not cooperate with the Prosecutor.[151] The Chamber considers at the outset of its deliberations on mitigating circumstances that the lack of cooperation by the Accused with the Office of the Prosecutor[152] can not be considered as an aggravating factor.[153]

3. The Guilty Plea with Publicly Expressed Regrets

a. Prosecution Submissions

128. The Prosecution submits that in most jurisdictions, including Rwanda, a guilty plea is considered as a mitigating factor.[154] Paul Bisengimana's guilty plea will assist in the administration of justice and in the process of national reconciliation in Rwanda. It will also save the victims of the attacks from the ordeal of coming to testify before the Tribunal.[155]

129. The Prosecution also states that by pleading guilty, the Accused should be seen as setting an example that may encourage others to acknowledge their personal involvement in the massacres committed in Rwanda in 1994.[156]

130. The Prosecution refers to the Plea Agreement in which Paul Bisengimana has shown some degree of remorse for the crimes he is charged with, acknowledges full responsibility for his actions and omissions, and is convinced that it is only the full truth that can restore national unity and foster reconciliation in Rwanda.[157] The Accused has also indicated his deep and genuine desire to tell the whole truth and expressed his profound and heartfelt apologies to all the direct and indirect victims of the offences he has been charged with.[158]

131. The Prosecution adds that the guilty plea was timely and saved the Tribunal considerable expenses.[159] The Prosecution submits that in light of the Tribunal's completion strategy, the Accused deserves credit.[160]

b. Defence Submissions

132. The Defence submits that the jurisprudence recognizes that the guilty plea of an accused constitutes a mitigating factor, provided that it is accompanied by publicly expressed sincere regrets or remorse.[161] According to the Defence, Paul Bisengimana has already expressed his deepest apologies to the victims of the Rwandan genocide in the Plea Agreement. He also sincerely regrets not having had the courage to personally oppose the massacres and having supported them by his presence. He hopes that his expressions of regret will be heard by Rwandans and the international community, and will help contribute to the process of peace and national reconciliation in Rwanda.[162] The Defence particularly stresses that the Accused acknowledges that his presence gave the impression that he approved of the massacre at Musha Church, and encouraged Rusanganwa's murder. Further, the Accused has admitted that he took no steps to protect the refugees at Ruhanga Protestant Church and School, despite his position as bourgmestre and his knowledge of the earlier attack.[163]

[163] T. 19 January 2006 p. 10; Paul Bisengimana, T. 19 January 2006 pp. 45-46.

133. The Defence adds that the sentiments of the Accused must be evaluated in the light of his statements and conduct.[164]

134. The Defence further states that a guilty plea should give rise to a reduction in the sentence the Accused would have received had he not pleaded guilty.[165]

135. The Defence submits that whilst a guilty plea is always important in establishing the truth, it can only assist if it is entered before the commencement of trial, when it can save valuable time and resources.[166] In the present case, Paul Bisengimana decided to plead guilty before the commencement of his trial and even before a date had been set by the Registry for the hearing of his case. He has thus assisted the Tribunal and the international community in making substantial savings in terms of time, human and financial resources.[167]

c. Findings

136. The Chamber recalls that in the Plea Agreement Paul Bisengimana states that by pleading guilty he indicates his genuine and deep desire to tell the whole truth and to contribute to the search for the truth by revealing the knowledge and information he possesses.[168] The Chamber recalls that the Accused hopes to be setting an example that will help others to contribute to the search for the truth.[169]

137. The Chamber notes that at the Pre-Sentencing Hearing, the Accused admitted that he had failed in his duty to protect human life and that he did not show the courage that his citizens expected from their bourgmestre. He asked for pardon from the families that lost people in his commune and he publicly expressed remorse for not having been able to save those innocent people, which was his first duty.[170]

138. The Chamber finds that both in the Plea Agreement and during the Pre-Sentencing hearing, the Accused publicly expressed regrets and remorse for the crimes that he committed.

139. The Chamber observes that an acknowledgement of guilt may constitute proof of the honesty of the perpetrator. The Chamber concurs with the opinions in Erdemović and Ruggiu Judgements that some form of consideration should be given to those who have confessed their crimes in order to encourage others to come forward.[171] Moreover, the Chamber is of the view that the guilty plea of the Accused may contribute to the process of national reconciliation in Rwanda.

140. The Chamber finds that Paul Bisengimana's change of plea to a guilty plea is a mitigating circumstance. The plea is accompanied by publicly expressed remorse and a recognition of his responsibility.[172] Further, the timely nature of the guilty plea facilitates the administration of justice and saves the Tribunal's resources.[173]

a. Defence Submissions

141. The Defence submits that being married and having children have been deemed to be mitigating circumstances[174] and that the social, professional and family background of an accused also has to be taken into account.[175] The Defence recalls that Paul Bisengimana is married and has ten children, and that the youngest two children, who are four and six years old,[176] live in France with their mother,[177] the Accused's wife, and have recently obtained refugee status,[178] which will allow their mother to resume work as a nurse. This personal and family situation offers real hope for the Accused's rehabilitation after his release.[179]

142. The Prosecution did not make any submissions on this matter.

b. Findings

143. The Chamber notes that the fact that the Accused is married and has children may, in the circumstances, be considered mitigating.[180] The Chamber agrees that the social, professional and family background of the Accused also has to be taken into account.[181]

144. Based on the Defence submissions and on the Accused's statement during his Further Appearance, the personal and family situation of the Accused, a married man with children, lead the Chamber to believe in his chances of rehabilitation, and the Chamber therefore finds this situation to be a mitigating circumstance.

5. Character of the Accused

a. Prosecution Submissions

145. The Prosecution notes that as far as is known, Paul Bisengimana was of good character and had no record of extremism before 1994.[182]

b. Defence Submissions

146. The Defence submits that an accused's character should be examined to assess his possibility of rehabilitation[183] and should be taken into account in the determination of the sentence.[184]

147. The Defence submits that Paul Bisengimana was a person of good moral conduct before 1994. He was esteemed as a bourgmestre, he brought prosperity and development to Gikoro commune throughout his term of office and he worked relentlessly to improve the lot of its population.[185] The Accused never discriminated against Tutsis on a personal or professional level before or during the events of 1994.[186] The Accused had a high sense of responsibility.[187]

148. The Defence thus submits that Paul Bisengimana's obvious qualities demonstrate his potential for rehabilitation.[188]

c. Findings

149. The Chamber considers that the Accused was an educated person with a high level of responsibility in Gikoro commune at the time of the events. The Chamber recalls that Witnesses Gervais Condo and RKV testified that Paul Bisengimana was esteemed as a bourgmestre, that he brought prosperity and development to Gikoro commune throughout his term of office and that he worked to improve the life of its population.[189] These witnesses also testified about development projects carried out in Gikoro commune by the Accused.[190] Further, according to Witnesses Gervais Condo and Claudine Uwera Bisengimana, Paul Bisengimana had a strong sense of responsibility because of his role as a widower, father and bourgmestre.[191]

150. The Chamber is satisfied by the witnesses' testimonies that the Accused was a person of good character before he got involved in the crimes committed in Gikoro commune in April 1994 and that this constitutes a mitigating factor.

6. Assistance Given to Certain Victims

a. Defence Submissions

151. The Defence states that assistance given to victims has been assessed as a mitigating circumstance,[192] since such assistance indicates that the accused is capable of rehabilitation.[193]

152. The Defence submits that immediately after President Habyarimana's death, a dozen Tutsi civilians asked Paul Bisengimana for protection. The Defence states that he gave them refuge and thus saved their lives.[194]

153. The Prosecution did not make any submissions on this matter.

b. Findings

154. The Chamber recalls that Witness Claudine Uwera Bisengimana, the second daughter of the Accused[195] is the only witness who testified that in 1994 about twelve Tutsis took refuge in her home.[196] Among them, she remembered Laurent and his four children, his wife, cousin, and sister, and also Mukarubayiza, who was a lady from Duha, and her three children.[197] The Witness stated that the refugees stayed there until the RPF took over the area, at which point the refugees and her family fled together.[198] The Witness was 14 years old at the time of the events.[199]

155. Witness Claudine Uwera Bisengimana stated that "killers" threatened her family and described them as accomplices because they were hiding Tutsis, and that such threats were addressed to Paul Bisengimana, their father. However, Claudine Uwera Bisengimana did not remember any particular incident in that respect.[200]

156. When questioned by the Bench, Witness Claudine Uwera Bisengimana testified that Laurent's wife and her children were still alive. However, Laurent, his sister, and their cousin were killed. The Witness was not sure if Marie Mukarubayiza and her children were still alive. The Witness stated that some of the refugees survived, whereas others were killed on the way to Kabuga,[201] although she did not know under what circumstances.[202]

157. Witness Claudine Uwera Bisengimana explained that she, her family and the refugees all left the house together. She and her family were then dropped off by her father at a school in Bicumbi. Her father then went back to pick those persons up but the RPF were behind them and he had to move his family towards Kabuga, so those persons remained behind. When her father wanted to go back and pick them up, it rained and it was not possible for him to go and collect them. The Witness added that the family remained in Kabuga and that they subsequently learnt that those persons had been killed but that she did not know who had killed them.[203]

158. The Chamber notes that no other witness testified to the fact that the Accused assisted Tutsi refugees and neither did the Accused. The Chamber notes that the Prosecution did not challenge this assertion.

159. The Chamber has carefully considered the testimony of Claudine Uwera Bisengimana and considers on a balance of probabilities that it is established that some Tutsis civilians were temporarily sheltered at Paul Bisengimana's house in 1994. However, based on the same testimony, the Chamber considers that it is also established that Paul Bisengimana fled with his family and left the refugees behind and that some of the refugees were subsequently killed. Having considered the totality of this testimony, the Chamber does not find, in the circumstances and, that it is established that the Accused protected Tutsis refugees and thus saved their lives as submitted by the Defence. Accordingly, the Chamber rejects this alleged mitigating circumstance.

7. Lack of Prior Criminal Convictions and Good Conduct in Detention

a. Defence Submissions

160. The Defence submits that the Accused's lack of prior criminal convictions[204] and his good conduct in detention[205] can be mitigating circumstances.

161. The Defence states that the Accused has no criminal convictions, while admitting that obtaining a copy of his criminal record from the Rwandan authorities has proved difficult.[206]

162. The Defence further submits that Paul Bisengimana's conduct in detention has been exemplary.[207]

163. The Prosecution did not make any submissions on this matter.

b. Findings

164. The Chamber recalls that it admitted on 3 February 2006 the Certificate of Good Conduct signed by the Commander of the UNDF.[208] This Certificate indicates that between the Accused's transfer to the UNDF on 11 March 2002 and the date of the Certificate (22 December 2005), the Accused was never the subject of any disciplinary action and conducted himself well at all times.

165. The Chamber has considered the Defence submissions and the fact that the Accused had been bourgmestre of Gikoro commune from May 1981 until 19 April 1994. The Chamber finds on a balance of probabilities that the Accused had no previous criminal record. The Chamber considers that this finding constitutes a mitigating circumstance.[209]

8. Age and Ill-Health

a. Defence Submissions

166. The Defence submits that significant weight has been attached to the advanced years of accused persons by this Tribunal and the ICTY,[210] and refers particularly to the Rutaganira Judgement.[211]

167. The Defence states the judges should take the age of the Accused into account, for two reasons. Firstly, the same sentence is harder for an older accused than for a younger accused because of the physical deterioration associated with advanced years. Secondly, as observed in the Holyoak Decision issued by the New South Wales Court of Appeal, an offender of advanced years may have little worthwhile life left upon release.[212]

168. The Defence submits that Paul Bisengimana is 57 years old.[213]

169. The Defence recalls that ill-health has been admitted as a factor in sentencing by both this Tribunal[214] and the ICTY.[215]

[215] Defence Sentencing Brief, para. 47, quoting Simić, Judgement (TC), para. 98.

170. The Defence submits that Paul Bisengimana has been suffering from diabetes and hepatitis B for several years.[216] These two diseases cause the Accused serious physiological problems, which are inevitably exacerbated by his age and detention.

171. The Defence also recalls that in 1994, Paul Bisengimana was suffering from an acute liver ailment as a result of his hepatitis B.[217] According to the Defence, his fragile health during the events must be taken into account to determine a fair sentence.[218]

172. The Prosecution did not make any submissions on this matter.

b. Findings

173. The Chamber has decided to examine the Accused's age and his alleged ill-heath together.[219] The Chamber has noted the content of the confidential Medical Report drafted by Doctor Epée which was admitted into evidence during the Pre-Sentencing Hearing on 19 January 2006 and which indicates that the Accused is being treated for several illnesses.[220]

174. The Chamber finds no merit in the Defence's submission that the Accused's alleged fragile health at the time of the events should be considered in the determination of a fair sentence. The Chamber has heard the testimonies of the three Defence character witnesses on this point but notes that those witnesses are not medical experts. Moreover, even if it was established that the Accused did suffer from his liver condition at the time of the events, there is no evidence that this would have had an impact on his participation in the massacres.

175. Nonetheless, the Chamber considers that the combination of the Accused's age and his current state of health, as established by the Medical Report, constitutes a mitigating circumstance.

9. Lack of Personal Participation in the Offences

a. Defence Submissions

176. The Defence submits that indirect participation may be a mitigating circumstance. Assisting a crime is often considered to be less serious than actually perpetrating a crime and may warrant a lighter sentence.[221] While this principle has been admitted by the Tribunal in Ruggiu,[222] it was not accepted in Rutaganira because the lack of personal participation was already reflected in the mode of responsibility, namely omission.[223] The Defence states that it is for this reason that Paul Bisengimana pleads this mitigating circumstance only in relation to the Musha Church site. According to the Defence, Paul Bisengimana did nothing more than be present at a given time during the attack perpetrated against the Tutsis who had taken refuge at Musha Church and during the murder of Rusanganwa. Further, the fact that he did nothing about the crimes being committed there served as a motivation to the main perpetrators.[224]

177. The Prosecution did not make any submissions on this matter.

b. Findings

178. The Chamber is mindful of the need to take into account the particular circumstances of the case including the form and the degree of the participation of the Accused in the crime.[225] The Chamber recalls that Paul Bisengimana did not personally commit any violent act during the massacres.

179. However, the Chamber does not agree with the Defence's submissions "that Paul Bisengimana did nothing more than be present at a given time during the attack perpetrated against the Tutsis who had taken refuge at Musha Parish Church." The Chamber recalls that the Accused was aware that an attack would be launched against the refugees at Musha Church using weapons that had been distributed, and that he had the means to oppose the killings but chose not to act. Moreover, the Chamber recalls that the Accused was present when the attack was launched and more than a thousand people were murdered at Musha Church, including Rusanganwa, and that he knew that his presence would have an encouraging effect on the criminal actions of the perpetrators. Therefore, recalling that the Accused was a person of authority with an obligation to protect the refugees, the Chamber does not consider his form of participation in the Musha Church massacres to be a mitigating circumstance.

D. FINDINGS ON AGGRAVATING AND MITIGATING CIRCUMSTANCES

180. The Chamber finds the gravity of the crimes and the official position of the Accused to be aggravating circumstances but the Chamber also finds the following circumstances to be mitigating: the Accused's guilty plea with publicly expressed remorse, his family situation, his good character prior to the events, his lack of prior criminal convictions, his good conduct in detention and his age and ill-health.

181. However, after considering the gravity of the crime and the official position of the Accused, the Chamber finds that limited mitigation is warranted.

182. The Chamber considers that, in the circumstances of the case, Paul Bisengimana's official position as bourgmestre is an overwhelmingly aggravating circumstance. The Chamber considers that the Accused is an educated person who administered Gikoro commune for a period long enough to gain full knowledge of his duties and responsibilities. The Chamber recalls that despite knowing that Tutsi civilians had taken refuge at Musha Church and Ruhanga Complex and that weapons had been distributed to be used to attack them, and despite having the means to oppose the killings, Paul Bisengimana did nothing to stop the killings.

183. The Chamber is aware of the reasoning in the Semanza Judgement that a higher sentence is likely to be imposed on "one who orders rather than merely aids and abets exterminations."[226] However, the Chamber recalls that in the instant case, it did not accept the Accused's form of participation as a mitigating circumstance.[227] Regarding the Musha Church massacres, the Chamber does not consider that the Accused omitted to act. The Accused had a duty to act to protect the population and that he knew that his presence when the attack was launched would encourage the attackers by giving them the impression that he approved of their criminal actions. The Chamber considers that the Accused's presence is a very serious form of participation even if it is not alleged or established that he was a co-perpetrator or that he directly committed a criminal act during the massacre. The Chamber recalls that more than a thousand Tutsi civilians died as a result of the massacres at Musha Church and Ruhanga Complex.

E. SENTENCING RECOMMENDATIONS BY THE PARTIES

184. The Plea Agreement signed by the Parties recommends that the Accused be sentenced to between 12 and 14 years' imprisonment, with credit given for the time already served.[228] The Parties indicate that they clearly understand that their sentencing recommendation do not bind the Chamber.[229]

1. The Prosecution

185. The Prosecution recalls that the Tribunal was established by the Security Council to prosecute and punish the perpetrators of the atrocities committed in Rwanda, in order to end impunity and thereby to promote national reconstruction, the restoration of peace, and reconciliation.[230]

186. In the Sentencing Brief and at the Pre-Sentencing Hearing, the Prosecution recommends that the Accused receives a term of imprisonment of not less than 14 years with credit given for the time already served.[231]

187. The Prosecution indicates that in accordance with the Plea Agreement, it would support any application by the Accused to serve his sentence in a prison facility in Europe.[232]

2. The Defence

188. The Defence requests that Paul Bisengimana be sentenced to not more than 12 years' imprisonment, with credit given for the time spent in custody.[233]

189. The Defence stresses that when sentencing Paul Bisengimana, the basic question must be, "What would we have done if we were in his shoes? Would we have stood up in a timely manner to stop these massacres, even if it meant putting our necks on the line?"[234]

190. The Defence states that Paul Bisengimana requests that France, where his wife and two youngest children live, be designated as the State where he will serve his sentence.[235] In the alternative, Paul Bisengimana requests that one of the other European states which have indicated their willingness to accept convicted persons from the Tribunal, be designated.[236] The Defence stresses that this would enable him to receive the health care he "so desperately needs."[237]

191. Finally, the Defence reminds the Chamber that pursuant to Article 26 of the Statute, sentences passed by the Tribunal shall be served in accordance with the applicable law of the State concerned, subject to the supervision of the Tribunal.[238]

F. FINDINGS

1. The General Sentencing Practice in the Courts of Rwanda

192. The Chamber recalls Article 23 of the Statute and Rule 101 of the Rules, which indicates that the Tribunal shall take into account the general practice regarding prison sentences in the courts of Rwanda.

193. The Chamber notes that for serious offences such as murder, the Rwandan Penal Code states that the maximum sentence is life imprisonment or the death penalty.[239] Article 89 of the Code specifically provides that accomplices may be subject to the same sentence as the principal perpetrator.

194. The Chamber considers that the Rwandan Organic Law setting up "Gacaca Jurisdictions"[240] and the Organic Law modifying and completing it[241] are relevant in the instant case because they address the procedure for persons pleading guilty to crimes against humanity. A person acting in a position of authority at the municipal level,[242] who has encouraged others to commit a crime against humanity, may, after pleading guilty and under certain conditions,[243] be sentenced to a term of imprisonment ranging from 25 years to life.[244]

195. The Chamber is also mindful of Article 83 of the Rwandan Penal Code which provides that where there are mitigating circumstances, sentences shall be amended or reduced as follows: a death penalty shall be replaced by a sentence of imprisonment of no less than five years; a life imprisonment sentence shall be replaced by an imprisonment sentence of no less than two years; and an imprisonment sentence of five to 20 years or more than 20 years may be reduced to an imprisonment sentence of one year.[245]

2. Credit for Time Served in Custody

196. Pursuant to Rule 101 (D) of the Rules, "credit shall be given to the convicted person for the period, if any, during which the convicted person was detained in custody pending his surrender to the Tribunal or pending trial or appeal."

[241] Organic Law modifying and completing Organic Law n°40/2000 of January 26, 2001 setting up "Gacaca Jurisdictions" and organizing prosecutions for offences constituting the crime of genocide or crimes against humanity, committed between October 1, 1990 and December 31, 1994, Official Gazette of the Republic of Rwanda, Year 40, n°14, 15th July 2001 ("Organic Law Modifying and Completing the Organic Law of 26 January 2001").

[244] Article 68 of the Organic Law of 26 January 2001.
[245] Code Pénal Rwandais, Décret-Loi n°21/77, 18 August 1977.

197. The Chamber regards 4 December 2001 as the starting date of the detention in custody of the Accused.[246] The Chamber recognizes that the Accused is entitled to credit for all the time since this date, including the additional time he may serve pending the determination of an appeal.

198. The Chamber bears in mind the need for consistency in sentencing for similar cases but is also mindful of the Kupreškic Judgement holding that a Chamber is "under no obligation to expressly compare the case of one accused to that of another."[247] The Chamber also understands its obligation to ensure that the sentence is commensurate with the individual circumstances of the offender.[248]

3. Conclusion

199. On examination of the sentencing practice of this Tribunal and the ICTY, the Chamber notes that principal perpetrators convicted of crimes against humanity such as murder and extermination have received sentences ranging from ten years' to life imprisonment.[249] Persons convicted of secondary forms of participation have generally received lower sentences.[250] The sentence should reflect the totality of the criminal conduct of the accused.[251]

200. The Chamber will not enter a sentence for Count 3, murder as a crime against humanity under Article 3 (a) of the Statute, for the reasons explained above.[252]

201. The Chamber reiterates that an acknowledgement of guilt may constitute proof of the honesty of the perpetrator and that some form of consideration should be given to those who have confessed their crimes in order to encourage others to come forward. Moreover, the Chamber is of the view that the guilty plea of the Accused may contribute to the process of national reconciliation in Rwanda.[253]

202. However, despite the fact that the Chamber is not sentencing Paul Bisengimana for the count of murder as a crime against humanity, the Chamber is of the view that considering the official position of the Accused and the number of persons killed – more than a thousand – in his presence at Musha Church and many others with his knowledge at Ruhanga Complex, a higher sentence than the range proposed by the Parties is justified for the single count of extermination.

V. Verdict

203. Having considered the Statute and the Rules, the general practice regarding prison sentences in Rwanda, the Parties' submissions and evidence during the Sentencing Hearing and having weighed the aggravating and mitigating circumstances, the Chamber convicts and sentences Paul Bisengimana for Count 4, extermination as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 3 (b) of the Statute to

206. Pursuant to Rule 103 of the Rules, Paul Bisengimana shall remain in the custody of the Tribunal pending a decision on where his sentence will be served pursuant to Article 26 of the Statute and Rule 103 (A). The Government of Rwanda and the designated State shall be notified of such designation by the Registrar.

221. On the basis of the Plea Agreement reached between the Parties, which had been filed with the Chamber on 19 October 2005,[18] the Prosecution orally moved the Chamber to dismiss those counts to which the Accused had pleaded not guilty and to enter a verdict of not guilty regarding those count pursuant to Rules 73, 54 and 51.[19] The Chamber declined to rule on this request at this stage of the proceedings.

222. The Chamber unsealed the aforementioned Plea Agreement in open session pursuant to Rule 62 bis. The Chamber listed discrepancies between the facts supporting the counts to which the Accused had pleaded guilty and the facts in the Plea Agreement.[20] The Prosecution submitted that since the Accused had pleaded guilty to Counts 3 and 4 pursuant to Article 6 (1) of the Statute, it would amend paragraphs 8, 19, 20, 21, 22, 28, 38, 39, and 42 of the Amended Indictment to avoid the aforementioned discrepancies and would file a revised amended indictment thereafter. The Defence indicated that it only considered the contents of the Plea Agreement valid and would therefore support the Prosecution in its intention to file a revised amended indictment.[21]

223. The Chamber orally denied the joint motion for consideration of a guilty plea agreement between Paul Bisengimana and the Office of the Prosecutor for not being unequivocal. Pursuant to Rule 62 (A) (iii) and on behalf of the Accused, the Chamber entered a plea of not guilty regarding Counts 3 and 4 of the Amended Indictment and duly noted the plea of not guilty for all the other counts.[22] The Chamber noted the Prosecution's undertaking to revise the Amended Indictment to make it consistent with the facts on which the Parties had agreed.[23]

224. On 28 November 2005, the Prosecution filed a second amended indictment dated 23 November 2005 in English.

225. On 1 December 2005, the Prosecution and the Defence filed a new joint motion for consideration of a guilty plea agreement between Paul Bisengimana and the Office of the Prosecutor dated 30 November 2005, with an attached Plea Agreement between the Accused and the Prosecutor, signed by the Accused and his counsel on 4 October 2005 and by the Prosecutor on 17 October 2005. The same day, the Prosecution filed a new amended indictment, dated 23 November 2005, in English and French.

226. Following an enquiry by the Chamber about a missing portion of the French transcripts of 17 November 2005, revised transcripts of the Bisengimana hearing of 17 November 2005 were filed on 16 December 2005.[24]

227. On 7 December 2005, during a Status Conference, the Defence made two oral motions: the first requested that the person in charge of the UNDF provide the Defence with an attestation concerning the detention of the Accused; the second requested that Dr. Epée provide the Defence with an attestation concerning the medical situation of the Accused.[25]

[24] On 7 December 2005, at the requests of the Defence, a Status Conference was held in closed session in the presence of the Accused. Defence Counsel observed that it appeared from the French transcript of 17 November 2005 that the Accused had not been asked to enter a plea in relation to Count 5 of the Amended Indictment. The Chamber indicated in open court that there must have been an error in the French transcripts because the Accused had indeed pleaded to this count, as was reflected in the English transcripts.
[25] T. 7 December 2005 p. 3 (Status Conference) (ICS).

228. On 7 December 2005, during his second further appearance, the Accused pleaded guilty to the following counts: murder as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 6 (1) of the Statute[26] and extermination as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 6 (1) of the Statute.[27] The Accused pleaded not guilty to the following counts: genocide pursuant to Articles 6 (1) and 6 (3) of the Statute;[28] complicity in genocide pursuant to Article 6 (1) of the Statute;[29] and rape as a crime against humanity pursuant to Articles 6 (1) and 6 (3) of the Statute.[30]

229. Based on the Plea Agreement reached between the Parties,[31] the Prosecution orally moved the Chamber to withdraw and to dismiss the counts to which the Accused had pleaded not guilty and to acquit him on these counts, pursuant to Rules 51, 54, and 73 of the Rules.[32]

230. Pursuant to Rule 62 bis, the Chamber asked for the unsealing of the Plea Agreement and for its disclosure to the public.[33] The Defence moved the Chamber to make public only chapters 3, 4 and 5 of the Plea Agreement, arguing that it was not necessary to make the remaining chapters public.[34] The Chamber orally denied this motion, having found that the Defence had failed to show good cause why only portions of the Plea Agreement should be made public.[35]

231. The Chamber granted the joint motion for consideration of the Plea Agreement between Paul Bisengimana and the Office of the Prosecutor.[36] The Chamber stated that the requirements of Rule 62 (B) were met and it therefore declared the Accused guilty of having aided and abetted the commission of the crimes of murder (Count 3) and extermination (Count 4) as crimes against humanity pursuant to Article 6 (1) of the Statute.[37] The Chamber granted the Prosecution motion for withdrawal and dismissal of the counts to which the Accused had pleaded not guilty (genocide, complicity in genocide, and rape as a crime against humanity).[38] However, the Chamber denied the request for acquittal because the Prosecution had failed to justify its motion on this point.[39] As regards the Defence request for issuance of attestations regarding the detention of the Accused and his medical situation, the Chamber directed the Defence to seize the Registry on these matters.[40] Finally, the Chamber ordered that the Accused be detained under conditions which guaranteed his security.[41]

232. During the same hearing, the Defence indicated that it intended to call character witnesses. On 16 December 2005, the Defence filed a motion for protective measures for its character witnesses.[42] On 20 December 2005, the Chamber granted this motion in part.

I. Introduction

A. Rappel des faits de la cause

1. Paul Bisengimana (l'« accusé »), ancien bourgmestre de la commune de Gikoro, dans la prefecture de Kigali-rural, a plaidé coupable de complicité dans le meurtre et l'extermination de civils tutsis à l'eglise de Musha, ainsi qu'à l'église et à l'école protestantes de Ruhanga (le « complexe de Ruhanga ») (commune de Gikoro) entre le 13 et le 15 avril 1994.

2. A partir du 7 avril 1994, des massacres de Tutsis et assassinats d'opposants politiques ont été perpétrés sur tout le territoire du Rwanda par des miliciens, des militaires et des gendarmes. Dans toutes les regions du pays, des Tutsis fuyant les massacres se sont réfugiés dans des endroits qu'ils pensaient être sûrs. Dans la plupart de ces endroits, ils ont été attaqués et massacrés, souvent avec la complicité des autorités.

3. Dans la commune de Gikoro, les massacres ont commencé le 7 avril 1994. Fuyant les attaques en cours dans la préfecture de Kigali-rural, des milliers de civils tutsis se sont refugiés dans l'église de Musha, dans la commune de Gikoro, entre le 8 et le 13 avril 1994. Le 12 avril 1994 ou vers cette date, au su de l'accusé, des éléments de l'armée rwandaise ont distribué des armes aux miliciens Interahamwe et à des civils à l'église de Musha pour qu'ils attaquent les réfugiés.

4. Le lendemain (13 avril 1994) ou vers cette date, en présence de l'accusé, des soldats de l'armée rwandaise, des Interahamwe, des civils et policiers communaux armés ont attaqué les civils tutsis qui s'étaient refugiés à l'église de Musha avec des armes à feu, des grenades, des machettes et des pangas. Lors de cette attaque, un milicien civil a mis le feu à l'église. Plus d'un millier de Tutsis ont péri. L'accusé était présent quand un civil tutsi du nom de Rusanganwa a été tué.

5. Des nombreux civils tutsis s'étaient refugiés dans l'église et l'école protestantes de Ruhanga (commune de Gikoro) entre le 8 et le 10 avril 1994. Entre le 10 et le 15 avril 1994, un brigadier, des militaires de la Garde presidentielle, des miliciens civils et des policiers communaux ont lancé une attaque contre le complexe de Ruhanga. Les assaillants etaient munis d'armes à feu, de grenades, de machettes et de pangas, de nombreux civils tutsis ont été tués. Paul Bisengimana était au courant de l'attaque précédente qui avait été lancée contre l'église de Musha et, bien qu'il fût bourgmestre de la commune de Gikoro, il n'a pris aucune mesure pour protéger les réfugiés tutsis.

6. Le 7 decembre 2005, la Chambre de première instance II (la « Chambre ») a accepté le plaidoyer de culpabilité de l'accusé et l'a déclaré coupable d'avoir aidé et encouragé à commettre le meurtre et de l'extermination constitutifs de crimes contre l'humanité.

B. L'ACTE D'ACCUSATION

7. En vertu de l'acte d'accusation modifié du 1er décembre 2005 (l'« acte d'accusation »), le Procureur accuse Paul Bisengimana d'être individuellement responsable pour cinq chefs suivants : génocide (art. 6 (1) et 6 (3) du Statut[4841]), complicité dans le génocide (art. 6 (1)), meurtre (art. 6(1)), extermination (art. 6 (1)) et viol (art. 6 (1) et 6(3)) en tant que crimes contre l'humanité. Lors de la seconde comparution de l'accusé, le 7 décembre 2005, le Procureur a retiré les chefs de génocide, de complicité dans le génocide et de viol constitutif de crimes contre l'humanité. L'acte d'accusation figure à l'annexe C du présent jugement.

C. RÉSUMÉ DE LA PROCÉDURE

8. Paul Bisengimana avait été arrêté au Mali le 4 décembre 2001. Il a été transféré au centre de détention du Tribunal, Arusha, (le « centre de detention ») le 11 mars 2002. Le 18 mars 2002, il a fait sa première comparution et a plaidé non coupable de tous les chefs d'accusation.

9. Le 19 octobre 2005, les parties ont deposé une requête conjointe visant à l'examen d'un accord entre Paul Bisengimana et le Bureau du Procureur aux fins d'un plaidoyer de culpabilité[4842].

10. Le 17 novembre 2005, lors d'une autre comparution, l'accusé a plaidé coupable de meurtre et extermination constitutifs de crimes contre l'humanité en vertu de l'article 6 (1) du Statut[4843]. La Chambre a rejeté la requête conjointe au motif que la reconnaissance de culpabilité n'était pas sans équivoque. Au nom de l'accusé, la Chambre a retenu qu'en ce qui concerne les chefs de meurtre et d'extermination, il a plaidé non coupable ; pour tous les autres chefs d'accusation, elle a dûment pris acte du plaidoyer de non-culpabilité[4844].

11. L'acte d'accusation a été déposé le 1er décembre 2005.

12. Le 7 decembre 2005, lors de sa deuxième comparution, l'accusé a plaidé coupable des chefs de meurtre et extermination constitutifs de crimes contre l'humanité en vertu de l'article 6 (1) du Statut[4845]. La Chambre l'a declaré coupable d'avoir aidé et encouragé la commission de meurtre (chef 3) et d'extermination (chef 4) constitutifs de crimes contre l'humanité en vertu de l'article 6 (1) du Statut[4846]. Elle a fait droit à la requête du Procureur aux fins du retrait des autres chefs d'accusation restants mais a rejeté la demande d'acquittement de ces chefs faite par le Procureur parce que sa requête sur ce point n'était pas dement motivée[4847].

13. Une audience préalable au prononcé de la sentence a été tenue le 19 janvier 2006.

14. Un historique détaillé de la procédure est joint en annexe au présent jugement (annexe A).

D. Le Tribunal et sa compétence

15. Le jugement dans l'affaire Le Procureur c. Paul Bisengimana est rendu par la Chambre de première instance II du Tribunal pénal international pour le Rwanda (le « Tribunal »), composée des juges Arlette Ramaroson, Présidente, William H. Sekule et Solomy B. Bossa.

16. Le Tribunal est régi par le Statut annexe à la resolution 955 du Conseil de sécurité et par le Règlement de procédure et de preuve (le « Règlement[4848] »).

17. Le Tribunal a été crée pour juger les personnes présumées responsables de violations graves du droit international humanitaire commises sur le territoire du Rwanda et les citoyens rwandais présumés responsables de telles violations commises sur le territoire d'Etats voisins. Les infractions qui relèvent de la compétence du Tribunal sont le génocide, les crimes contre l'humanité et les violations graves de l'article 3 commun aux Conventions de Genève et du Protocole additionnel II auxdites Conventions, commises entre le 1er janvier et le 31 decembre 1994.

II. Le plaidoyer de culpabilité

A. Le droit applicable

18. La Chambre fait observer qu'il n'existe dans le Statut aucune disposition précise concernant les plaidoyers de culpabilité et les accords y relatifs. Les dispositions correspondantes du Règlement sont les articles 62 (B) et 62 bis[4849].

B. Le plaidoyer de culpabilité du 7 décembre 2005

19. Le 7 décembre 2005, après que Paul Bisengimana eut plaidé coupable de meurtre (chef 3) et d'extermination (chef 4) constitutifs de crimes contre l'humanité en vertu de l'article 6 (1) du Statut, la Chambre a entrepris de vérifier la validité de son plaidoyer.

20. Résumant les conséquences d'un tel plaidoyer, la Chambre a rappelé que lorsqu'un accusé plaide non coupable, il est présumé innocent jusqu'à ce que sa culpabilité soit établie au-dela de tout

[4848] Initialement adopté par les juges du Tribunal le 5 juillet 1995, le Reglement a été modifié pour la dernière fois le 7 juin 2005, au cours de la quinzième session plénière

[4849] Article 62 : Comparution initiale de l'accusé et plaidoyer
(B) Si un accusé plaide coupable conformément au paragraphe (A) (v) ou demande à revenir sur son plaidoyer de non culpabilité, la Chambre doit s'assurer que l'aveu de culpabilité :
i) est fait librement et volontairement,
ii) est fait en connaissauce de cause,
iii) est sans équivoque, et
iv) repose sur des faits suffisants pour établir le crime et la participation de l'accusé à sa commission, compte tenu soit d'indices objectifs, soit de l'absence de tout sérieux désaccord entre le Procureur et l'accusé sur les faits de la cause, la Chambre peut déclarer l'accusé coupable et donner instruction an Greffier de fixer la date de l'audience pour le prononcé de la peine.
Article 62 bis : Procédure en cas d'accord sur le plaidoyer
(A) Le Procureur et la Défense peuvent convenir que, après que l'accusé aura plaidé coupable de l'ensemble des chefs d'accusation, de l'un ou de plusieurs de ces chefs, le Procureur prendra tout ou partie des dispositions suivantes devant la Chambre de première instance :
i) demandera l'autorisation de modifier l'acte d'accusation en conséquence ;
ii) proposera une peine déterminée ou une fourchette de peines qu'il estime appropriées ;
iii) ne s'opposera pas à la demande par l'accusé d'une peine déterminée ou d'une fourchette de peines.
(B) La Chambre de première instance n'est pas tenue par l'accord visé au paragraphe (A).
(C) Si les parties ont conclu un accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité, la Chambre de première instance demande la divulgation de l'accord en question, soit en audience publique soit, si des motifs convaincants ont été présentés, à huis clos, au moment ou l'accusé plaide coupable conformement à l'article 62 (A) (v), ou demande à revenir sur son plaidoyer de non-culpabilité.

doute raisonnable. En conséquence, un accusé qui plaide non coupable a le droit de bénéficier d'un procès équitable, de contre-interroger les témoins à charge, de citer des témoins à décharge et de témoigner en sa défense. La Chambre a demandé à l'accusé s'il comprenait bien qu'en plaidant coupable, il renonçait à ces droits. L'accusé a répondu qu'il le comprenait bien et qu'il renonçait à ces droits en toute connaissance de cause[4850].

21. Conformément aux dispositions des alineas (i), (ii), et (iii) de l'article 62 (B) du Règlement, la Chambre a d'abord demandé si le plaidoyer de culpabilité était fait librement et volontairement, s'assurant ainsi que l'accusé était pleinement conscient de ce qu'il faisait et qu'il ne plaidait pas de la sorte sous la menace ou la pression. L'accusé a repondu qu'il était conscient de ce qu'il faisait, qu'il n'avait nullement été intimidé et que c'était de son plein gré qu'il plaidait coupable[4851].

22. Ensuite, la Chambre a demandé à l'accusé si le plaidoyer est fait en connaissance de cause, s'assurant ainsi qu'il comprenait clairement la nature des accusations portées contre lui, de même que les conséquences de son plaidoyer sur chacun des chefs d'accusation[4852]. L'accusé a repondu qu'il plaidait « en connaissance de cause »[4853].

23. Enfin, la Chambre lui a demandé si son plaidoyer était sans équivoque : c'est-à-dire s'il savait qu'un tel plaidoyer n'était compatible avec aucune forme de défense qui le contredirait. L'accusé a répondu qu'il n'y avait absolument aucune compatibilité[4854].

24. La Chambre relève encore les éléments suivants de l'accord sur le plaidoyer : l'accusé a choisi librement et « en connaissance de cause » de plaider coupable[4855] ; il a decidé de plaider coupable après mûre réflexion durant laquelle il a pris pleinement conscience de la portée et des conséquences des infractions qu'il avait commises[4856] ; il a decidé de changer son plaidoyer après avoir été bien informé des conséquences juridiques d'un tel revirement et les avoir acceptées[4857] ; la décision de l'accusé de plaider coupable était volontaire, faite en connaissance de cause et sans équivoque[4858].

25. Dans sa décision orale rendue le 7 decembre 2005, la Chambre a acquis la conviction qu'en l'absence de tout désaccord de la part du Procureur et de l'accusé sur les faits de la cause, le plaidoyer était fondé sur des éléments suffisants pour établir les crimes et la participation de l'accusé à leur commission. La Chambre a declaré que les conditions posées par l'article 62 (B) étaient ainsi remplies et a en conséquence declaré l'accusé coupable d'avoir aidé et encouragé à la commission des crimes de meurtre et d'extermination constitutifs de crimes contre l'humanité en vertu de l'article 6 (1) du Statut[4859]. La Chambre a fait droit à la requête du Procureur aux fins de retrait et rejet des chefs d'inculpation pour lesquels l'accusé avait plaidé non coupable[4860]. En revanche, elle a rejeté la requête du Procureur aux fins d'acquittement sur ces mêmes chefs parce que le Procureur n'avait pas motivé sa requête sur ce point[4861].

A. L'ACCUSÉ

26. Paul Bisengimana est né en 1948[4862], dans le secteur de Duha, commune de Gikoro, préfecture de Kigali-rural[4863]; il est le fils de Verdiana Nyirabatera et de Gervais Ngirumpatse[4864] tous deux décédés[4865]. Il a passé presque toute sa vie adulte dans la commune de Gikoro[4866].

27. Paul Bisengimana est marié et père de 10 enfants. Il en a eu sept avec sa première femme, Dorca Kantarama, décédée en 1991. Il s'est remarié par la suite à Marie Herondine Mukandagijimana, avec qui il a eu deux enfants. Il a adopté l'enfant de sa seconde épouse[4867].

28. Paul Bisengimana a fait ses études primaires dans la commune de Gikoro. En trois ans il a achevé ses etudes du premier cycle du secondaire à Rwamagana. Ensuite, il est entre à l'école normale de Byumba, dont il est sorti en 1970 avec le diplôme d'instituteur (D 5)[4868].

29. De 1970 à 1974, Paul Bisengimana a travaillé comme instituteur dans sa commune natale. De 1974 à 1978, il a été directeur d'une école secondaire à Nyanza. De 1978 à 1981, il a été juge, président du tribunal cantonal de Nyamata, dans la préfecture de Kigali[4869]. En mai 1981, il a été nommé bourgmestre de la commune de Gikoro, fonction qu'il a occupée jusqu'en 1994, date de son départ en exil[4870].

B. CONCLUSIONS DE FAIT ET DE DROIT

1. Responsabilité pénale individuelle pour aide et encouragement conformément à l'article 6 (1) du Statut

a. L'acte d'accusation

30. A l'appui aux chefs d'accusation de meurtre et extermination, l'acte d'accusation allègue qu'en avril 1994, dans la région de Bugesera, préfecture de Kigali-rural, Paul Bisengimana, agissant seul ou de concert avec d'autres, a tué ou fait tuer des personnes lors de massacres perpétrés dans la commune de Gikoro et ses alentours, dans le cadre d'une attaque généralisée et systématique dirigée contre une population civile en raison de son appartenance politique, ethnique ou raciale[4871]. Faisant fond sur l'ensemble des actes invoqués à l'appui de ce chef, le Procureur allègue, en application de l'article 6 (1) du Statut, que l'accusé a planifié ou de toute autre manière aidé et encouragé à planifier, préparer ou exécuter le crime susvisés[4872].

b. Le droit applicable

31. L'article 6 (1) illustre le principe selon lequel, non seulement les auteurs matériels d'un crime, mais aussi les individus qui participent et contribuent à la commission dudit crime en d'autres manières, telles que l'aide et l'encouragement, assument la responsabilité pénale pour tout crime visé dans le statut[4873].

32. « Aider » consiste à porter assistance à quelqu'un dans le cadre de la commission d'un crime[4874]. « Encourager » consiste à poser des actes de nature à favoriser la perpétration d'un crime ou à conseiller ou provoquer autrui à le commettre[4875]. Dans l'usage juridique, notamment dans le Statut et la jurisprudence du TPIR et du Tribunal pénal international pour l'ex-Yougoslavie (le « TPIY »), ces deux termes sont si fréquemment employés ensemble qu'on les considère comme constituant un seul et même concept juridique[4876].

33. L'aide et l'encouragement sont une forme de responsabilité accessoire. L'élément matériel du crime n'est pas accompli par l'accusé mais par une autre personne, appelée l'agent principal de l'infraction[4877]. La participation de l'accusé peut intervenir au stade de la planification, de la préparation ou de l'exécution du crime et peut revêtir la forme d'un acte positif ou d'une omission ; elle peut être antérieure ou postérieure à l'acte accompli par l'agent principal de l'infraction[4878]. Le Procureur est tenu de démontrer que l'accusé a fourni à l'agent principal de l'infraction une assistance, un encouragement ou un soutien moral pratique et substantiel, qui a abouti à la commission effective du crime par ce dernier[4879]. Si cette assistance n'est pas indispensable pour la perpétration du crime[4880], elle doit avoir eu une incidence substantielle sur la commission du crime par l'auteur principal[4881].

34. La seule présence de l'intéressé sur le lieu du crime peut constituer une forme d'aide et d'encouragement s'il est demontré qu'elle a eu un effet encourageant significatif sur l'agent principal de l'infraction, en particulier si l'individu qui assistait passivement était le supérieur de l'agent principal de l'infraction ou était à d'autres égards dans une position d'autorité[4882]. Dans ces circonstances, une omission peut constituer l'élément matériel de l'aide et de l'encouragement, à condition que cette omission ait eu un effet decisif sur la perpétration du crime[4883] .

35. Toutefois, peu importe que la personne qui aide ou encourage autrui à commettre une infraction soit présente ou non lors de la commission de ladite infraction[4884].

36. L'élément moral (mem rea) de l'aide et de l'encouragement est demontré en rapportant la preuve que la personne qui aide et encourage est consciente du fait que son acte concourt à la commission du crime par l'agent principal de l'infraction[4885]. Il n'est pas nécessaire que le complice connaisse l'infraction précise qui est en train d'être commise par l'auteur principal, mais il doit avoir connaissance des éléments essentiels du crime matériel[4886]. Quant au complice qui est en position d'autorité par rapport à l'agent principal de l'infraction, son intention criminelle peut être déduite du fait qu'il savait que sa présence serait interprêtée par l'agent principal de l'infraction comme un signe d'adhésion ou d'encouragement[4887].

C. L'ACCORD DE RECONNAISSANCE DE CULPABILITÉ

37. Paul Bisengimana a été nommé bourgmestre de Gikoro par le Président de la République[4888], sur proposition du Ministre de l'intérieur. Il reconnait qu'en sa qualité de bourgmestre, il représentait le pouvoir exécutif dans ladite commune de Gikoro[4889]. En outre, il exerçait l'autorité administrative sur la commune tout entière et était chargé de maintenir la paix, l'ordre public et la sûreté des personnes et des biens, ainsi que de l'application de la loi et des règlements au plan local, et de la politique gouvernementales[4890]. L'accusé reconnait qu'il avait le devoir de protéger la population, de prévenir ou de punir les actes illégaux des auteurs d'attaques contre des personnes ou leurs biens[4891]. Il avait pour mission d'informer le pouvoir central de tout événement digne d'intérêt qui se produisait dans la commune de Gikoro[4892].

38. De son propre aveu, de par sa position de bourgmestre, l'accusé exerçait l'autorité de jure et de facto sur tous les agents de l'Etat et autres fonctionnaires au niveau de la commune de Gikoro[4893], y compris les conseillers de secteurs[4894]. Ceux-ci représentaient le pouvoir exécutif au niveau du secteur et étaient responsables du maintien de l'ordre dans leurs secteurs respectifs[4895].

40. Dans les sections qui suivent, la Chambre se penchera sur la responsabilité pénale individuelle de l'accusé en vertu de l'article 6 (1) du Statut eu égard aux chefs d'accusation dont il a plaidé coupable.

2. Crimes contre l'humanité (article 3 du Statut)

a. Les éléments généraux du crime

41. Pour qu'un acte visé à l'article 3 du Statut puisse être qualifié de crime contre l'humanité, il faut prouver que le crime a été commis dans le cadre d'une attaque généralisée ou systématique dirigée contre une population civile, quelle qu'elle soit, en raison de son appartenance nationale, politique, ethnique, raciale ou religieuse.

[4898] Accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité, par. 36.

i. L'attaque

42. La Chambre rappelle que la notion d'« attaque » s'entend de > « tout acte, de tout fait ou de toute pluralité de faits contraires à la loi et s'apparentant à ceux énumérés aux alinéas (a) à (i) de l'article 3 du Statut[4899] ».

43. Elle fait observer que, compte tenu de la pratique du Tribunal de céans et du TPIY, la formule « généralisée ou systématique » constitue la norme applicable et non pas la formule « généralisée et systématique[4900] ».

44. L'interprétation du caractère « généralisé » de l'attaque diffère également dans les jugements rendus par le Tribunal[4901]. Toutefois, la Chambre fait remarquer que cet élément renvoie toujours à l'ampleur de l'attaque et parfois au nombre des victimes. La Chambre fait sienne la définition donnée dans le jugement Kajelijeli, qui est « à grande échelle et dirigée contre un grand nombre de victimes »[4902].

45. S'accordant avec le jugement Kajelijeli, la Chambre conclut que le caractère « systématique » de l'attaque s'entend du caractère organisé de celle-ci[4903].

46. Dans l'accord de culpabilité, l'accusé reconnaît qu'à compter du 7 avril 1994, la population tutsie a été massacrée et de nombreux opposants politiques ont été assassinés sur toute l'étendue du territoire rwandais, y compris dans la commune de Gikoro. Ces crimes ont été commis par des miliciens, des militaires et des gendarmes[4904].

47. Compte tenu des faits contenus dans l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité, la Chambre est convaincue que des attaques généralisées ont été commises dans la commune de Gikoro en avril 1994 du fait qu'elles ont entrainé la mort d'un nombre très important de victimes.

ii. L'attaque doit être dirigée contre une population civile

48. La définition de la « population civile » donnée dans le jugement Akayesu est constamment suivie dans la jurisprudence du Tribunal[4905].

> [...] les personnes qui ne participent pas directement aux hostilités, y compris les membres des forces armées qui ont déposé les armes et les personnes qui ont été mises hors de combat par maladie, blessure, détention ou pour toute autre cause. La présence au sein de la population civile de personnes isolées ne repondant pas à la définition de personnes civiles ne prive pas cette population de sa qualité[4906].

49. Comme il est souligné dans le jugement Blaškić, [4899] Jugement Kajelijeli, par. 867 ; jugement Semanza, par. 327.

[4900] La version française du Statut exige que l'attaque soit généralisée et systématique tandis que dans la version anglaise, elle n'a pas besoin de revêtir ce double caractère. Dans la pratique des deux Tribunaux, la version anglaise a été acceptée comme étant conforme au droit international coutumier, arrêt Kunarac et consorts, par. 93.
[4901] Jugement Kajelijeli, par. 871.
[4902] Id.
[4903] Jugement Kajelijeli, par. 871.

[4905] Jugement Kajelijeli, par. 873 ; jugement Rutuganda, par. 72 ; jugement Musema, par. 207 ; jugement Semanza, par. 330.
[4906] Jugement Akayesu, par. 582, cité dans le jugement Kajelijeli, par. 873.

> « c'est la situation concrète de la victime au moment où les crimes sont commis, plutôt que son statut, [qui] doit être prise en compte pour déterminer sa qualité de civil[4907] ».

50. De plus, l'emploi du terme « population » ne signifie pas que l'attaque doive avoir été dirigée contre toute la population du territoire ou de l'entité géographique dans laquelle elle s'est déroulée[4908]. Dans le jugement Semanza, la Chambre a aussi precisé ce qui suit :

> Il n'est pas nécessaire que la victime ou les victimes de l'acte visé partagent avec la population civile qui constitue la cible principale de l'attaque des caractéristiques fondamentales, notamment géographiques, sauf à remarquer que ces caractéristiques peuvent servir à démontrer que l'acte en question s'inscrit dans le cadre de l'attaque[4909].

51. La Chambre est d'accord avec cette jurisprudence.

52. Dans l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité, l'accusé reconnaît que la population tutsie a été massacrée et que de nombreux opposants politiques ont été assassinés[4910]. Il admet en outre que les attaques dirigées contre des civils tutsis rassemblés à l'église de Musha, ainsi qu'à l'église et à l'école protestantes de la commune de Gikoro s'inscrivaient dans le cadre des attaques incessantes que les civils tutsis ont subies dans la plupart des régions du Rwanda tout le mois d'avril 1994[4911].

53. Compte tenu des faits contenus dans l'accord de culpabilité, la Chambre est convaincue que les attaques généralisées commises dans la commune de Gikoro l'ont été contre une population civile.

iii. L'attaque doit avoir été inspirée par des motifs discriminatoires

54. La Chambre rappelle l'arrêt Akayesu dans lequel la Chambre d'appel a considéré que les « motifs discriminatoires » touchent par essence à la compétence du Tribunal puisque celle-ci se limite aux crimes commis pour des motifs fondés sur « l'appartenance nationale, politique, ethnique, raciale ou religieuse » des victimes[4912]. Néanmoins, dans le jugement Kajelijeli, la Chambre a souligné que :

> Les actes perpétrés contre des personnes qui ne rentrent pas dans les catégories protégées ne doivent pas nécessairement échapper à la compétence du Tribunal si l'intention de leur auteur était de concourir à la réalisation de l'attaque lancée contre le groupe victime de la discrimination pour l'un quelconque des motifs enumérés[4913].

55. Dans l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité, Paul Bisengimana reconnaît que la population tutsie a été massacrée et que de nombreux opposants politiques ont été assassinés[4914]. Il reconnaît qu'à compter du 7 avril 1994, dans toutes les régions du pays, les Tutsis qui fuyaient les massacres en cours se réfugiaient dans des lieux qu'ils croyaient être sûrs. Dans la plupart de ces endroits, les réfugiés ont été attaqués, enlevés et massacrés, souvent avec la complicité de certaines autorités[4915].

56. Compte tenu des faits contenus dans l'accord, la Chambre conclut que les attaques généralisées lancées contre la population civile ont été commises pour des motifs discriminatoires parce la plupart des victimes étaient tutsies.

iv. L'élément moral des crimes contre l'humanite

[4907] Jugement Blaškić, par. 214, cité dans les jugements Bagilishema, par. 79 et Kajelijeli, par. 874.
[4908] Jugement Kajelijeli, par. 875 ; jugement Bagilishema, par. 80 ; jugement Tadić, par. 644.
[4909] Jugement Semanza, par. 330, cité dans le jugement Kajelijeli, par. 875.
[4910] Accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité, par. 30.
[4911] Ibid., par. 39 et 42.
[4912] Arrêt Akayesu, par. 464 et 465, également cité dans le jugement Kajelijeli, par. 877.
[4913] Jugement Kajelijeli, par. 878 ; jugement Rutaganda, par. 74 ; jugement Musema, par. 209 ; jugement Semanza, par. 331.
[4914] Accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité, par. 30.
[4915] Ibid., par. 31.

57. La Chambre souscrit au raisonnement suivi dans le jugement Kajelijeli selon lequel > « l'accusé doit avoir eu connaissance du contexte général dans lequel s'inscrit l'attaque et savoir que ses actes font partie intégrante d'une attaque généralisée dirigée contre une population civile »[4916].

58. Dans l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité, l'accusé reconnaît qu'à compter du 7 avril 1994, la population tutsie a été massacrée et de nombreux opposants politiques ont été assassinés dans la commune de Gikoro[4917]. Il reconnaît que les attaques lancées contre les civils tutsis qui s'étaient rassemblés à l'église de Musha et à l'école et l'église protestantes de Ruhanga s'inscrivaient dans le cadre des attaques continues que les civils tutsis ont subies dans la plupart des régions du Rwanda[4918].

59. Compte tenu de l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité, la Chambre est convaincue que l'accusé avait connaissance du contexte plus large dans lequel s'inscrivaient les attaques qui avaient lieu au Rwanda en avril 1994 et qu'il savait que ses actes participaient d'attaques généralisées commises contre des civils tutsis.

b. Conclusions

60. La Chambre conclut que les attaques à l'église de Musha, et à l'école protestantes de la commune de Gikoro en avril 1994 ont été lancées contre des civils tutsis pour des motifs discriminatoires et avaient un caractère généralisé parce qu'elles ont entrainé la mort de nombreuses victimes.

3. Crimes contre l'humanité – Extermination

a. L'acte d'accusation

61. Le quatrième chef d'accusation met à la charge de l'accusé le crime d'extermination constitutive de crime contre l'humanité en vertu de l'article 3 (b) du Statut et précise que :

> En avril 1994, dans la région de Bugesera, préfecture de Kigali-rural, République rwandaise, Paul Bisengimana, agissant seul et de concert avec d'autres, a tué ou fait tuer des personnes lors de massacres perpétrés dans la commune de Gikoro et ses alentours, dans le cadre d'une attaque généralisée et systématique dirigée contre une population civile en raison de son appartenance politique, ethnique ou raciale[4919].
>
> Entre le 6 et le 21 avril 1994, des attaques généralisées ou systématiques dirigées contre une population civile en raison de son appartenance politique, ethnique ou raciale ont été perpétrées partout au Rwanda[4920].
> Paul Bisengimana a aidé et encouragé à planifier, préparer ou exécuter le meurtre de civils tutsis, par ses actes ou par l'intermédiaire des personnes qu'il a aidées et ce, en toute connaissance de cause et en adhérant à leurs actes[4921].

[4916] Jugement Kajelijeli, par. 880 ; jugement Semanza, par. 332 ; jugement Musema, par. 206 ; jugement Ntakirutimana et Ntakirutimana, par. 803 ; jugement Bagilishema, par. 94 ; jugement Kayishema et Ruzindana, par. 134, arrêt Kunarac et consorts, par. 102.
[4917] Accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité, par. 30.
[4918] Ibid., par. 39 et 42.
[4919] Acte d'accusation, par. 40.
[4920] Ibid, par. 42.
[4921] Ibid., par. 43.

L'une des conséquences directes de la conduite de Paul Bisengimana, notamment de l'appui moral qu'il a apporté aux assaillants, a été le massacre de milliers d'hommes, de femmes et d'enfants appartenant à la population civile[4922].

Les actes positifs posés par Paul Bisengimana pendant le mois d'avril 1994, à l'effet d'aider et d'encourager à commettre le massacre de civils tutsis à l'église de Musha, sise dans la commune de Gikoro, ainsi qu'à l'église et l'école protestantes de Ruhanga, cellule de Ruhanga, secteur de Gicaca, commune de Gikoro, sont articulés aux paragraphes 17 à 20 et 24 à 28 du présent acte d'accusation et ne sont repris ici que pour mémoire[4923].

b. L'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilit6

62. Paul Bisengimana reconnait qu'il est coupable d'avoir aidé et encouragé à la commission de l'extermination constitutive de crime contre l'humanité[4924].

i. Les faits survenus à l'église de Musha

63. L'accusé reconnaît qu'entre le 8 et le 13 avril 1994, plus d'un millier de civils tutsis fuyant les attaques qu'ils essuyaient dans l'ensemble de la préfecture de Kigali-rural se sont refugiés à l'église de Musha, sise dans le secteur de Rutoma, (commune de Gikoro)[4925].

64. La Chambre relève qu'alors que l'acte d'accusation mentionne que Juvénal Rugambarara se trouvait parmi les personnes présentes pendant l'attaque contre l'église de Musha[4926], son nom ne figure pas dans l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité[4927]. Cela étant, elle pense que cela n'a aucune incidence sur la validité de l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité de l'accusé ni sur sa responsabilité pour la commission du crime.

65. L'accusé reconnait que :

a) Le 12 avril 1994 ou vers cette date, des militaires de l'armée rwandaise distribuaient des armes telles que des fusils et des grenades à des miliciens Interahamwe et à d'autres civils armés à l'église de Musha[4928] ;
b) Il en avait connaissance et du fait que ces armes seraient utilisées pour attaquer les civils tutsis qui avaient trouvé refuge à l'église de Musha[4929] ;
c) Le 13 avril 1994 ou vers cette date, une attaque était lancée sur les civils tutsis qui s'étaient réfugiés dans l'église de Musha. Les assaillants ont utilisé des armes à feu, des grenades, des machettes, des pangas et d'autres armes traditionnelles[4930] ;
d) Cette attaque a entrainé la mort de plus de mille civils tutsis[4931] ;
e) Pendant l'attaque, un milicien civil nommé Manda a incendié l'église, causant la mort de nombreux refugiés[4932] ,
f) L'accusé était présent durant l'attaque, en compagnie de Laurent Semanza, de militaires de l'armée rwandaise, de miliciens Interahamwe, de civils armés et d'agents de la police communale[4933] ;

[4922] Ibid., par. 44.
[4923] Ibid., par. 45.

[4925] Ibid., par. 33 ; acte d'accusation, par. 17.

[4929] Id.
[4930] Accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité, par. 35.
[4931] Id.
[4932] Id.

g) Sa présence à l'église de Musha pendant l'attaque était de nature à encourager les assaillants et à leur donner l'impression qu'il approuvait le massacre des civils tutsis qui s'y étaient rassemblés[4934].

66. Paul Bisengimana reconnaît qu'il avait les moyens de s'opposer au massacre de civils tutsis dans la commune de Gikoro, mais qu'il est resté indifférent à cette attaque[4935].

ii. Les faits survenus à l'église et à l'école protestantes de Ruhanga 67. L'accusé reconnaît qu'entre le 8 et le 10 avril 1994, fuyant les attaques qu'ils essuyaient dans l'ensemble de la préfecture[4936], de nombreux civils tutsis ont cherché refuge à l'église et à l'école protestantes de Ruhanga, cellule de Ruhanga, secteur de Gicaca, commune de Gikoro, en préfecture de Kigali-rural.

68. L'accusé reconnaît que :

a) Entre le 10 et le 15 avril 1994, le brigadier Rwabukumba, des éléments de la Garde présidentielle, des miliciens civils et des agents de la police communale ont lancé une attaque contre les civils tutsis qui s'étaient réfugiés au complexe de Ruhanga[4937].
b) Au cours de cette attaque, les assaillants, qui étaient munis d'armes à feu, de grenades, de machettes, de pangas et d'autres armes traditionnelles ont tué de nombreux réfugiés tutsis[4938].
c) Malgré sa qualité de bourgmestre et le fait qu'il savait que les réfugiés présents à l'église de Musha avaient été attaqués le 13 avril 1994, il n'a pris aucune mesure concrète pour protéger les Tutsis qui avaient trouvé refuge au complexe de Ruhanga entre le 10 et le 15 avril 1994[4939].

69. Paul Bisengimana reconnaît qu'il avait les moyens de s'opposer au massacre de civils tutsis dans la commune de Gikoro, mais qu'il est resté indifférent à ces attaques[4940].

C. Le droit applicable

70. La Chambre rappelle que l'extermination consiste en un acte ou un ensemble d'actes contribuant au meurtre d'un grand nombre de personnes[4941]. Il n'importe guère que la participation de l'accusé à l'acte soit détournée ou indirecte. C'est le nombre de victimes qui distingue le crime d'extermination de celui de meurtre[4942].

71. Pour établir l'intention criminelle s'agissant de l'extermination, le Procureur doit prouver que l'accusé avait l'intention de donner la mort ou avait fait preuve d'une négligence grave, peu lui important que la mort résulte ou non de ses actes ou omissions, et qu'il était conscient que ceux-ci s'inscrivaient dans le cadre d'une tuerie à grande échelle[4943]. Il faut montrer que l'accusé avait connaissance du vaste projet de meurtres collectifs visant une population civile pour des motifs discriminatoires et qu'il voulait y participer[4944]. Il y a lieu pour la Chambre de se pencher sur la question de savoir si l'accusé, en tant que complice de l'extermination constitutive de crime contre l'humanité, avait connaissance de l'intention criminelle de l'auteur principal et savait que, par ses actes, il aiderait l'auteur principal à commettre son crime.

72. Par conséquent, pour être déclaré coupable d'extermination constitutive de crime contre l'humanité, un accusé doit (i) avoir participé à une tuerie généralisée de personnes ou à leur soumission à des conditions d'existence devant entrainer leur mort à grande echelle ; (ii) avoir eu l'intention de donner la mort ou avoir fait preuve d'une négligence grave, peu lui important que la mort resulte ou non de ses actes ou omissions ; et (iii) avoir été conscient que ses actes ou omissions s'inscrivaient dans le cadre d'une tuerie à grande échelle[4945] .

d. Conclusions

i. Les massacres perpétrés à l'église de Musha

73. Vu les faits reconnus par l'accusé et ses propres conclusions selon lesquelles l'attaque lancée contre des civils tutsis à l'église de Musha (commune de Gikoro) obéissait à des motifs discriminatoires, était généralisée et avait entrainé la mort de nombreuses victimes, la Chambre conclut que ladite attaque équivaut à une extermination.

74. La Chambre conclut que l'accusé a participé à l'attaque perpétrée contre l'église de Musha parce qu'il était sur les lieux et était conscient que sa présence encouragerait le comportement criminel des auteurs de l'attaque.

75. La Chambre est convaincue que l'accusé avait connaissance de l'intention criminelle des auteurs principaux ; il a en effet admis qu'il savait que des armes avaient été distribuées à des miliciens Interahamwe et à d'autres civils à l'église de Musha et que ces armes seraient utilisées pour attaquer la population tutsie qui y avait trouvé refuge.

76. Par conséquent, la Chambre est convaincue que, par sa présence à l'église de Musha le 13 avril 1994 ou vers cette date, Paul Bisengimana a aidé et encouragé à exterminer les civils tutsis qui s'y trouvaient.

ii. Les massacres perpétrés à l'église et à l'école protestantes de Ruhanga

77. Vu les faits reconnus par l'accusé et ses propres conclusions selon lesquelles l'attaque contre l'église et l'école protestantes de Ruhanga, commune de Gikoro, qui a eu lieu après celle de l'église de Musha qui a été lancée contre des civils tutsis pour des motifs discriminatoires, était généralisée et avait entrainé la mort de nombreuses personnes, la Chambre conclut que ladite attaque équivaut à une extermination.

78. Elle conclut que, bien que l'accusé ait pu ne pas être présent lors de l'attaque, il avait des raisons de savoir qu'une attaque serait lancée contre les civils tutsis rassemblés au complexe de Ruhanga du fait de l'attaque lancée plus tôt contre l'église de Musha. Elle conclut en outre que, malgré sa qualité de bourgmestre de la commune de Gikoro, l'accusé n'a pris aucune mesure concrète pour protéger les civils tutsis. Bien que l'accusé reconnaisse qu'il avait le devoir de protéger ces civils, la Chambre considère qu'il ne l'a pas fait.

[4944] Jugement Kayishema et Ruzindana, par. 144 et 145 ; jugement Rutaganda, par. 83 et 84 ; jugement Musema, par. 218 ; jugement Bagilishema, par. 94 ; jugement Semanza, par. 341 ; jugement Kamuhanda, par. 696 ; jugement Kajelijeli, par. 894.
[4945] Jugement Kayishema et Ruzindana, par. 144 ; jugement Bagilishema, par. 89.

79. La Chambre est convaincue, en raison de la position d'autorité de l'accusé, que le fait qu'il a omis d'empêcher l'attaque équivaut une négligence grave. Elle conclut que l'accusé devait savoir que son omission permettrait la commission des massacres.

80. A la lumière de ces circonstances, la Chambre est convaincue que l'accusé était au courant de l'intention criminelle des auteurs de l'attaque contre le complexe de Ruhanga.

81. Pour ces raisons, la Chambre estime que, du fait de son omission d'agir, l'accusé a aidé et encouragé autrui à exterminer les Tutsis rassemblés à l'église et à l'école protestantes de Ruhanga.

iii. Conclusions générales

82. La Chambre conclut que l'accusé est pénalement responsable en vertu de l'article 6 (1) du Statut pour avoir aidé et encouragé l'extermination de membres de la population tutsie à l'église de Musha, à l'église et à l'école protestantes de Ruhanga dans la commune de Gikoro en avril 1994. La Chambre déclare l'accusé coupable d'extermination constitutive de crime contre l'humanité en vertu de l'article 3 (b) du Statut et le condamne en conséquence.

4. Crimes contre l'humanité – Assassinat

a. L'acte d'accusation

83. Le troisième chef d'accusation est celui d'assassinat constitutif de crime contre l'humanité en vertu de l'article 3 (a) du Statut ; il est libellé comme suit :

> En avril 1994, dans la région de Bugesera, préfecture de Kigali-rural, République rwandaise, Paul Bisengimana, agissant seul, a tué ou fait tuer des personnes dans la commune de Gikoro et ses alentours, dans le cadre d'une attaque généralisée et systématique dirigée contre une population civile en raison de son appartenance politique, ethnique ou raciale[4946].
>
> Paul Bisengimana a aidé et encouragé à planifier, préparer ou exécuter le meurtre de civils tutsis, par ses actes ou par le truchement des personnes qu'il a aidées, et ce, en toute connaissance de cause et en adhérant à leurs actes[4947].
>
> Parmi les civils tutsis tués en conséquence de la conduite de Paul Bisengimana figure un homme répondant au nom de Rusanganwa. Paul Bisengimana était effectivement présent durant l'attaque perpétrée à l'église de Musha dans le secteur de Rutoma, commune de Gikoro, le 13 avril 1994, date à laquelle Rusanganwa, qui s'était refugié dans ladite église, a été assassiné[4948].

b. L'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité

84. L'accusé reconnait qu'il est coupable d'avoir aidé et encouragé la commission du crime d'assassinat constitutif de crime contre l'humanité[4949].

85. Il reconnait qu'il était présent lorsqu'un Tutsi nommé Rusanganwa, qui s'était refugié à l'église de Musha, a été assassiné pendant l'attaque lancée à cet endroit le 13 avril 1994[4950].

[4946] Acte d'accusation, par. 35.
[4947] Ibid., par. 38.
[4948] Ibid., par. 39.
[4949] Accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité, par. 5.
[4950] Ibid., par. 37.

86. Il reconnaît qu'il avait les moyens de faire échec au massacre de civils tutsis dans la commune de Gikoro, mais qu'il est resté indifférent à l'attaque[4951].

c. Le droit applicable

87. La Chambre rappelle que le meurtre est le fait de donner volontairement la mort à quelqu'un ou de porter volontairement une atteinte grave à son intégrité physique, tout en sachant que cette atteinte est de nature à entraîner la mort de la victime, ou en étant indifférent que la mort de la victime en résulte ou non[4952]. Le meurtre est punissable en tant que crime contre l'humanité lorsqu'il est commis dans le cadre d'une attaque généralisée ou systématique dirigée contre une population civile pour des raisons discriminatoires. La Chambre rappelle que c'est l'ampleur des massacres qui distingue l'extermination du meurtre en tant que crime contre l'humanité[4953].

88. En ce qui concerne l'élément moral de l'accusé en tant que complice d'assassinat constitutif de crime contre l'humanité, la Chambre doit chercher à savoir si l'accusé connaissait l'intention criminelle qui animait l'auteur principal de l'infraction et s'il savait que ses actes contribueraient à la commission du crime.

d. Conclusions

89. A titre préalable, la Chambre rappelle que la version française du Statut, en son article 3 (a), désigne l'acte blâmable sous le vocable d'« assassinat », qui est un meurtre prémédité tandis que la version anglaise du même article parle de « murder »[4954]. Elle rappelle en outre que, dans la version originale française de l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité, Rusanganwa avait été assassiné[4955], c'est-à-dire fait l'objet d'un meurtre avec préméditation. Ce fait n'est pas contesté. Elle relève toutefois qu'il n'est pas allégué que l'accusé a directement commis cet assassinat ou qu'il partageait l'intention de l'auteur principal de l'infraction, mais plutôt qu'il a concouru à la commission du crime. Cela étant, la Chambre doit chercher à savoir si l'intention criminelle de l'accusé était celle d'un complice lorsque l'assassinat de Rusanganwa était commis, autrement dit, s'il avait connaissance de l'intention criminelle qui animait l'auteur principal de l'infraction et, aussi, s'il savait que sa présence constituait un encouragement à la commission du crime.

90. La Chambre constate également que l'acte d'accusation[4956] semble indiquer que plusieurs accusations de meurtre sont portées contre l'accusé. Or, l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité fait seulement état de l'assassinat de Rusanganwa, commis lors de l'attaque à l'église de Musha[4957]. En conséquence, la Chambre n'a examiné que les faits invoqués à l'appui de cet assassinat, qui est allégué dans l'acte d'accusation et reconnu par l'accusé, et par lequel la victime est clairement identifiée.

91. La Chambre a déjà conclu que l'attaque à l'église de Musha était une attaque généralisée dirigée contre une population civile pour des raisons discriminatoires.

[4951] Ibid., par. 32.
[4952] Jugement Akayesu, par. 586 ; jugement Ndindahahizi, par. 487.
[4953] Jugement Kajelijeli, par. 893.
[4954] Jugement Semanza, par. 589 ; jugement Musema, par. 84 ; jugement Rutaganda, par. 80 ; jugement Akayesu, par. 585 ; jugement Bagilishema, par. 84 et 85 ; jugement Kayishema et Ruzindana, par. 140 ; jugement Ntakirutimana, par. 803, 804 et 808.
[4955] Il est écrit au paragraphe 37 de la version française de l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité, qui est l'original, que Rusanganwa a été « assassiné » pendant l'attaque.
[4956] Acte d'accusation, par.39.
[4957] Accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité, par. 37.

92. Il n'est pas contesté qu'un Tutsi, nommé Rusanganwa, a été tué avec préméditation. Sur la base des faits reconnus par l'accusé, la Chambre conclut que l'accusé était présent lorsque Rusanganwa a été assassiné pendant l'attaque contre l'église de Musha.

93. La Chambre est convaincue que Paul Bisengimana savait que le meurtre de Rusanganwa s'inscrivait dans le cadre d'une attaque généralisée dirigée contre des civils tutsis en raison de leur appartenance ethnique. Elle est également convaincue, au vu des circonstances de la cause, que Paul Bisengimana connaissait l'intention criminelle de l'auteur du meurtre de Rusanganwa. Elle rappelle le raisonnement qu'elle a suivi à l'appui de cette conclusion au paragraphe 75 du présent Jugement.

94. La Chambre retient que, du fait de sa présence sur les lieux lorsque le crime a été commis, l'accusé a participé au meurtre de Rusanganwa. L'accusé savait que sa présence encouragerait la conduite criminelle de l'auteur principal du crime et donnerait l'impression qu'il cautionnait le meurtre. De plus, il reconnaît que bien qu'il ait eu les moyens de s'opposer aux meurtres de civils tutsis, il a préféré rester indifférent face aux attaques.

95. La Chambre est convaincue que la responsabilité pénale individuelle de l'accusé en vertu de l'article 6 (1) du Statut est engagée parce qu'il a aidé et encouragé le meurtre d'un civil tutsi nommé Rusanganwa à l'église de Musha, commune de Gikoro, en avril 1994. En conséquence, elle déclare l'accusé coupable d'assassinat constitutif de crime contre l'humanité en vertu de l'article 3 (a) du Statut.

e. Cumul des déclarations de culpabilité

i. Le droit applicable

96. La Chambre rappelle que le critère général d'application du principe du cumul de déclarations de culpabilité a été réaffirmé dans l'arrêt Krstić :

> Il est de jurisprudence constante au Tribunal que plusieurs déclarations de culpabilité ne peuvent être prononcées sur la base de différentes dispositions du Statut, mais à raison du même comportement, que si chacune de ces dispositions comporte un élément nettement distinct qui fait défaut dans l'autre, un élément étant nettement distinct d'un autre s'il exige la preuve d'un fait que n'exige pas l'autre élément. Si ce critère n'est pas rempli, seule la déclaration de culpabilité fondée sur la disposition la plus spécifique sera retenue. En effet, l'infraction la plus spécifique englobe celle qui l'est moins, puisque la commission de la première implique forcément que la deuxième a également été commise[4958].

97. L'arrêt Čelebići précise que, si un ensemble de faits est régi par deux dispositions dont l'une comporte un élément supplémentaire nettement distinct, la Chambre se fondera uniquement sur cette dernière disposition pour declarer l'accusé coupable[4959].

98. Tout en prenant note du critère relatif au cumul de déclarations de culpabilité, la Chambre relève qu'il ne devrait pas être appliqué machinalement ou aveuglément. La Chambre d'appel du TPIY a recommandé la prudence dans l'application de ce critère afin d'éviter qu'il ne soit porté atteinte aux droits de l'accusé[4960].

ii. Conclusions

[4958] Arrêt Krstić, par. 218, cité également dans l'arrêt Semanza, par. 315 ; voir aussi arrêt Ntakirutimana, par. 542.
[4959] Arrêt Mucić et consorts, par. 413.
[4960] Arrêt Kunarac, par. 168 à 198.

99. La Chambre s'est penchée sur le fait que l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité était initialement fondé, sur l'acte d'accusation du 31 octobre 2005, qui reprochait à l'accusé sa participation directe à l'assassinat de Rusanganwa[4961]. D'après cet acte d'accusation, l'accusé a tranché le bras de Rusanganwa avec une machette et l'a laissé se vider de son sang. En revanche, l'acte d'accusation du 1er décembre 2005, sur lequel se fonde l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité, indique seulement que l'accusé était présent lors de l'attaque à l'église de Musha au cours de laquelle un Tutsi du nom de Rusanganwa a été tué[4962].

100. En l'espèce, l'assassinat de Rusanganwa et l'extermination des réfugiés à l'église de Musha avaient été planifiés et préparés par les auteurs principaux. La Chambre considère que le meurtre de Rusanganwa est inclus dans le crime d'extermination commis à l'église de Musha car Rusanganwa comptait parmi les civils tutsis dam le cadre de cette attaque généralisée et fondée sur des motifs discriminatoires.

101. La Chambre a conclu également que l'élément moral de l'aide et encouragement a complicité était établi car l'accusé connaissait l'intention criminelle des auteurs principaux de l'extermination et du meurtre ; il savait que ces crimes avaient été planifiés et que sa présence contribuerait à leur commission. A la réflexion, la Chambre considère que le même ensemble de faits prouve l'élément moral de l'aide et de l'encouragement, c'est-à-dire de la complicité de meurtre et d'extermination constitutifs de crimes contre l'humanité commis à l'église de Musha.

102. La Chambre relève que les accusations d'extermination et de meurtre à l'église de Musha sont étayées par le même ensemble de faits et que les infractions ont été commises avec le même mode de participation de la part de l'accusé. De ce point de vue là, donc, les crimes d'aide et d'encouragement à commettre le meurtre et l'extermination constitutifs de crimes contre l'humanité ne sont pas nettement distincts.

103. La Chambre considère qu'il faut voir dans le meurtre de Rusanganwa une infraction comprise dans le crime d'extermination commis à l'église de Musha. Deux déclarations de culpabilité à raison du concours idéal d'infractions ne se justifient donc pas dans ces circonstances car cela ne donnerait pas la meilleure représentation, ou du moins, la représentation plus complète de la conduite criminelle de l'accusé. La Chambre estime que l'accusé ne doit être déclaré coupable que d'extermination constitutive de crime contre l'humanité pour les infractions commises à l'église de Musha car, compte tenu de son ampleur, qui constitue un élément supplémentaire matériellement distinct, ce crime est plus précis que celui de meurtre.

104. La Chambre rappelle que, le 7 décembre 2005, l'accusé a été reconnu coupable de meurtre et d'extermination constitutifs de crimes contre l'humanité, après qu'elle eut accepté le plaidoyer de culpabilité de l'accusé.

105. A ce stade de la procédure, la Chambre décide que l'intérêt de la justice et l'équité de la procédure commandent que l'accusé ne soit declaré coupable que relativement au chef d'accusation d'extermination constitutive de crime contre l'humanité et non relativement au chef d'accusation de meurtre. En conséquence, elle ne condamnera l'accusé qu'à raison de sa déclaration de culpabilité concernant l'extermination.

IV. Questions relatives à la peine

A. TEXTES ET PRINCIPES APPLICABLES

[4961] Acte d'accusation, 31 octobre 2005, par. 22.
[4962] Ibid., par. 39.

106. La Chambre rappelle que le Tribunal a été créé pour contribuer au processus de réconciliation nationale, au rétablissement et au maintien de la paix ainsi que pour faire cesser les violations du droit international humanitaire au Rwanda et en reparer dûment les effets[4963]. Elle considère qu'un procès équitable et, en cas de condamnation, une peine juste contribuent à la réalisation de ces objectifs.

107. La Chambre condamnera Paul Bisengimana conformément aux dispositions des articles 22 et 23 du Statut et 100 et 101 du Règlement de procédure et de preuve. Elle fait observer que la seule peine que le Tribunal puisse infliger est la peine d'emprisonnement. En vertu de l'article 101 (A) du Règlement, la peine maximale est l'emprisonnement à vie.

108. Le Statut et le Règlement ne prévoient pas de peine spécifique pour tel ou tel crime relevant de la compétence du Tribunal.

109. Des lors, la détermination de la peine est laissée à l'appréciation de la Chambre. Dans l'exercice de ce pouvoir discrétionnaire, la Chambre tient compte des facteurs visés à l'article 23 (2) du Statut et à l'article 101 (B) du Règlement, notamment la gravité de l'infraction, l'existence de circonstances aggravantes ou atténuantes, la situation personnelle du condamné et la grille générale des peines d'emprisonnement appliquée par les tribunaux rwandais.

110. La Chambre est consciente de l'obligation qui lui est faite d'individualiser la peine[4964].

111. La Chambre rappelle que les circonstances aggravantes doivent être prouvées au-delà de tout doute raisonnable, alors que les circonstances atténuantes doivent l'être sur la base de l'hypothèse la plus probable[4965].

B. CIRCONSTANCES AGGRAVANTES

1. Arguments du Procureur sur la gravité de l'infraction et la position officielle de l'accusé

112. La gravité et le caractère odieux de l'assassinat et de l'extermination constitutifs de crimes contre l'humanité et leur proscription absolue confèrent un caractère proprement aggravant à leur commission. L'ampleur des crimes qui se sont soldés par le massacre de plusieurs milliers de civils au Rwanda en l'espace de 100 jours a choqué la conscience collective[4966] et constitue une circonstance aggravante[4967]. Les actes et omissions de Paul Bisengimana se sont soldés par le massacre de nombreux civils tutsis[4968].

113. En sa qualité de bourgmestre de la commune de Gikoro, Paul Bisengimana avait des responsabilités particulières à assumer : il avait le devoir et le pouvoir de protéger la population, de prévenir ou de punir les actes illégaux[4969]. Il avait l'obligation de faire montre d'un degré de moralité plus élevé que la moyenne[4970]. C'est une personne instruite, et à ce titre, il était en mesure de connaître et d'apprécier la dignité et la valeur de la vie humaine[4971]. Il était suffisamment instruit pour être informé de la nécessité, de la valeur et de l'importance de la coexistence pacifique entre les communautés[4972].

114. L'implication des masses paysannes dans les massacres de civils tutsis a été facilitée, d'une part, par le crédit et la confiance mal placés que celles-ci accordaient à leurs dirigeants et, d'autre part, par la conviction qu'elles pouvaient tuer et piller les Tutsis sans être inquiétées[4973].

115. En dépit de tous ces facteurs, Paul Bisengimana n'a pris aucune mesure concrète pour protéger les réfugiés tutsis ; il s'est au contraire mis à l'écart pour assister au massacre[4974].

116. La Chambre relève que la Défense n'a fait aucune observation sur les circonstances aggravantes.

2. Conclusions

117. La Chambre rappelle que la gravité des crimes et l'ampleur de la participation de l'accusé à leur commission constituent des facteurs à prendre en considération dans la détermination des circonstances aggravantes. Les crimes contre l'humanité sont, en soi, des infractions graves en raison de leur caractère odieux qui choque la conscience de l'humanité[4975].

118. La Chambre rappelle que l'accusé est conscient que son crime consiste en des actes directs ou indirects ayant entraîné la torture physique ou mentale et causé la mort dans le cadre d'une attaque généralisée ou systématique dirigée contre une population civile en raison de son appartenance ethnique[4976].

119. La Chambre juge que le fait que l'accusé a aidé et encouragé à l'extermination et au meurtre constitutifs de crimes contre l'humanité constitue une violation grave du droit international humanitaire et une circonstance aggravante.

120, La Chambre conclut que le poste de bourgmestre de la commune de Gikoro qu'occupait l'accusé à l'époque des faits et son instruction sont des facteurs aggravants. Elle estime que l'accusé, en sa qualité de représentant du pouvoir exécutif au niveau de la commune, avait le devoir de protéger la population de ladite commune ; il n'a pris aucune mesure pour empêcher les massacres qui s'y sont produits. Bien au contraire, il a sciemment encouragé les tueurs à l'église de Musha par sa présence au moment de l'attaque qui s'est soldée par la mort de plus d'un millier de réfugiés tutsis. En outre, il n'a rien fait pour empêcher les massacres qui ont été perpétrés par la suite à l'église et à l'école protestantes de Ruhanga, et ont coûté la vie à de nombreux Tutsis. La Chambre estime que Paul Bisengimana était une personne instruite qui pouvait donc connaître et apprécier la dignité et la valeur de la vie humaine et était informé de la nécessité et de l'importance de la coexistence pacifique entre les communautés.

121. Toutefois, aucun élément de preuve ne vient étayer l'allégation du Procureur selon laquelle la participation des masses paysannes aux massacres a été facilitée, d'une part, par le crédit et la confiance mal placés que celles-ci accordaient à leurs dirigeants et, d'autre part, par la conviction qu'elles pouvaient tuer et piller les civils tutsis sans être inquiétées.

C. CIRCONSTANCES ATTÉNUANTES

[4973] Mémoire du Procureur relatif à la sentence, par. 44 ; compte rendu de l'audience du 19 janvier 2006, p. 7 et 8.
[4974] Mémoire du Procureur relatif à la sentence, par. 48 et 49 ; compte rendu de l'audience du 19 janvier 2006, p. 7 et 8.
[4975] Jugement Ruggiu, par. 48.
[4976] Accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité, par. 14.

1. Arguments généraux des parties

122. Le Procureur soutient qu'il existe des « circonstances atténuantes convaincantes[4977] ». Il insiste sur le fait qu'un constat de circonstances atténuantes est pertinent pour l'évaluation de la peine mais n'ôte rien à la gravité du crime. En d'autres termes, il atténue la peine et non le crime[4978].

123. La Défense soutient que la Chambre a un large pouvoir d'appréciation s'agissant des circonstances atténuantes[4979] et rappelle que le TPIR et le TPIY ont admis dans leur jurisprudence de nombreuses circonstances atténuantes au bénéfice des accusés[4980].

124. La Défense a fait valoir huit circonstances atténuantes qui, selon elle, sont de nature à éclairer la Chambre dans la détermination d'une peine juste. Elle est pleinement consciente du fait que l'acceptation de circonstances atténuantes dans l'évaluation du quantum de la peine ne constitue en aucun cas une atténuation de la gravité des crimes commis ou du verdict de culpabilité qui sera rendu[4981].

2. Le droit applicable

125. La Chambre rappelle que les circonstances atténuantes peuvent ne pas avoir de rapport direct avec l'infraction[4982].

126. La Chambre note que la jurisprudence du TPIR et du TPIY a recensé plusieurs raisons pour lesquelles le plaidoyer de culpabilité peut avoir un effet d'atténuation : l'expression du remords[4983], le repentir[4984], la contribution à la réconciliation[4985], l'établissement de la vérité[4986], l'encouragement pour d'autres auteurs d'actes criminels avouer leurs forfaits[4987], l'économie d'une longue enquête et d'un procès et, partant, une économie de temps, d'énergie et des ressources[4988] et le fait que les témoins n'ont pas temoigné à l'audience[4989]. Le moment auquel le plaidoyer de culpabilité intervient entre aussi en ligne de compte[4990].

127. En ce qui concerne l'importance de la coopération que l'accusé a fournie au Procureur au sens de l'article 101 (B) (ii), la Chambre rappelle que la Défense a fait savoir que l'accusé n'avait pas coopéré avec le Procureur[4991]. Avant d'examiner la question des circonstances atténuantes, elle retient que cette absence de coopération de l'accusé avec le Bureau du Procureur[4992] ne constitue pas pour autant une circonstance aggravante[4993].

3. Plaidoyer de culpabilité accompagné de regrets publics

a. Les arguments du Procureur

128. Le Procureur indique qu'un plaidoyer de culpabilité est généralement considéré, devant la plupart des juridictions nationales, dont celle du Rwanda, comme une circonstance atténuante[4994]. La reconnaissance de culpabilité de Paul Bisengimana contribuera à la bonne administration de la justice et au processus de réconciliation nationale au Rwanda. Elle épargnera également aux rescapés de cette attaque le calvaire de venir déposer devant le Tribunal[4995].

129. Le Procureur soutient que, plaidant coupable, l'accusé devrait faire figure d'exemple et en encourager d'autres à reconnaître leur responsabilité personnelle dans les massacres perpétrés au Rwanda en 1994[4996].

130. Le Procureur renvoie à l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité dans lequel Paul Bisengimana fait montre d'un certain degré de remords pour les crimes qui lui sont imputés, assume la pleine responsabilité de ses actes et omissions, convaincu que seule la manifestation de toute la vérité peut rétablir l'unité nationale et promouvoir la réconciliation au Rwanda[4997]. L'accusé a également fait part de son désir profond et sincère de dire toute la verité et a présenté ses sincères et profondes excuses à toutes les personnes qui ont été victimes, directement ou indirectement, des infractions qu'il a commises[4998].

131. Le Procureur ajoute que le plaidoyer de culpabilité est intervenu dans les délais et a permis au Tribunal d'économiser sensiblement ses ressources[4999] et que, eu égard à la stratégie d'achèvement du mandat du Tribunal, l'accusé mérite qu'il en soit tenu compte[5000].

b. Les arguments de la Défense

132. La Défense fait valoir que la jurisprudence considère le plaidoyer de culpabilité d'un accusé comme une circonstance atténuante dès lors qu'il est accompagné de regrets ou remords sincères, énoncés publiquement[5001]. Paul Bisengimana a déjà présenté ses plus sincères et profondes excuses aux victimes du génocide rwandais dans l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité. Il regrette aussi sincèrement de ne pas avoir eu le courage de s'opposer aux massacres et, par sa présence, de les avoir cautionnés. Il espère que ses regrets seront entendus par les Rwandais et par la communauté internationale, et qu'ils contribueront au processus de paix et de réconciliation nationale au Rwanda[5002]. La Défense a particulièrement mis l'accent sur le fait que l'accusé a reconnu que sa présence a pu donner l'impression qu'il approuvait le massacre à l'église de Musha et encourageait la mise à mort de Rusanganwa. De plus, l'accusé a reconnu n'avoir pris aucune mesure pour protéger les personnes refugiées à l'école et à l'église protestantes de Ruhanga, malgré sa qualité de bourgmestre et le fait qu'il était au courant d'une attaque antérieure[5003].

133. La Défense ajoute que les sentiments de l'accusé doivent être appréciés à la lumière de ses déclarations et de son comportement[5004].

134. La Défense précise que le plaidoyer de culpabilité devrait en principe donner lieu à une diminution de la peine à laquelle l'accusé aurait été condamné s'il n'avait pas plaidé coupable[5005].

135. S'il est vrai qu'un plaidoyer de culpabilité est toujours important pour établir la vérité, il n'est vraiment utile que s'il intervient avant le commencement du procès, moment où il permettra au Tribunal de réaliser de précieuses économies de temps et de ressources[5006]. En l'espèce, Paul Bisengimana a decidé de plaider coupable avant le début de son procès, avant même qu'une date ne soit fixée par le Greffe pour l'ouverture du procès. Ce faisant, il a permis au Tribunal et à la communauté internationale de faire des économies substantielles, tant du point de vue des ressources humaines et financières que du temps[5007].

c. Conclusions

136. La Chambre rappelle que, dans l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité, Paul Bisengimana déclare qu'en plaidant coupable, il exprime son désir profond et sincère de dire toute la vérité et de contribuer à la recherche de la vérité en révélant les connaissances personnelles et les informations qu'il possède[5008]. Elle rappelle aussi que l'accusé nourrit l'espoir que son exemple en incitera d'autres à contribuer à la recherche de la vérité[5009].

137. La Chambre relève qu'à l'audience préalable au prononcé de la sentence, l'accusé a reconnu avoir failli à son devoir qui était de protéger les vies humaines et de n'avoir pas su faire preuve du courage que ses concitoyens attendaient de leur bourgmestre. Il a demandé pardon aux familles des victimes des massacres de sa commune et a exprimé publiquement ses remords pour ne pas avoir été en mesure de sauver ces innocents alors que sa mission première était d'assurer leur sécurité[5010].

138. La Chambre constate que, dans l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité comme lors de l'audience préalable au prononcé de la sentence, l'accusé a publiquement exprimé ses regrets et ses remords pour les crimes qu'il a commis.

139. La Chambre estime qu'une reconnaissance de culpabilité peut constituer une preuve d'honnêteté de la part de l'auteur. Elle fait sienne l'opinion exprimée dans les jugements Erdemović et Ruggiu selon laquelle il est de bonne politique de prendre en considération les plaidoyers de culpabilité afin d'encourager d'autres auteurs d'actes criminels à avouer leurs forfaits[5011]. En outre, elle est d'avis que la reconnaissance de culpabilité de l'accusé peut contribuer au processus de réconciliation nationale au Rwanda.

[5011] Jugement Erdemović (1998), par. 11 ; jugement Ruggiu, par. 55.

140. La Chambre estime que le changement de plaidoyer de Paul Bisengimana et sa reconnaissance de culpabilité constituent une circonstance atténuante. La reconnaissance est assortie de regrets publics et fait preuve de son désir d'assumer la responsabilité de ses actes[5012]. Par ailleurs, lorsqu'elle est faite en temps voulu, la reconnaissance de culpabilité[5013] facilite l'administration de la justice et permet d'économiser les ressources du Tribunal.

4. Situation personnelle et familiale

a. Les arguments de la Défense

141. La Défense fait valoir que le fait d'être marié et d'avoir des enfants est généralement considéré comme une circonstance atténuante[5014] et qu'il faudrait également prendre en considération l'histoire personnelle de l'accusé, du point de vue tant social que professionnel et familial[5015]. La Défense rappelle que Paul Bisengimana est marié et père de 10 enfants, dont les deux plus jeunes, qui ont quatre et six ans[5016], vivent en France avec leur mère[5017], l'épouse de l'accusé ; ils ont récemment obtenu le statut de refugié[5018], ce qui va permettre à leur mère de reprendre son activité d'infirmière. Cette situation personnelle et familiale laisse entrevoir un espoir réel de réinsertion de l'accusé à sa sortie de prison[5019].

142. Le Procureur n'a présenté aucun argument sur ce point.

b. Conclusions

143. La Chambre estime que le fait que l'accusé est marié et qu'il a des enfants peut être considéré comme circonstance atténuante[5020]. Elle convient que l'histoire personnelle de l'accusé dans sa dimension tant sociale que professionnelle et familiale doit également être prise en consideration[5021].

144. Les arguments de la Défense et la déclaration de l'accusé lors de sa deuxième comparution, la situation personnelle et familiale de l'accusé, qui est marié et a des enfants, conduisent la Chambre à croire à ses chances de réinsertion ; elle considère donc que sa situation constitue une circonstance atténuante.

145. Le Procureur relève, qu'à sa connaissance, Paul Bisengimana était une personne de bonne moralité, à qui on ne connaissait pas de comportements extrêmistes avant 1994[5022].

b. Les arguments de la Défense

146. La Défense fait valoir qu'il y a lieu d'examiner les traits de personnalité d'un accusé dans la perspective d'évaluer ses capacités de réinsertion[5023] et qu'ils devraient être pris en consideration dans la détermination de la peine[5024].

147. La Défense fait valoir que Paul Bisengimana était une personne de bonne moralité avant 1994. C'était un bourgmestre respecté de ses administrés. Il a apporté prosperité et développement à la commune de Gikoro tout au long de son mandat et a oeuvré sans relâche à l'amélioration des conditions de vie de la population[5025]. L'accusé n'a jamais fait preuve de discrimination ethnique contre la population tutsie, tant sur le plan personnel que sur le plan professionnel, que ce soit avant ou pendant les faits survenus en 1994[5026]. L'accusé avait un sens aigu des responsabilités[5027].

148. La Défense fait ainsi valoir que les qualités humaines évidentes de Paul Bisengimana témoignent de ses capacités de réinsertion[5028].

c. Conclusions

149. La Chambre considère que l'accusé était une personne instruite qui assumait de hautes responsabilités dans la commune de Gikoro au moment des faits incriminés. Elle rappelle que les témoins Gervais Condo et RKV ont dit que Paul Bisengimana était un bourgmestre apprécié, qu'il avait apporté prospérité et développement à la commune de Gikoro tout au long de son mandat et qu'il travaillait sans relâche à l'amélioration des conditions de vie de la population[5029]. Ces témoins ont également parlé des projets de développernent réalisé dans la commune de Gikoro par l'accusé[5030]. En outre, d'après les témoins Gervais Condo et Claudine Uwera Bisengimana, Paul Bisengimana avait un sens aigu des responsabilités, du fait de sa condition de veuf, de père et de bourgmestre[5031].

150. La Chambre juge fiables les déclarations des témoins selon lesquelles, avant d'être impliqué dans les crimes commis dans la commune de Gikoro en avril 1994, l'accusé était une personne de bonne moralité et estime que cela constitue une circonstance atténuante.

151. La Défense affirme que le fait, pour un accusé, d'avoir apporté son aide à des victimes a été considéré comme une circonstance atténuante[5032], une telle assistance étant une indication que l'accusé sera en mesure de se réinserer dans la société[5033].

152. La Défense fait valoir qu'immédiatement après la mort du Président Habyarimana, une douzaine de civils tutsis ont cherché protection auprès de Paul Bisengimana. D'après la Défense, celui-ci leur a offert refuge et leur a ainsi sauvé la vie[5034].

153. Le Procureur n'a presenté aucun argument sur ce point

b. Conclusions

154. La Chambre rappelle que Claudine Uwera Bisengimana, la deuxième fille de l'accusé[5035], est le seul témoin à avoir déclaré qu'en 1994, une douzaine environ de civils tutsis s'étaient réfugiés à son domicile[5036]. Elle se rappelait, notamment, de Laurent et ses quatre enfants, son épouse, son cousin et sa soeur ainsi que de Mukarubayiza, une dame de Duha, et ses trois enfants[5037]. Elle a déclaré que les réfugiés étaient restés jusqu'à ce que le FPR prenne le contrôle de la localité, et qu'ils s'étaient alors enfuis en compagnie de sa famille[5038]. Le témoin avait 14 ans au moment des faits[5039].

155. Claudine Uwera Bisengimana a dit que des « tueurs » avaient menacé sa famille, qu'ils accusaient de complicité parce qu'elle cachait des Tutsis et que ces menaces étaient adressées à Paul Bisengimana, son père. Toutefois, Claudine Uwera Bisengimana ne se rappelait aucun incident précis à cet égard[5040].

156. Interrogée par la Chambre, Claudine Uwera Bisengimana a déclaré que la femme et les enfants de Laurent étaient toujours en vie. En revanche, Laurent, sa soeur et leur cousin avaient été tués. Elle ne savait pas avec certitude si Marie Mukarubayiza et ses enfants étaient toujours en vie. Elle a indiqué que certains réfugiés avaient survécu tandis que d'autres avaient été tués alors qu'ils se rendaient à Kabuga[5041], mais elle ne savait pas dans quelles circonstance[5042].

157. Claudine Uwera Bisengimana a expliqué que sa famille, les réfugiés et elle-même avaient quitté tous ensemble la maison. Son père l'avait ensuite emmenée avec le reste de la famille jusqu'à un établissement scolaire à Bicumbi. Il était reparti récupérer les autres personnes mais le FPR était à leurs trousses et il avait dû emmener sa famille à Kabuga, de sorte que les réfugiés étaient restés en arrière. Lorsque son père avait voulu repartir pour les récupérer, il pleuvait et il lui avait été impossible d'aller les chercher. Claudine a ajouté que les membres de sa famille étaient restés à Kabuga, qu'ils avaient appris par la suite que ces personnes avaient été tuées, mais qu'elle ignorait qui les avait tuées[5043].

158. La Chambre relève qu'aucun autre témoin n'a dit que l'accusé avait aidé des réfugiés tutsis et que l'accusé non plus n'en a pas parlé. Le Procureur n'a pas contesté cette assertion.

159. Après avoir soigneusement examiné la déposition de Claudine Uwera Bisengimana, la Chambre considère qu'il y a de fortes chances que certains civils tutsis se soient réfugiés temporairement au domicile de Paul Bisengimana en 1994. Toutefois, sur la base de la même déposition, elle estime également établi que Paul Bisengimana s'est enfui avec sa famille, en abandonnant les réfugiés, dont certains ont été tués. Ayant examiné cette déposition dans son intégralité, la Chambre ne juge pas établi, au vu des circonstances, que l'accusé ait protégé des réfugiés tutsis et leur ait, ce faisant, sauvé la vie, comme l'a fait valoir la Défense. En conséquence, la Chambre rejette cette prétendue circonstance atténuante.

7. Absence de passé criminel et bonne conduite en détention

a. Les arguments de la Défense

160. La Défense fait valoir que l'absence de passé criminel de l'accusé[5044] et sa bonne conduite en détention[5045] peuvent constituer des circonstances atténuantes.

161. La Défense soutient que l'accusé n'a pas de passé criminel mais admet qu'elle n'a pas pu obtenir un extrait de son casier judiciaire auprès des autorités rwandaises[5046], cette démarche s'avérant extrêmement difficile.

162. La Défense soutient aussi que la conduite de Paul Bisengimana en détention a été exemplaire[5047].

163. Le Procureur n'a présenté aucun argument sur ce point.

b. Conclusions

164. La Chambre rappelle que, le 3 février 2006, elle a accepté que soit versé au dossier le certificat de bonne conduite signé par le commandant du centre de détention des Nations Unies[5048]. Ce certificat atteste que, durant la période écoulée entre son arrivée au centre, le 11 mars 2002, et la date de délivrance du certificat, le 22 décembre 2005, l'accusé n'a jamais fait l'objet d'une quelconque mesure disciplinaire et a toujours eu une conduite irréprochable.

165. La Chambre a pris en considération les arguments de la Défense et le fait que l'accusé avait été bourgmestre de la commune de Gikoro de mai 1981 au 19 avril 1994. Elle estime qu'il est fort probable que l'accusé ait eu un casier judiciaire vierge. La Chambre considère que cette conclusion constitue une circonstance atténuante[5049].

8. Age avancé et mauvais état de santé

a. Les arguments de la Défense

166. La Défense fait valoir que le Tribunal de céans et le TPIY[5050] accordent une grande importance à l'âge des accusés et invoque en particulier le jugement Rutaganira[5051].

167. Les juges devraient tenir compte de l'âge de l'accusé pour deux raisons. Premièrement, la même peine est plus dure à supporter pour une personne âgée que pour une personne jeune, à cause de la déterioration physique liée à l'âge. Deuxièmement, comme l'a fait remarquer la Cour d'appel de la Nouvelle-Galles du Sud (Australie), saisie de l'affaire Holyoak, un criminel âgé, une fois libéré, peut ne plus avoir devant lui que peu d'années à vivre[5052].

168. La Défense fait valoir que Paul Bisengimana est âgé de 57 ans[5053].

169. La Défense rappelle que le Tribunal de céans[5054] et le TPIY[5055] ont admis que le mauvais état de santé constituait un facteur entrant en ligne de compte dans la détermination de la peine.

170. Selon la Défense, Paul Bisengimana souffre de diabète et d'hépatite B depuis plusieurs années déjà[5056]. Ces deux maladies lui ont causé de graves désagréments physiologiques qui ont inévitablement été exacerbés par l'âge et la détention.

171. La Défense rappelle également qu'en 1994, Paul Bisengimana souffrait d'une crise hépatique aiguë due à l'hépatite B[5057]. Selon la Défense, la Chambre devrait tenir compte de la fragilité de son état de santé durant les faits et lui appliquer une peine équitable[5058].

172. Le Procureur n'a pas présenté d'arguments à ce sujet.

b. Conclusions

173. La Chambre a décidé d'examiner ensemble l'âge et le prétendu mauvais état de santé de l'accusé[5059]. Elle a pris acte du rapport médical confidentiel du docteur Épée admis en preuve lors de l'audience préalable à la détermination de la peine tenue le 19 janvier 2006 et indiquant que l'accusé se fait actuellement traiter pour plusieurs maladies[5060].

174. La Chambre juge infondé l'argument de la Défense selon lequel l'état de santé de l'accusé prétendument fragile à l'époque des faits devrait être pris en considération dans la détemination d'une peine de prison équitable. Elle a entendu les trois témoins à décharge sur ce point, mais relève que ceux-ci ne sont pas des experts médicaux. De plus, même s'il était établi que l'accusé souffrait du foie à l'époque des faits, rien ne prouve que ce mal aurait eu un effet sur le rôle qu'il a joué dans les massacres.

175. La Chambre estime que l'âge de l'accusé ajouté à son état de santé actuel, tel qu'établi par le rapport médical, constitue une circonstance atténuante.

9. Défaut de participation personnelle dans la commission des infractions

a. Les arguments de la Défense

176. Pour la Défense, la participation indirecte peut être considérée comme une circonstance atténuante. Un acte d'assistance à un crime est souvent considéré comme étant moins grave que la commission effective du crime et peut donner lieu à une peine plus légère[5061]. Bien qu'il ait été admis par le Tribunal dans l'affaire Ruggiu[5062], ce principe n'a pas été accepté dans l'affaire Rutaganira parce que l'absence de participation personnelle était déjà reflétée dans le mode de responsabilité, à savoir l'omission[5063]. La Défense soutient que c'est pour cette raison que Paul Bisengimana ne fait valoir cette circonstance atténuante qu'en ce qui concerne le site de l'église de Musha. Pour la Défense, Paul Bisengimana a seulement été présent à un moment donné lors de l'attaque des Tutsis réfugiés à l'église de Musha et lors de l'assassinat d'un réfugié nommé Rusanganwa. De plus, sa passivité à la vue de ces crimes a servi d'encouragement aux principaux auteurs des crimes[5064].

177. Le Procureur n'a pas présenté d'arguments sur ce point.

b. Conclusions

178. La Chambre est consciente de la nécessité de prendre en considération les circonstances particulières de l'instance, notamment la forme et le degré de participation de l'accusé à la commission des crimes[5065]. Elle rappelle que Paul Bisengimana n'a personnellement commis aucun acte violent pendant les massacres

179. Toutefois, la Chambre n'est pas convaincue par l'argument de la Défense selon lequel « Paul Bisengimana n'a fait qu'être présent un moment donné lors de l'attaque des Tutsis réfugiés à l'église de Musha ». Elle rappelle que l'accusé savait conscient que les assaillants allaient lancer une attaque contre les personnes qui s'étaient réfugiées à l'église de Musha à l'aide des armes qui avaient été distribuées, qu'il avait les moyens de s'opposer à ces tueries mais a choisi de ne rien faire. De plus, la Chambre rappelle que l'accusé était présent lorsque l'attaque a été lancée et que plus d'un millier de personnes ont été tuées à l'église de Musha, dont Rusanganwa, et qu'il savait que sa présence aurait pour effet d'encourager les auteurs à commettre des actes criminels. Par conséquent, rappelant que l'accusé était une autorité qui avait l'obligation de protéger les réfugiés, la Chambre ne considère pas comme circonstance atténuante la forme de sa participation aux massacres perpétrés à l'église de Musha.

D. CONCLUSIONS SUR LES CIRCONSTANCES AGGRAVANTES ET ATTÉNUANTES

180. La Chambre conclut que la gravité des crimes et la position officielle de l'accusé constituent des circonstances aggravantes, mais que les facteurs ci-après peuvent être considérés comme des circonstances atténuantes : l'accusé a plaidé coupable et publiquement exprimé des remords, sa situation familiale, sa bonne moralité avant les faits, l'absence d'antécédents judiciaires, sa bonne conduite pendant sa détention, son âge et sa santé fragile.

181. Toutefois, ayant examiné la gravité du crime et la position officielle de l'accusé, la Chambre conclut qu'il convient de modérer l'effet atténuant de ces facteurs.

182. La Chambre considère qu'en l'espèce, la qualité de bourgmestre de Paul Bisengimana constitue une circonstance extrêmement aggravante et que l'accusé était une personne instruite qui a dirigé la commune de Gikoro assez longtemps pour connaître amplement ses devoirs et ses responsabilités. Elle rappelle que, bien qu'il ait su que des civils tutsis avaient trouvé refuge à l'église de Musha et au complexe de Ruhanga et que des armes avaient été distribuées pour être utilisées lors des attaques contre ces réfugiés, Paul Bisengimana n'a rien fait pour arrêter les massacres, et ce malgré les moyens dont il disposait pour s'y opposer.

183. La Chambre est consciente qu'il a été dit dans le jugement Semanza qu'une peine de prison plus sévère pouvait être imposée à « celui qui ordonne l'extermination plus qu'à celui qui se contente de l'aider et de l'encourager »[5066]. Elle rappelle toutefois qu'en l'occurrence, elle n'est pas d'avis que la forme de participation de l'accusé constitue une circonstance atténuante[5067]. S'agissant des massacres perpétrés à l'église de Musha, la Chambre ne considère pas que l'accusé a commis une omission. Il avait le devoir de protéger la population et savait que sa présence lors du lancement de l'attaque aurait pour effet d'encourager les assaillants en leur donnant l'impression qu'il approuvait leurs actes criminels. Elle considère que la présence de l'accusé est une forme grave de participation, même s'il n'est pas allégué ou établi qu'il était coauteur ou qu'il a directement commis des actes criminels pendant les massacres. Elle rappelle que plus d'un millier de civils tutsis ont trouvé la mort lors des massacres perpétrés à l'église de Musha et au complexe de Ruhanga.

E. PEINE RECOMMANDÉE PAR LES PARTIES

184. L'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité signé par les parties recommande à la Chambre de première instance de condamner l'accusé à une peine d'emprisonnement d'une durée comprise entre 12 et 14 ans, diminuée du temps qu'il a déjà passé en détention provisoire[5068]. Les parties disent savoir que la fourchette des peines qu'elles recommandent ne fait pas obligation à la Chambre[5069].

1. Le Procureur

185. Le Procureur rappelle que le Tribunal a été créé par le Conseil de sécurité pour juger et punir les auteurs des atrocités commises au Rwanda, dans le but de mettre un terme à l'impunité et de promouvoir la reconstruction nationale, le rétablissement de la paix et la réconciliation[5070].

[5069] Ibid., par, 50.
[5070] Compte rendu de l'audience du 19 janvier 2006, p. 3 et 4.

186. Dans son mémoire relatif à la sentence, et lors de l'audience préalable au prononcé de la sentence, le Procureur a recommandé à la Chambre de condamner l'accusé à une peine d'emprisonnement d'une durée minimale de 14 ans, déduction faite du temps qu'il a déjà passé en detention provisoire[5071].

187. Le Procureur indique que conformément à l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité, il est disposé à appuyer toute demande déposée par l'accusé tendant à ce qu'il purge sa peine dans une prison en Europe[5072] .

2. La Defense

188. La Défense demande à la Chambre de condamner Paul Bisengimana à une peine de prison maximale de 12 ans, déduction faite du temps qu'il a déjà passé en détention provisoire[5073].

189. La Défense souligne qu'au moment d'imposer une peine d'emprisonnement à Paul Bisengimana, la question que l'on devrait se poser « c'est de savoir si les uns ou les autres nous aurions été capables de nous lever au moment opportun pour dire : « cessez ces massacres », y compris d'ailleurs au prix de votre vie[5074] ».

190. La Défense indique que Paul Bisengimana demande à la Chambre de désigner la France, ou résident sa femme et ses deux plus jeunes enfants, comme lieu d'exécution de sa peine[5075]. Dans l'alternative, il demande que soit designé l'un des pays européens qui ont indiqué leur volonté d'accueillir les condamnés du Tribunal[5076]. La Défense souligne que ceci permettrait à l'accusé de recevoir les soins de santé dont il a « véritablement besoin »[5077].

191. Enfin, la Défense rappelle à la Chambre qu'en vertu de l'article 26 du Statut, les peines prononcées par le Tribunal sont exécutées conformément aux lois en vigueur de l'Etat concerné, sous la supervision dudit Tribunal[5078].

F. CONCLUSIONS

1. Grille générale des peines d'emprisonnement appliquée par les tribunaux du Rwanda

192. La Chambre rappelle l'article 23 du Statut et l'article 101 du Règlement qui indiquent que le Tribunal tient compte de la grille générale des peines d'emprisonnement appliquée par les tribunaux du Rwanda.

193. La Chambre relève que, s'agissant de crimes graves tels que l'assassinat, la peine maximale prévue par le Code penal rwandais est l'emprisonnement à vie ou la condamnation à mort[5079]. L'article 89 dudit code precise que le complice peut subir la même peine que l'auteur principal du crime.

194. La Chambre considère que la loi organique du Rwanda, créant « les juridictions gacaca »[5080] et la loi organique[5081] modifiant et complètant ladite loi sont pertinentes en l'espèce, en ce qu'elles traitent des questions de procédure en cas de plaider coupable de crimes contre l'humanité. Une personne agissant en qualité d'autorité municipale[5082], et qui a encouragé d'autres personnes à commettre des crimes contre l'humanité, peut, après avoir plaidé coupable et sous certaines conditions[5083], être condamnée à une peine d'emprisonnement allant de 25 ans à la perpétuité[5084].

195. La Chambre est également consciente que l'article 83 du Code penal rwandais prévoit qu'en cas de circonstances atténuantes, les peines sont modifiées ou réduites comme suit : la peine de mort est remplacée par une peine d'emprisonnement d'au moins cinq ans ; la peine d'emprisonnement à perpétuité est remplacée par une peine d'emprisonnement d'au moins deux ans ; la peine d'emprisonnement de cinq à vingt ans ou supérieure à vingt ans peut être commuée en une peine d'emprisonnement d'un an[5085].

2. Déduction du temps passé en détention provisoire

196. Selon l'article 101 (D) du Règlement,

> « la durée de la période pendant laquelle la personne reconnue coupable a été placée en détention provisoire à vue en attendant d'être remise au Tribunal ou en attendant d'être jugée par une Chambre de première instance ou par la Chambre d'appel est, le cas échéant, déduite de la durée totale de sa peine ».

197. La Chambre considère la date du 4 décembre 2001 comme le début de la détention provisoire de l'accusé[5086]. Elle reconnaît à celui-ci le droit de voir déduire de la durée totale de sa peine le temps qu'il a passé en détention provisoire depuis cette date, y compris le temps supplémentaire qu'il pourrait passer en détention en attendant la décision d'appel.

198. La Chambre ne perd pas de vue la nécessité d'infliger les mêmes peines pour les mêmes crimes, mais elle reste également consciente du raisonnement tenu dans l'arrêt Kupreskić selon lequel « la Chambre de première instance n'est pas tenue de comparer expressément le cas d'un accusé à celui d'un autre »[5087]. Elle est également consciente de l'obligation qui lui est faite de s'assurer que la peine est adaptée à la situation personnelle du condamné[5088].

3. Conclusion

199. Ayant examiné les pratiques de détermination des peines du Tribunal de céans et du TPIY, la Chambre relève que les personnes reconnues coupables, en tant qu'auteurs principaux de crimes contre l'humanité tels que l'assassinat et l'extermination, ont été condamnées à des peines d'emprisonnement allant de 10 ans à l'emprisonnement à vie[5089]. Les personnes reconnues coupables de formes secondaires de participation ont généralement été condamnées à des peines moins lourdes[5090]. La peine devrait refléter l'ensemble de la conduite criminelle reprochée à l'accusé[5091].

200. Pour les raisons susmentionnées[5092], la Chambre ne prononcera pas de peine pour le chef 3 (a) savoir l'assassinat constitutif de crime contre l'humanité au sens de l'article 3 (a) du Statut.

201. La Chambre réitère qu'une reconnaissance de culpabilité peut constituer une preuve d'honnêteté de la part de l'auteur des faits et que l'on devrait accorder un certain crédit à ceux qui ont avoué leurs crimes pour encourager les autres à faire de même. De plus, elle est d'avis que le plaidoyer coupable peut aider la réconciliation nationale au Rwanda[5093].

202. Toutefois, bien qu'elle n'ait pas condamné Paul Bisengimana pour le chef d'assassinat constitutif de crime contre l'humanité, la Chambre estime qu'étant donné le statut officiel de l'accusé ainsi que le nombre de personnes tuées en sa présence – plus d'un millier – à l'église de Musha et la tuerie du complexe de Ruhanga dont il avait connaissance. Ce seul chef d'extermination justifie une peine plus lourde que celles situées dans la fourchette proposée par les parties.

V. Verdict

203. En vertu du Statut et du Règlement, de la grille générale des peines d'emprisonnement appliquée par les tribunaux du Rwanda, sur la base des arguments et des éléments de preuve présentés par les parties au cours de l'audience de détermination des peines et après évaluation des circonstances aggravantes et des circonstances atténuantes, la Chambre prononce à l'encontre de Paul Bisengimana une peine d'emprisonnement de 15 ans pour le chef 4, extermination constitutive de crime contre l'humanité, en vertu de l'article 3 (b) du Statut.

204. La Chambre conclut que Paul Bisengimana a droit à une déduction de peine de la durée de sa détention provisoire, à compter du 4 décembre 2002 jusqu'à la date du prononcé du présent jugement.

205. En vertu de l'article 102 (A) du Règlement, la peine d'emprisonnement prend effet à compter de la date du prononcé du présent jugement.

206. Selon l'article 103 du Règlement, Paul Bisengimana restera en détention en attendant qu'une décision soit prise sur le lieu de son emprisonnement, conformément à l'article 26 du Statut et à l'article 103 (A) du Règlement. La Chambre a pris acte des arguments des parties concernant l'Etat dans lequel la peine de prison sera exécutée, mais elle rappelle que le Président du Tribunal désignera cet Etat après consultation de la Chambre. Le Gouvernement rwandais et l'Etat désigné en seront informés officiellement par le Greffier.

207. Selon l'article 102 (A) du Règlement, dès le dépôt d'un acte d'appel, il est sursis à l'exécution de la sentence jusqu'au prononcé de la décision rendue sur l'appel, le condamné restant néanmoins en detention.

A. PROCÉDURE

208. Le 10 juillet 2000, le Procureur a déposé contre l'accusé un acte d'accusation daté du 1er juillet 2000, qui a été confirmé par le juge Pavel Dolenc le 17 juillet 2000[5094].

209. L'accusé était poursuivi à raison des 12 chefs d'accusation suivants : génocide ; complicité dans le génocide ; entente en vue de commettre le génocide ; incitation directe et publique à commettre le génocide; assassinat constitutif de crime contre l'humanité ; extermination constitutive de crime contre l'humanité ; torture constitutive de crime contre l'humanité ; viol constitutif de crime contre l'humanité ; autres actes inhumains constitutifs de crimes contre humanité ; et violations de l'article 3 commun aux Conventions de Genève et du Protocole additionnel II, tels que visés aux alinéas a, e et f de l'article 4 du Statut.

210. Le 8 août 2001, sur requête du Procureur, le juge Pavel Dolenc a délivré un mandat d'arrêt l'encontre de l'accusé, conformément aux dispositions des articles 54, 57 et 64 du Règlement de procédure et de preuve. Le mandat d'arrêt, qui était assorti d'un ordre de transfèrement et de détention de l'accusé au centre de détention de l'ONU et d'un ordre de recherche et de saisie, a été adressé à tous les Etats[5095].

211. Le 4 décembre 2001, l'accusé a été arrêté au Mali et transféré au centre de détention de l'ONU le 11 mars 2002.

212. Le 18 mars 2002, l'accusé a fait sa première comparution devant le juge Lloyd G. Williams et a plaidé non coupable des 12 chefs d'accusation figurant dans l'acte d'accusation du 1er jiuillet 2000[5096].

214. Le 19 août 2005, le Procureur a déposé une requête visant à retirer sa requête en modification de l'acte d'accusation du 1er juillet 2000 et le rectificatif de celui-ci[5099].

215. Le 24 août 2005, la juge Arlette Ramaroson a rejeté la requête du Procureur aux fins de retrait de sa requête en modification de l'acte d'accusation du 1er juillet 2000 et du rectificatif de celui-ci au motif qu'elle était sans objet[5100].

216. Le 21 septembre 2005, le Procureur a déposé une nouvelle requête en modification de l'acte d'accusation du 1er juillet 2000[5101].

217. Le 19 octobre 2005, le Procureur et la Défense ont déposé une requête conjointe visant à l'examen d'un accord entre Paul Bisengimana et le Bureau du Procureur aux fins d'un plaidoyer de culpabilité[5102].

218. Le 27 octobre 2005, la Chambre a fait droit à la demande d'autorisation du Procureur de modifier l'acte d'accusation du 1er juillet 2000[5103].

219. Le 31 octobre 2005, le Procureur a deposé un acte d'accusation modifié inculpant l'accusé des cinq chefs d'accusation suivants : génocide ; complicité dans le génocide; assassinat, extermination et viol constitutifs de crimes contre humanité.

220. Le 17 novembre 2005, lors de la comparution suivante, l'accusé a plaidé coupable d'assassinat et d'extermination constitutifs de crime contre l'humanité[5104] conformément à l'article 6 (1) du Statut[5105]. Il a plaidé non coupable de génocide[5106] ; de complicité dans le génocidé[5107] ; d'assassinat constitutif de crime contre l'humanité conformément à l'article 6 (3) du Statut[5108] ; d'extermination constitutive de crime contre l'humanité conformément à l'article 6 (3) du Statut[5109] ; et de viol constitutif de crime contre l'humanité[5110].

221. Sur la base de l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité conclu entre les parties, qui a été déposé le 19 octobre 2005[5111], le Procureur a demandé oralement à la Chambre de ne pas retenir les chefs d'accusation pour lesquels l'accusé avait plaidé non coupable et d'inscrire à son compte un verdict de non culpabilité en ce qui concerne ces chefs d'accusation conformément aux dispositions des articles 73, 54 et 51 du Règlement[5112]. La Chambre a refusé de se prononcer sur cette demande à ce stade de la procédure.

222. La Chambre a descellé l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité susmentionné lors d'une audience publique conformément à l'article 62 bis. Elle a indiqué les disparités qui existent entre les faits étayant les chefs d'accusation pour lesquels l'accusé avait plaidé coupable et ceux figurant dans l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité[5113]. Le Procureur a fait valoir que, comme l'accusé avait plaidé coupable des chefs 3 et 4 conformément à l'article 6 (1) du Statut, il allait modifier en conséquence les paragraphes 8, 19, 20, 21, 22, 28, 38, 39 et 42 de l'acte d'accusation modifié pour corriger les disparités susmentionnées et qu'il déposerait une version revisée de l'acte d'accusation modifié par la suite. La Défense a indiqué qu'elle ne considérait comme valable que le contenu de l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilié et qu'elle appuierait donc le Procureur dans son intention de déposer une version révisée de l'acte d'accusation modifié[5114].

223. La Chambre a rejeté oralement la requête conjointe aux fins d'un accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité entre Paul Bisengimana et le Bureau du Procureur au motif qu'il n'était pas sans équivoque. Conformément à l'alinea iii du paragraphe (A) de l'article 62, la Chambre a inscrit, au nom de l'accusé, un plaidoyer de non culpabilité en ce qui concerne les chefs d'accusation 3 et 4 de l'acte d'accusation modifié et a dûment pris acte du plaidoyer de non culpabilité pour tous les autres chefs d'accusation[5115]. La Chambre a pris note de l'engagement du Procureur de réviser l'acte d'accusation modifié afin de le conformer aux faits dont les parties sont convenues[5116].

224. Le 28 novembre 2005, le Procureur a deposé en version anglaise un second acte d'accusation modifié date du 23 novembre 2005.

225. Le 1er décembre 2005, le Procureur et la Défense ont deposé aux fins d'examen par la Chambre une nouvelle requête conjointe relative à un accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité conclu entre Paul Bisengimana et le Bureau du Procureur datée du 30 novembre 2005, à laquelle était joint un accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité entre l'accusé et le Procureur, signé par l'accusé et son conseil le 4 octobre 2005 et par le Procureur le 17 octobre 2005. Le même jour, le Procureur a deposé les versions anglaise et française du nouvel acte d'accusation modifié, daté du 23 novembre 2005.

226. Suite à une demande de renseignements de la Chambre au sujet d'une partie manquante de la version française du compte rendu de l'audience de Bisengimana du 17 novembre 2005, une version révisée dudit compte rendu a été déposée le 16 decembre 2005[5117].

227. Le 7 décembre 2005, lors d'une conférence de mise en état, la Défense a présenté deux requêtes orales : la première tendait à ce que le responsable du centre de détention lui délivre une attestation concernant la détention de l'accusé ; la seconde était que le docteur Epée délivre à la Défense une attestation sur l'état de santé de l'accusé[5118].

228. Le 7 décembre 2005, lors de sa seconde comparution, l'accusé a plaidé coupable des chefs d'accusation suivants : assassinat constitutif de crime contre l'humanité en vertu de l'article 6 (1) du Statut[5119] ; et extermination constitutive de crime contre l'humanité en vertu de l'article 6 (1) du Statut[5120]. Il a plaidé non coupable des chefs d'accusation suivants : génocide en vertu des alinéas 1 et 3 de l'article 6 du statut[5121] ; complicité dans le génocide en vertu de l'article 6 (1) du statut[5122] ; et viol constitutif de crime contre l'humanité en vertu des alinéas 1 et 3 de l'article 6 du statut[5123].

[5117] Le 7 décemhre 2005, sur requête de la Défense, une conférence de mise en état a été tenue à huis clos en présence de l'accusé. Le conseil de la Défense a fait observer qu'il ressortait de la version française du compte rendu de l'audience du 17 novembre 2005 que la Chambre n'avait pas demandé à l'accusé de plaider relativement au chef d'accusation 5 de l'acte d'accusation modifié. La Chambre a fait savoir à l'audience publique qu'il y a eu certainement une erreur dans la version française du compte rendu d'audience car l'accusé avait effectivement plaidé par rapport à ce chef d'accusation, comme il ressort de la version anglaise du compte rendu d'audience.

229. Sur la base de l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité conclu entre les parties[5124], le Procureur a demandé oralement à la Chambre de retirer et de ne pas retenir les chefs d'accusation pour lesquels l'accusé avait plaidé non coupable et de l'acquitter des ces chefs, conformément aux articles 51, 54 et 73 du Règlement[5125].

230. Conformément à l'article 62 bis, la Chambre a demandé que l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité soit descellé et divulgué au public[5126]. La Défense a demandé à la Chambre de ne divulguer que les chapitres 3, 4 et 5 de l'accord car, a-t-elle fait valoir, il n'était pas nécessaire de rendre publics les autres chapitres[5127]. La Chambre a rejeté oralement cette requête, estimant que la Défense n'avait pas donné de justification suffisante quant à la raison pour laquelle seules certaines parties de l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité devraient être divulguées[5128].

231. La Chambre a accédé à la requête conjointe tendant à ce qu'elle examine l'accord de reconnaissance de culpabilité conclu entre Paul Bisengimana et le Bureau du Procureur[5129]. Elle a declaré que les conditions posées par l'article 62 (B) étaient réunies et, en conséquence, a déclaré l'accusé coupable d'avoir aidé et encouragé la commission des crimes d'assassinat (chef 3) et d'extermination (chef 4) constitutifs de crimes contre l'humanité en vertu de l'article 6 (1) du Statut[5130]. Elle a accédé à la requête du Procureur aux fins de retrait et d'exclusion des chefs d'accusation pour lesquels l'accusé avait plaidé non coupable (génocide, complicité dans le génocide, et viol constitutif de crime contre l'humanité)[5131]. En revanche, elle a rejeté la demande d'acquittement parce que le Procureur n'avait pas motivé sa requête sur ce point[5132]. En ce qui concerne la demande de délivrance d'attestations faite par la Défense relativement à la detention et à l'état de santé de l'accusé, la Chambre a enjoint à la Défense de saisir le Greffe de ces questions[5133]. Enfin, elle a ordonné que l'accusé soit détenu dans des conditions garantissant sa sécurité[5134].

232. Au cours de la même audience, la Défense a fait savoir qu'elle entendait citer des témoins de moralité. Ainsi, le 16 décembre 2005, elle a déposé une requête en mesures de protection en faveur de ses témoins de moralité[5135]. Le 20 décembre 2005, la Chambre y a fait droit en partie.

233. La Défense a deposé son mémoire préalable au prononcé de la sentence en version française le 20 décembre 2005 ; le Procureur a déposé le sien en version anglaise le 16 janvier 2006. L'audience préalable au prononcé de la sentence s'est tenue le 19 janvier 2006. La Chambre a entendu le

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA (the "Tribunal"),

SITTING as Trial Chamber II, composed of Judge Asoka de Silva, Presiding, Judge Taghrid Hikmet and Judge Seon Ki Park (the "Chamber");

BEING SEISED OF Nzuwonemeye's "Motion for Request of Cooperation from the Government of the Netherlands Pursuant to Article 28 of the Statute" (the "Motion"), filed on 25 January 2006;

NOTING that the Prosecution has not filed a response;

CONSIDERING the Statute of the Tribunal (the "Statute"), and the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules"), in particular Article 28 of the Statute and Rule 54 of the Rules;

HEREBY DECIDES the Motion on the basis of the written submissions filed by the Defence pursuant to Rule 73 (A) of the Rules.

Submissions of the Defence

1. The Defence for Nzuwonemeye requests the Chamber to issue an order for cooperation and assistance of the Government of the Netherlands to facilitate an interview with Major Robert Alexander Van Putten.[1] The Defence team wishes to interview Major van Putten about various issues related to his role as a UNAMIR soldier in Rwanda in 1994, including (a) his perception of the events in Rwanda in 1994; (b) his perception of the military situation in Rwanda and the role of the UNAMIR; (c) the meetings he attended on 6 and 7 April 1994 with the Rwandan senior military officers; (d) the death of the 10 Belgian UNAMIR soldiers on 7 April 1994 and (e) the murder of Agathe Uwilingiyimana, former Prime Minister of Rwanda[2].

2. The Defence submits that it has received a letter from the United Nations Assistant Secretary General for Legal Affairs indicating that the United Nations has no objection to the meeting and interview, provided that the questions asked do not "concern (i) information that was provided in confidence to the United Nations by a third person or State or (ii) what happened during closed meetings or informal consultations of the Security Council or (iii) information the disclosure of which would place anyone's life in danger".[3]

3. The Defence submits that on 28 November 2005, it wrote to the Minister of Defence of the Netherlands requesting that members of the Defence team be provided with the contact details of Major Robert Alexander Van Putten, and for authorization to meet with the proposed witness[4]. On 19 December 2005, the Minister sent a reply denying the Defence request and indicating, among other things, that due to resource constraints, it is the policy of the Government of the Netherlands not to accede to non-obligatory requests related to the work of the Ad hoc Tribunals. The Minister, however, indicated that the Government of the Netherlands will comply with an order of the Trial Chamber to provide Major Van Putten as a witness.[5]

4. The Defence submits that it is not in a position to determine whether or not Major Van Putten will be called as a witness without first meeting and interviewing him. Finally, the Defence submits that, in accordance with the relevant case law of both Ad-hoc Tribunals, when the Defence is not fully aware of the nature and relevance of the testimony of a prospective witness, it is in the interests of justice to allow the Defence to meet the witness and assess his testimony.[6]

Deliberations

5. The Chamber recalls that Article 28 of the Statute imposes an obligation on States to "cooperate with the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda in the investigation and prosecution of persons accused of committing serious violations of international humanitarian law". Article 28 (2) provides a non-exhaustive list of the types of cooperation or assistance which the Tribunal may seek from States. According to the jurisprudence of the Tribunal, the Chamber's power under Article 28 may include any request or order the purpose of which is to assist the Tribunal in its mandate.[7] In addition, the Chamber recalls Rule 54 which enables it to issue any orders it deems necessary for the investigation, preparation or conduct of the trial. Acting under Article 28 and Rule 54, Trial Chamber I1 has recently issued an order for State cooperation in the instant case.[8]

6. The Chamber further recalls the jurisprudence of the Tribunal to the effect that the party seeking an order under Article 28 must, to the extent possible, specify the nature and purpose of the assistance sought from the requested State, as well as its relevance to the trial. It must also demonstrate that efforts have been made to obtain such assistance, and that these efforts have been unsuccessful.[9]

7. The Chamber notes that Paragraph 3 of the Motion specify the nature of the information sought, as well as its relevance to the trial. Annex 2 to the Motion demonstrates that the Defence has made reasonable efforts to obtain the assistance of the Government of the Netherlands by requesting authorization to meet with the former UNAMIR officer in question. The Chamber further notes that the Defence efforts have been unsuccessful because of the policy of the Government of the Netherlands not to comply with non-obligatory requests related to the work of Ad-hoc Tribunals. The Chamber therefore concludes that the criteria for granting an order requesting cooperation under Article 28 have been met.

8. Furthermore, the Chamber agrees with the Ad-hoc Tribunals' jurisprudence that when the Defence is not fully aware of the nature and relevance of the testimony of a prospective witness, it is in the interests of justice to allow the Defence to meet the witness and assess his testimony.[10]

9. However, in issuing the order for cooperation, the Chamber is mindfull of the fact that the United Nations Assistant Secretary General for Legal Affairs censer ted to the proposed meetings based on a number of conditions.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

GRANTS the Motion;

RESPECTFULLY REQUESTS the Government of the Netherlands to give its full cooperation to allow the Defence team for Nzuwonemeye to meet and interview Major Robert Alexander Van Putten in the Netherlands, at a place convenient to all parties ;

ORDERS that during the meeting, the Defence shall not ask any questions relating to (i) information that was provided in confidence to the United Nations by a third person or State; (ii) what happened during closed meetings or informal consultations of the Security Council; and (iii) information the disclosure of which would place anyone's life in danger;

DIRECTS the Registry to transmit this Decision to the relevant authorities of the Government of the Netherlands; to collaborate with the Defence for Nzuwonemeye in the implementation of this request; and to report back to the Chamber.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA (the "Tribunal"),

SITTING as Trial Chamber II, composed of Judge Asoka de Silva, Presiding, Judge Taghrid Hikmet and Judge Seon Ki Park (the "Chamber");

BEING SEISED OF Nzuwonemeye's "Motion for Request of Cooperation from the Government of Ghana and the Government of Togo Pursuant to Article 28 of the Statute" (the "Motion") filed on 25 January 2006;

NOTING that the Prosecution has not filed a response;

CONSIDERING the Statute of the Tribunal (the "Statute"), and the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules"), in particular Article 28 of the Statute and Rule 54 of the Rules;

HEREBY DECIDES the Motion on the basis of the written submissions filed by the Defence pursuant to Rule 73 (A) of the Rules.

Submissions of the Defence

1. The Defence for Nzuwonemeye requests the Chamber to issue an order for cooperation and assistance of the Government of Ghana in order to facilitate an interview with Sergeant Aboagye, Brigadier General Henry Kuame Ayidiho, Captain Amoako, Captain Kwesi Doe and Captain Samdow Zambulugu.[1] The Defence team wishes to interview the individuals concerned about various issues related to their role as IJNAMIR soldiers in Rwanda in 1994, including (a) their perception of the events in Rwanda in 1994 ; (b) their perception of the military situation in Rwanda and the role of the UNAMIR ; (c) the meetings they attended on 6 and 7 April 1994 with the Rwandan senior military officers ; (d) the death of the 10 Belgian UNAMIR soldiers on 7 April 1994 and (e) the murder of Agathe Uwilingiyimana, former Prime Minister of Rwanda[2].

2. The Defence submits that it has received a letter from the United Nations Assistant Secretary General for Legal Affairs indicating that the United Nations has no objection to the meeting and interview, provided that the questions asked do not "concern (i) information that was provided in confidence to the United Nations by a third person or State or (ii) what happened during closed meetings or informal consultations of the Security Council or (iii) information the disclosure of which would place anyone's life in danger"[3].

3. The Defence submits that on 29 November 2005, it wrote to Ghana's Minister of Defence for authorization to meet and provide the team with the contact details of the former UNAMIR soldiers named above.[4] The Defence avers that it has not yet received a response, even though it sent a reminder to the Minister on 19 December 2005, The Defence therefore fears that its request will be denied.[5]

4. Finally, the Defence submits that the Prosecution case will y be completed this year, and the Defence therefore does not have much time left to conduct its investigations. Consequently, it is urgent for the Defence team to have access to these witnesses, interview them and assess the relevance of their testimony. The Defence submits that an order from the Tribunal would help speed-up the proceedings.[6]

Deliberations

5. The Chamber recalls that Article 28 of the Statute imposes an obligation on States to "cooperate with the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda in the investigation and prosecution of persons accused of committing serious violations of international humanitarian law." Article 28 (2) provides a non-exhaustive list of the types of cooperation or assistance which the Tribunal may seek from States. According to the jurisprudence of the Tribunal, the Chamber's power under Article 28 may include any request or order the purpose of which is to assist the Tribunal in its mandate,[7] In addition, the Chamber recalls Rule 54 of the Rule which enables it to issue any orders it deems necessary for the investigation, preparation or conduct of the trial. Acting under Article 28 and Rule 54, Trial Chamber II has recently issued an order for State cooperation in the instant case.[8]

6. The Chamber further recalls the jurisprudence of the Tribunal to the effect that the party seeking an order under Article 28 must, to the extent possible, specify the nature and purpose of the assistance sought from the requested State, as well as its relevance to the trial. It must also demonstrate that efforts have been made to obtain such assistance, and that these efforts have been unsuccessful.[9]

Annex 2 to the Motion demonstrates that the Defence has made reasonable efforts to obtain the assistance of the Government of Ghana by requesting authorization to meet with the former UNAMIR soldiers in question. The Chamber further notes that the Defence efforts have been unsuccessful. Despite a reminder sent to Ghana's Minister of Defence, the Defence team has still not received an answer. The Chamber therefore concludes that the criteria for granting an order requesting cooperation under Article 28 have been met.

8. Furthermore, the Chamber agrees with the Ad hoc Tribunals' jurisprudence that when the Defence is not fully aware of the nature and relevance of the testimony of a prospective witness, it is in the interests of justice to allow the Defence to meet the witness and assess his testimony.[10]

DIRECTS the Registry to transmit this Decision to the relevant authorities of the Government of Ghana; to collaborate with the Defence for Nzuwonemeye in the implementation of this request; and to report back to the Chamber.

Submissions of the Defence

1. The Defence for Nzuwonemeye requests the Chamber to issue an order for cooperation and assistance of the Government of Togo in order to facilitate an interview with Captain Apedo.[1] The Defence team wishes to interview Captain Apedo about various issues related to his role as a UNAMIR soldier in Rwanda in 1994, including (a) his perception of the events in Rwanda in 1994; (b) his perception of the military situation in Rwanda and the role of the UNAMIR; (c) the meetings he attended on 6 and 7 April 1994 with the Rwandan senior military officers; (d) the death of the 10 Belgian UNAMIR soldiers on 7 April 1994 and (e) the murder of Agathe Uwilingiyimana, former Prime Minister of Rwanda.[2]

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA (the "Tribunal"),

SITTING as Trial Chamber II, composed of Judge Asoka de Silva, Presiding, Judge Taghrid Hikmet and Judge Seon Ki Park (the "Chamber");

BEING SEISED OF Bizimungu's « Requête de la Défense du Général Bizimungu aux fins d'obtenir l'autorisation de la Chambre de première instance II d'interjeter appel contre sa décision orale du 2 février 2006 d'admettre la pièce ID-19 (Article 73 (B) du Règlement de procédure et preuve) »[1] filed on 8 February 2006 (the "Motion");

HAVING RECEIVED AND CONSIDERED the
(i) «Observations du Procureur sur la Requête de la Défense d'Augustin Bizimungu aux fins d'obtenir l'autorisation de la Chambre de première instance II d'interjeter appel contre sa décision orale du 2 février 2006»,[2] filed on 9 February 2006 (the "Response");

[1] "Motion of the Defence for General Bizimungu Requesting Certification to Appeal the Chamber's Oral Decision of 2 February 2006 to Admit Exhibit ID-19 into Evidence (Pursuant to Rule 73 (B) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence)" (Unofficial Translation).
[2] "The Prosecution's Observations Regarding the Motion of the Defence for General Bizimungu Requesting Certification to Appeal the Chamber's Oral Decision of 2 February 2006 to Admit Exhibit ID-19 into Evidence" (Unofficial Translation).

RECALLING the Chamber's Oral Decision rendered on 2 February 2006 (the "Impugned Decision");

CONSIDERING the Statute of the Tribunal (the "Statute"), and the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules"), in particular Rule 73 (B) of the Rules;

HEREBY DECIDES the Motion on the basis of the written submissions filed by the Parties pursuant to Rule 73 (A) of the Rules.

Submissions of the Parties

The Defence

1. The Defence requests for certification to appeal the Impugned Decision pursuant to Rule 73 (B).

2. The Defence submits that the Impugned Decision raises a question that significantly affects the fairness and the outcome of the proceedings.

3. The Defence submits that ID-19 introduces a new element to the proceedings with no relevance whatsoever. The Defence further submits that there is no legal ground to admit a document into evidence only on the basis that it has been shown to a witness during his testimony.

4. The Defence submits that it opposed the admissibility of the said document during the proceedings on 2 February, arguing that (a) the document was never translated into one of the two working languages of the Tribunal, (b) the Defence for Bizimungu is not aware of the document's content and (c) the document was not part of either the examination-in-chief or the cross-examination.

5. The Defence argues that it is therefore difficult to assess whether or not ID-19 contains any incriminating elements and whether or not the document is linked to any of the subjects touched upon by the witness' testimony.

6. The Defence submits that admitting into evidence a document to which a witness made reference during his testimony deprives the Accused of his fundamental right to a full defence, causing "irreparable prejudice."[3]

7. Finally, the Defence submits that the resolution of this issue by the Appeals Chamber would advance the proceedings and have an impact on the arguments taking place before the Chamber. Furthermore, a decision by the Appeals Chamber would contribute to judicial economy, since it would not be necessary for the Trial Chamber to entertain any further arguments concerning the admissibility of similar documents.

The Prosecution

8. The Prosecution submits that admitting into evidence a document emanating from the witness and to which both the Prosecution and the Defence made reference does not affect the fairness or the progress or the outcome of the proceedings.

9. The Prosecution submits that pursuant to Rules 89 (C) and 98 of the Rules, the Trial Chamber has discretion on this issue and that the Chamber has not abused its discretion in the instant case.

[3] Motion, para. 10.

10. The Prosecution therefore prays the Chamber to deny the Defence request for certification.

Deliberations

11. The Chamber recalls its previous Decisions in which it discussed the criteria for certification under Rule 73 (B).[4] In particular, the Chamber notes the principle that decisions under Rule 73 (A) are "without interlocutory appeal" and that certification to appeal is an exception that the Chamber may grant, if the two criteria under Rule 73 (B) are satisfied.

12. The first part of the test is satisfied "if the decision involves an issue that would significantly affect the fair and expeditious conduct of the proceedings or the outcome of the trial". The Chamber agrees with the Defence that admitting documents with an unknown and possibly incriminating content into evidence may affect the fairness of the proceedings and the outcome of the trial. The Chamber, however, recalls that the document in question, a list of names drawn up by Witness GFA as part of one of his confessional statements made to the Rwandan authorities, was admitted into evidence on 2 February 2006 strictly for identification purposes.[5] Furthermore, the Chamber notes that the document was part of the material disclosed by the Prosecution, and that the Defence admitted during Witness GFA's testimony that it was in possession of the document.[6] Finally, the Chamber notes that reference was made to that document during cross-examination by the Defence on at least one occasion.[7] In light of the above, the Chamber finds the Defence submission that "irreparable prejudice" was caused by the Chamber's Oral Decision of 2 February 2006 to be grossly inaccurate and without merit. The Defence has therefore failed to meet the first criterion for certification.

13. Having determined that the first part of the two-pronged test under Rule 73 (B) has not been satisfied, the Chamber need not consider the second part.

Arusha, 27 February 2006.

Rules of Procedure and Evidence, rule 73 (B)

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA (the "Tribunal"),

SITTING as Trial Chamber II, composed of Judge Asoka de Silva, Presiding, Judge Taghrid Hikmet and Judge Seon Ki Park (the "Chamber");

BEING SEIZED OF Augustin Bizimungu's « Requête de la Défense afin de certifier l'appel de la décision rendue le 2 décembre 2005 sur l'admissibilité du témoignage du Témoin AOF (article 73 (B) Règlement de procédure et de preuve) »,[1] filed on 7 December 2005 ("the Motion");

NOTING THAT the Prosecution has not filed a response;

RECALLING its "Decision on Bizimungu's Motion in Opposition to the Admissibility of the Testimony of Witness AOF" filed on 2 December 2005 (the Impugned Decision);

CONSIDERING the Statute of the Tribunal (the "Statute"), and the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules"), in particular Rule 73 (B) of the Rules;

HEREBY DECIDES the Motion on the basis of the written brief filed by the Defence for Bizimungu pursuant to Rule 73 (A) of the Rules.

Submissions of the Defence

1. The Defence for Augustin Bizimungu requests the Chamber to grant certification of appeal against the Decision of 2 December 2005 on the admissibility of Prosecution Witness AOF's proposed testimony.

2. The Defence submits that the Decision in question substantially affects the fairness of the proceedings and the outcome of the trial, and that the Chamber should not have declared the proposed testimony of Witness AOF admissible.

[1] "Defence Motion for Certification of Appeal against the Decision of 2 December 2005 on the Admissibility of the Testimony of Witness AOF (pursuant to Rule 73 (B) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence)." (Unofficial Translation)

3. The Defence further submits that although in the Decision of 2 December 2005 the Chamber recognised that AOF's proposed testimony relates to new facts not alleged in the Indictment, the Chamber still rejected the Defence arguments, relying instead on the Appeals Chamber's 2004 decision in the Ntakirutimana case holding that the Prosecution may cure defects in the Indictment through subsequent communications. According to the Defence, this reasoning runs counter to the position enunciated by the Appeals Chamber in the cases of Ntagerura et al and Nahimana et al.

4. The Defence asserts that if the Prosecution had had sufficient evidence to charge Bizimungu with the acts alleged by AOF, those allegations would have been included in the Indictment, as were those indicated at paragraph 29 of the Indictment. The Defence further asserts that the Prosecution is attempting to cure defects in the Indictment by using a scheme of deliberate conduct to make up for the inadequacies in its choice of charges to include in the Indictment.

5. The Defence refers to an oral decision by the Ntagerura Trial Chamber stating that the Prosecution cannot be allowed to present evidence of crimes that are not charged in the Indictment. According to the Defence, that reasoning should be applied mutatis mutandis to the instant case and only the charges appearing at paragraph 29 of the Indictment should be retained. The Defence also refers to concurring decisions by the Trial and Appeals Chambers in the matter of The Prosecutor v. Tharcisse Muvunyi according to which statements referring to already existing charges are admissible, but those creating new charges are not.

Deliberations

6. The Chamber recalls Rule 73 (B) of the Rules under which a Trial Chamber may grant certification for an interlocutory appeal if (1) the decision involves an issue that would significantly affect the fair and expeditious conduct of the proceedings or the outcome of the trial, and (2) in the opinion of the Trial Chamber, an immediate resolution by the Appeals Chamber may materially advance the proceedings.

7. The Chamber further recalls that its Decision of 2 December 2005 was divided into two parts, reflecting the two primary arguments advanced by the Defence. In the first part, after considering the Defence proposition that Witness AOF's proposed testimony contained allegations that did not appear in the Indictment, the Chamber concluded that those allegations were not new charges but merely new material facts underpinning already-existing charges. In the second part, the Chamber agreed with the Defence that an Accused person cannot be convicted on the basis of allegations falling outside the Tribunal's temporal jurisdiction, but observed that such allegations could nonetheless be admitted into evidence, among other reasons, for the purpose of proving a pattern of conduct that extended into the period of the Tribunal's temporal jurisdiction.

8. The Chamber notes that the Defence has repeatedly challenged the proposed testimony of Prosecution witnesses on the grounds that the allegations about which such witnesses would testify were not contained in the Indictment. In each case, the Chamber has stated that the admissibility of the evidence would be determined during the course of the witness's testimony while the weight to be attached thereto would be decided at the conclusion of the proceedings.

9. Similarly, in the instant situation, the Chamber is of the view that the Defence Motion for certification is premature, as Prosecution Witness AOF is yet to testify. The Chamber notes that it was only on Monday, 27 February 2006 that the Prosecution filed a notice indicating the points of the Indictment to which Witness AOF will testify.[2] At this point in the proceedings, it is not known whether the witness will attempt to introduce testimony about any allegations not contained in the

[2] The Prosecution asserts in the notice that Witness AOF will testify to the allegations contained in the following paragraphs of the Indictment: 2, 3, 17, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 27, 59, 61, 68, 69 and 70.

Indictment. It would therefore not be proper for the Chamber to render a ruling on the admissibility of the witness's testimony without having heard it first.

10. Furthermore, in the Chamber's view, the issues involved here have not yet risen to such a level that they would significantly affect the fair and expeditious conduct of the proceedings or the outcome of the trial. Consequently, the Chamber concludes that the Defence has failed to satisfy the first condition for the certification of an interlocutory appeal. Having made such a determination, the Chamber need not consider the second criterion for certification.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the Motion for certification of appeal.

HEREBY DECIDES the Motion on the basis of the written briefs filed by the Parties pursuant to Rule 73 of the Rules.

Submissions

Relief Sought by the Defence

1. The Defence requests the Chamber to declare irrelevant and therefore inadmissible parts of the testimony given by Prosecution Witness AOG on 20 February 2006, relating to (1) the alleged relationship between the MRND and CDR parties, (2) the events at Nyamirambo Stadium, and (3) the speech delivered by Leon Mugesera in 1992.

Supporting Arguments

2. The Defence argues that the objectionable parts of Witness AOG's testimony concern material facts that are not pleaded in the Indictment and that > "cannot reasonably be linked to any form of participation such as joint criminal enterprise or a formal charge in the Indictment such as conspiracy in relation to the Accused François-Xavier Nzuwonemeye."[2]

3. The Defence first submits that, pursuant to Rule 47 (C) of the Rules, material facts underpinning the charges in the Indictment must be pleaded with sufficient specificity. In support of this argument, the Defence recalls the Appeals Chamber's statement in The Prosecutor v. Niyitegeka, that the

> "obligation on the part of the Prosecution [is] to state the Material Facts underpinning the Charges in the Indictment, but not the evidence by which such Material Facts are to be proven".[3]

The Defence further refers to a decision in the case of The Prosecutor v. Pauline Nyiramasuhuko, where the Appeals Chamber stated that

> "for an indictment to be pleaded with sufficient particularity, it must set out the material facts of the Prosecution case with enough detail to inform the defendant clearly of the charges against him or her so that he or she may prepare his or her defence."[4]

4. The Defence submits that neither the Indictment nor the Pre-Trial Brief contain any reference to CDR, Nyamirambo, or Leon Mugesera.[5] The Defence also points out that the Mugesera speech was specifically pleaded in the Indictment against Casimir Bizimungu et al.[6] The Defence then argues that the jurisprudence on allowing the Prosecution to lead evidence not included in the Indictment can be summarized by the following statement from a decision of the Trial Chamber in the case of The Prosecutor v. Protais Zigiranyirazo:

> "the process of curing an indictment does take place only when the material fact was already in the Indictment in a certain manner, not when it was not included at all."[7]

5. The Defence further submits that the Prosecution did not adequately meet the requirement of stating the material facts underpinning the charges in the Indictment relating to conspiracy. According to the Defence, "paragraph 24 of the English version of the Indictment, in its vagueness does not come near the requirements of sufficiency in pleading" and cannot be used as a basis for leading the evidence that the Prosecution seeks to introduce.[8]

6. The Defence then suggests that the "Prosecutor relies heavily on the joint criminal enterprise theory to lead evidence from Witness AOG on important material facts, which are not pleaded in the Indictment",[9] and argues that the Prosecution cannot do this because the joint criminal enterprise theory is itself not properly pleaded in the Indictment. Citing The Prosecutor v. Simic,[10] the Defence emphasizes that in order to rely on the joint criminal enterprise theory, the Prosecution must specify the following in Indictment: the nature or purpose of the joint criminal enterprise; the time at which or the period over which the enterprise is said to have existed; the identity of those engaged in the enterprise, in so far as their identity is known, but at least by reference to their category as a group; and the nature of the participation by the accused in that enterprise. The Defence submits that joint criminal enterprise is not specifically referred to in this Indictment, and that none of the criteria listed above are set forth in it.[11]

6. The Defence further submits that the mention of the theory of joint criminal enterprise liability in the Pre-Trial Brief is not sufficient to cure its absence from the Indictment.

The Prosecution's Response

7. In response to the Motion, the Prosecution first submits that paragraphs 22-25 of the Indictment refer to the emergence of a doctrine of exclusion that developed in the institutions of Rwanda, beginning in October 1990.[12] The Prosecution emphasizes the necessity of understanding the context surrounding the genocide, citing as support the decision of this Chamber on 15 July 2004, in which the Chamber refused to strike paragraphs 25, 26, 27 and 28 of the Indictment because "these particular paragraphs may be of great significance in establishing that there was a criminal enterprise for a conspiracy to commit genocide".[13]

8. According to the Prosecution, an Indictment should not be a catalogue of historical facts; it should outline the main tenets of the doctrine underlying the genocide, and allow the Pre-Trial Brief, the disclosure of evidence, and the testimony of witnesses to fill in the details.

9. The Prosecution points out that the Mugesera Speech was delivered to the Defence in Volume VI of its disclosure of supporting materials, sent by registered mail to the Registrar on 17 March 2004. The report of the International Commission of Inquiry set up by various human rights organizations in 1993, which analyzed the Mugesera speech, was disclosed at the same time. The Prosecution further remarks that Mugesera's indoctrinating works are specifically referred to in paragraph 13 of the Pre-Trial Brief.

10. The Prosecution then submits that paragraphs 23-25 of the Indictment do not always relate to the personal conduct of the Accused; their purpose is to explain a policy and outline a doctrine whose goal was to federate extremist Hutus. Citing the Nitiyegeka and Blaskic judgments in general as support, the Prosecution argues that the degree of specificity required in these circumstances is not the same as when the personal conduct of the Accused is in issue.[14]

11. Quoting from the Nahimana Judgment, the Prosecution submits that "conspiracy to commit genocide can be inferred from coordinated action by individuals who have a common purpose and are acting within a unified framework",[15] and suggests that the Accused Nzuwonemeye, by virtue of the conduct referred to in paragraphs 34, 38 and 39 of the Indictment, participated in the rupture of the constitutional order that laid the groundwork for the genocide.[16]

12. The Prosecution asserts that the Defence made a request similar to the present one during the hearing of 20 February 2006, and that this request was denied by the Chamber. Given this, the Prosecution argues that the admissibility of a second motion on this issue is debatable at best.[17]

13. The Prosecution further argues that by virtue of Rule 72, as well as the decision taken by Judge Arlette Ramaroson on the occasion of the new initial appearance convened on 30 April 2004, the Defence was obliged to raise any defects in the form of the Indictment within one month of receiving the translation it requested. According to the Prosecution, this deadline having passed, the Defence may not raise this objection during the course of the trial.

14. Finally, the Prosecution submits that according to Rule 98 bis, if the Defence considers that the charges against the Accused Nzuwonemeye are insufficient or that the crime of conspiracy has not been established, it must wait until the close of the Prosecution's case to make these arguments.

The Defence Reply

15. In reply to the Prosecution's Response, the Defence argues that the objections being raised in relation to the testimony of Witness AOG go to the substance and not the form of the Indictment, and that the thirty day deadline imposed by Rule 72 therefore does not apply in this instance.[18]

16. With respect to the specificity of the Indictment in relation to the conspiracy charge, the Defence argues that mere disclosure of a potential exhibit is insufficient to enable the defence to prepare its case, citing as support a decision in The Prosecutor v. Radoslav Broanin and Momir Talic, in which a Trial Chamber of the ICTY held that "notice that such evidence will be led in relation to a particular offence charged is not sufficiently given by the mere service of witness statements by the prosecution pursuant to the disclosure requirements imposed by Rule 66 (A)."[19]

17. The Defence further notes that the Prosecution voluntarily removed an explicit reference to the Mugesera speech from paragraph 4.11 of the second Indictment dated 17 October 2002.[20]

18. Finally, the Defence remarks that the Prosecution does not address the issue of joint criminal enterprise in its Response, and reiterates that this theory was not pleaded in the Indictment.[21]

HAVING DELIBERATED

19. The Chamber recalls the provisions of Article 20 (4) of the Statute, which sets out minimum guarantees for the Accused, including the right to be informed promptly and in detail of the nature and cause of the charge against him; Rule 47 (C) of the Rules, which stipulates that the indictment must set forth a concise statement of the facts of the case and of the crime with which the suspect is charged; and Rule 89 (C) which allows the Chamber to admit any relevant evidence which it deems to have probative value.

20. The Chamber considers that the gist of the Defence argument has two limbs to it: first, the Defence argues that the alleged relationship between the MRND and CDR parties, the arrest and detention of five thousand people at Nyamirambo stadium in 1990, and a speech given by Léon Mugesera in 1992, are material facts that have not been pleaded in the Indictment or the Pre-trial brief and therefore witness AOG's evidence relating to those facts is irrelevant and inadmissible. Second, the Defence argues that the Prosecution relies on the theory of joint criminal enterprise to lead evidence on important material facts not pleaded in the Indictment, and that this is impermissible because the theory of joint criminal enterprise has itself not been properly pleaded in the Indictment.

21. The Chamber notes that the Indictment does not explicitly refer to the relationship between the MRND and the CDR party, the arrests at Nyamirambo stadium, or the 1992 speech of Léon Mugesera. The Chamber considers that material facts underpinning the charges have to be pleaded in the Indictment. If they are not, the Indictment is defective. However, the defect can be cured by giving the Defence clear, timely, and consistent notice of the said facts through other communications from the office of the Prosecutor such as the pre-trial brief, the Prosecutor's opening statement, or witness statements.[22] Notice of material facts must be received in such circumstances that the Defence cannot claim to have been taken by surprise if the Prosecutor seeks to lead evidence relating to the facts in question.[23]

22. On the other hand, if the evidence sought to be tendered does not, in the Chamber's view, constitute a material fact, the Chamber must be satisfied that it is otherwise relevant so as to justify admission. In this respect, the Chamber is mindful of the jurisprudence of the Tribunal to the effect that evidence relating to events that happened prior to the temporal jurisdiction of the Tribunal can be admitted if (i) it is relevant to an offence continuing into the mandate year; (ii) the evidence provides context or background to the crime charged; or (iii) the evidence constitutes 'similar fact evidence' that demonstrates a consistent pattern of conduct.[24]

[20] Reply, para. 9.
[21] Reply, para.10.
[22] The Prosecutor v. Elizaphan Ntakirutimana and Gérard Ntakirutimana, Cases N°ICTR-96-10-A and ICTR-96-17-A, 13 December 2004, para. 25, 27.
[23] Ibid., at para 27. The Appeals Chamber noted that whether 'facts' are 'material' depends on the nature of the case. It also indicated that 'mere service of witness statements by the [p]rosecution pursuant to the disclosure requirements' of the rules does not suffice to inform the Defence of material facts that the prosecution intends to prove at trial.
[24] The Prosecutor v. Bagosora et al., Case N°ICTR-98-41-T, "Decision on Admissibility of Proposed Witness DBY", 18 September 2003, paras 4-14.

23. With respect to the relationship between the MRND and CDR parties, and the arrest and detention of people at the Nyamirambo stadium in 1990, the Chamber notes that neither of these events is specifically pleaded in the Indictment. They evidently took place before 1994, thus falling outside the temporal jurisdiction of the Tribunal. The Prosecutor, however, argues that they are relevant to the context that engendered the genocide and are therefore admissible on that ground.

24. The Chamber recalls a recent Decision in the Zigiranyirazo case, where the Trial Chamber held that evidence relating to the MRND and the establishment of Interahamwe, the Arusha Accords, the 'Hutu Power' movement and the Bugesera campaign were

> "facts [that] are only relevant to the background and the context of the specific allegations brought against the Accused."

The Chamber notes that the facts in the Zigiranyirazo case were not pleaded in the Indictment, but were mentioned in the pre-trial brief.[25]

25. The Chamber has considered witness AOG's testimony relating to the CDR Party and the arrest and detention of people at the Nyamirambo stadium, and is satisfied that this testimony is relevant to the background of some of the allegations laid against the Accused. Specifically, the evidence is relevant to the background and historical context of paragraphs 22 through 25 of the Indictment, which describe the conspiracy to commit genocide charged in Count 1, and paragraphs 26 through 37, which describe the acts that were executed in preparation for the genocide.

26. With respect to the Léon Mugesera speech, the Chamber again notes that this is not specifically pleaded in the current Indictment. The Chamber notes, however, that paragraph 13 of the Pre-Trial Brief dated 1 September 2004, mentions 'articles' authored by Mugesera, and his role in the incitement of hatred against the Tutsis. The Chamber further notes that the text of the Mugesera speech was disclosed to the Defence on 17 March 2004 as part of the supporting materials. In the circumstances, the Chamber considers that neither the mention, nor the content of Mugesera's speech by witness AOG in his testimony on 20 February 2006 could have taken the Defence by surprise. The Chamber is satisfied that the Defence received clear, timely and consistent notice of the Prosecution's intention to rely on the speech as relevant supporting material with respect to the strategy of "incitement to hatred" and to the "definition of the enemy" described in paragraph 25 of the Indictment. Consequently, the Prosecution's failure to specifically mention the speech in the Indictment does not render witness AOG's testimony on this issue inadmissible.

27. Having decided that the evidence of witness AOG on the relationship between the MRND and CDR parties, the arrest and detention of people at Nyamirambo stadium, and the speech of Léon Mugesera is admissible on the grounds discussed above, the Chamber sees no need, at this stage of the proceedings, to determine the question whether joint criminal enterprise has been adequately pleaded in the Indictment.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

DENIES the Motion in its entirety.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA (the "Tribunal"),

SITTING as Trial Chamber II, composed of Judge Asoka de Silva, Presiding, Judge Taghrid Hikmet and Judge Seon Ki Park (the "Chamber");

BEING SEISED OF Nzuwonemeye's "Motion for Request of Cooperation from the Government of Belgium Pursuant to Article 28 of the Statute" filed on 18 May 2006 (the "Motion");

NOTING that the Prosecution has not filed a response;

CONSIDERING the Statute of the Tribunal (the "Statute"), and the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules"), in particular Article 28 of the Statute and Rule 54 of the Rules;

HEREBY DECIDES the Motion on the basis of the written submissions filed by the Defence pursuant to Rule 73 (A) of the Rules.

Submissions of the Defence

1. The Defence for Nzuwonemeye requests the Chamber to issue an order for cooperation and assistance of the Government of Belgium in order to facilitate an interview with Major Maggen and Colonel Joseph Dewez.[1] The Defence wishes to interview the individuals concerned about various issues related to their role as UNAMIR (United Nations Assistance Mission for Rwanda) soldiers in Rwanda in 1994, including (a) their perception of the events in Rwanda in 1994; (b) their perception of the military situation in Rwanda and the role of the UNAMIR; (c) the meetings they attended on 6 and 7 April 1994 with the Rwandan senior military officers; (d) the death of the 10 Belgian UNAMIR soldiers on 7 April 1994; and (e) the murder of Agathe Uwilingiyimana, former Prime Minister of Rwanda.[2]

2. The Defence submits that it has received a letter from the United Nations Assistant Secretary General for Legal Affairs indicating that the United Nations has no objection to the meeting and interview, provided that the questions asked do not concern "(i) information that was provided in confidence to the United Nations by a third person or State or (ii) what happened during closed meetings or informal consultations of the Security Council or (iii) information the disclosure of which would place anyone's life in danger."[3]

3. The Defence submits that on 28 November 2005, it wrote to Belgium's Minister of Defence to provide the team with the contact details of the former UNAMIR soldiers named above and for authorization to meet with them.[4] On 4 January 2006 the Defence received a letter from the Minister of Defence of Belgium forwarding the request to the Ministry of Justice.[5] On 10 February 2006, the Defence received a letter from the Ministry of Justice denying its request to interview Major Maggen and Colonel Dewez, on the ground that the Ministry considers Article 28 of the Statute to only apply to requests made to a State by the Prosecutor or by the Tribunal, and therefore the Defence request could not be granted.[6] The Ministry, however, indicated that this request would be granted, upon an Order of the Tribunal.[7]

4. Finally, the Defence submits that it is not fully aware of the nature and relevance of the testimony of these prospective witnesses and therefore it is in the interests of justice to allow the Defence to meet Major Maggen and Colonel Dewez to assess their potential testimonies.[8]

Deliberations

5. The Chamber recalls that Article 28 of the Statute imposes an obligation on States to

> "cooperate with the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda in the investigation and prosecution of persons accused of committing serious violations of international humanitarian law."

Article 28 (2) provides a non-exhaustive list of the types of cooperation or assistance which the Tribunal may seek from States. According to the jurisprudence of the Tribunal, the Chamber's power under Article 28 may include any request or order the purpose of which is to assist the Tribunal in its mandate.[9] In addition, the Chamber recalls Rule 54 of the Rules which enables it to issue any orders it deems necessary for the investigation, preparation or conduct of the trial at the request of either party or proprio motu. Acting under Article 28 and Rule 54, the Chamber has recently issued four orders for State cooperation in the instant case.[10]

6. The Chamber further recalls the jurisprudence of the Tribunal to the effect that the party seeking an order under Article 28 must, to the extent possible, specify the nature and purpose of the assistance sought from the requested State, as well as its relevance to the trial. It must also demonstrate that efforts have been made to obtain such assistance, and that these efforts have been unsuccessful.[11]

7. The Chamber notes that the Motion[12] specifies the nature of the information sought, as well as its relevance to the trial. Annex 2 to the Motion demonstrates that the Defence has made reasonable efforts to obtain the assistance of the Government of Belgium by requesting authorization to meet with the former UNAMIR soldiers in question. The Chamber further notes that Annex 3 to the Motion demonstrates that the Defence efforts have been unsuccessful. The Chamber therefore concludes that the criteria for granting an order requesting cooperation under Article 28 have been met. Additionally, the Belgian authorities have indicated their willingness to comply with such a request, provided that it is in the form of an order issued by this Tribunal.

8. Furthermore, the Chamber agrees with the ad-hoc Tribunals' jurisprudence that when the Defence is not fully aware of the nature and relevance of the testimony of a prospective witness, it is in the interests of justice to allow the Defence to meet the witness and assess his testimony.[13]

9. However, in issuing the order for cooperation, the Chamber is mindful of the fact that the United Nations Assistant Secretary General for Legal Affairs consented to the proposed meetings based on a number of conditions.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, THE CHAMBER

GRANTS the Motion;

RESPECTFULLY REQUESTS the Government of the Kingdom of Belgium to give its full cooperation to allow the Defence team for Nzuwonemeye to meet with and interview Major Maggen and Colonel Dewez, at a place convenient to all the Parties;

ORDERS that during the meetings, the Defence shall not ask any questions relating to:

(i) information that was provided in confidence to the United Nations by a third person or State;
(ii) what happened during closed meetings or informal consultations of the Security Council; and
(iii) information the disclosure of which would place anyone's life in danger;

DIRECTS the Registry to transmit this Order to the relevant authorities of the Government of the Kingdom of Belgium; to collaborate with the Defence for Nzuwonemeye in the implementation of this request; and to report back to the Chamber.

CONSIDERING the Statute of the Tribunal (the "Statute"), and the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (the "Rules"), in particular Article 20 (4) (a) of the Statute and Rule 47 (C) of the Rules;

HEREBY DECIDES the Motion on the basis of the written submissions filed by the Parties pursuant to Rule 73 (A) of the Rules.

Submissions of the Parties

The Defence Motion

1. The Defence requests the Chamber to prohibit the Prosecutor from leading evidence through Witness ANF, on some important material facts that are not pleaded in the Amended Indictment of 23 August 2004.

2. The Defence submits that Prosecution Witness ANF's statement deals almost exclusively with important events alleged to have occurred in Ntyazo commune and in the town of Nyanza, in which some gendarmes might have been involved whereas in the entire Indictment, there is no direct or indirect reference to the events at Ntyazo and Nyanza or to the alleged involvement of gendarmes in these events. The Defence refers in particular to the following alleged events:

a. On 18 April 1994, the gendarmes at Nyanza attacked a vehicle full of Tutsis and killed them at a distance of about 3 kilometres from the Ntyazo Communal Office.
b. Biguma told his fellow gendarmes at his friends' office to start killing.
c. At the Ntyazo trade centre, gendarmes incited the population and some Burundian refugees to kill Tutsis.
d. Chief Warrant Officer Biguma and his men pursued Nyagasasa, the Bourgmestre of Ntyazo, hunted him down, and killed him in Nyanza, together with numerous Tutsis including Pierre Nyakarashi.
e. Sergeant Kabera killed Tutsis in Ndago cellule, Bugali secteur.
f. The massive attack and extermination of refugees on Karama hill with the participation of gendarmes.
g. The attack by gendarmes on refugees in Kaguma secteur.
h. The murders of Rwabuhihi and Nzayinambaho

3. The Defence submits that the Chamber should resolve this matter beforehand and definitively, and thus save itself from the trouble of having to deal with this question during the witness's testimony, which could slow down the proceedings considerably.

4. The Defence refers to Article 20 (4) (a) of the Statute and, relying in particular on the "Cyangugu" Judgement[5] and the Blaskic[6] Appeals Chamber Judgement, submits that the Prosecution is under the obligation to plead the material facts underpinning the charges against the accused in the Indictment itself regardless of the form of responsibility.

5. The Defence submits that the process of curing a defective Indictment takes place only in exceptional and very limited circumstances when the material fact was already in the Indictment in a certain manner, not when it was not included at all.

6. The Defence submits that ANF's statement is dated 4-6 June 2001 and the most recent Amended Indictment is dated 24 (sic) August 2004. On 30 April 2004, the Accused pleaded not guilty to the charges in the Indictment amended by the Prosecutor. By that time, the Prosecutor had had ANF's statement in his possession for almost three years. The Defence therefore argues that the Prosecution could have included in the Indictment the material facts contained in ANF's statement with the aim of making it conform to the letter and the spirit of the Statute and of the jurisprudence developed by the Tribunal and the ICTY.

7. The Defence submits that the Prosecutor deliberately failed to do so and therefore cannot at this stage, lead evidence on these material facts without first filing a motion to amend the Indictment.

8. Finally, the Defence submits that the material facts contained in the Indictment impose a limitation and the Prosecutor should not be authorised to introduce new facts.

The Prosecution Response

9. The Prosecution requests the Chamber to dismiss the Motion as baseless.

10. The Prosecution acknowledges that the facts related by Prosecution Witness ANF are not mentioned in Counts 2 to 8 of the Indictment, but does not agree that they are absent from Count 1 (conspiracy to commit genocide).

11. The Prosecution submits that after a close reading of paragraphs 5, 18, 22, 25 and 53 of the Indictment, it can be said that the facts to which Witness ANF will testify are not new with respect to the Accused person's responsibility in 1994 and with respect to the acts or omissions attributed to him in the above-mentioned paragraphs. On the contrary, the Prosecution argues that the facts clearly illustrate the criminal conspiracy pleaded at Paragraph 22 of the Indictment as well as the refusal of the Accused, who was Chief of Staff of the National Gendarmerie, to assume the responsibilities incumbent upon him by protecting the civilian population.

12. The Prosecution further submits that the Accused has had the opportunity and the means to adequately prepare his defence through subsequent disclosures made to him regarding Witness ANF. These disclosures have been numerous, detailed, and more than reasonably timely, in order to allow for an appropriate defence.

13. The Prosecution points out that the redacted statements of Prosecution Witness ANF were transmitted to the Defence on 16 March 2004 and the Pre-Trial Brief on 17 June 2004. The Prosecution further points to paragraphs 89, 90, 92, 97, 98 of the Pre-Trial Brief, the factual summary of Prosecution Witness ANF's statement at page 108 of Annexure IV to the Pre-Trial Brief and the Opening Statement and submits that the Accused was notified of these facts about three to seven months before the start of the trial and was therefore able to adequately prepare his defence.

14. Finally, the Prosecution submits that it was through his own research effort that the Senior Trial Attorney learnt in March 2004 about certain statements concerning Gendarmerie Captains

Bilikunzira and Sebuhura and the Senior Trial Attorney immediately disclosed those witness statements to the Defence on 16 March 2004. According to the Prosecution, the trial date had already been set and it would not have been possible for the Chamber to accept another amendment to the Indictment.

Bizimungu's Response in Support of the Motion

15. The Defence for Bizimungu submits that it is in the interests of justice that the questions raised by the Defence for Ndindiliyimana should be examined by the Chamber.

16. The Defence for Bizimungu further submits that the question of material facts not pleaded in the Indictment is a fundamental aspect of the Accused's right to a full defence and a fair trial.

17. The Defence for Bizimungu argues that it has always submitted that the Indictment is the only accusatory instrument under the Statute and the Rules and that evidence may be adduced only in regard to the allegations contained in the Indictment.

18. The Defence for Bizimungu submits that it would be unfair for the Prosecution to introduce material facts that constitute new charges not pleaded in the Indictment.

19. Finally, the Defence for Bizimungu submits that the required specificity for the pleading of charges applies also to the pleading of material facts underpinning the charge of superior responsibility.

The Defence Reply

20. In its reply, the Defence for Ndindiliyimana prays the Chamber to reject the Prosecution's explanation as to why the material facts of Witness ANF's expected testimony were not included in the Indictment, submitting that the Office of the Prosecutor is one entity and that the Military II Prosecution team has always had various persons involved in the management of the case. The Defence submits that the Office of the Prosecutor had Prosecution Witness ANF's statement in its possession for several years and it deliberately abstained from pleading the material facts in the Indictment.

21. Defence for Ndindiliyimana also prays the Chamber to reject the Prosecution's argument that by the time Prosecution Witness ANF's statement was 'discovered', a trial date had already been set and it would not have been possible for the Chamber to accept another amendment to the Indictment, submitting that it is not up to the Parties to anticipate the decision of the Chamber.

22. The Defence for Ndindiliyimana asks the Chamber to take note of the Prosecution's admission that the facts related by Prosecution Witness ANF are not mentioned in Counts 2 to 8 of the Indictment and submits that the Prosecution therefore does not intend to prove Counts 2 to 8 through Prosecution Witness ANF.

23. The Defence for Ndindiliyimana further submits that, contrary to the Prosecution's assertion, paragraphs 5, 18, 22, 25 and 53 in support of Count 1 do not contain the facts which Witness ANF is expected to testify about.

24. Finally, the Defence for Ndindiliyimana wishes to reiterate its position that it has to defend itself only against the Indictment to which the Accused has pleaded not guilty and that it has prepared its defence only with respect to the material facts included in that document and on which the Prosecution has based its case.

Deliberations

25. The Chamber recalls Article 20 (4) (a) of the Statute which guarantees an accused the right

> "[t]o be informed promptly and in detail in a language which he or she understands of the nature and cause of the charge against him or her".

In addition, Rule 47 (C) of the Rules provides that

> "[t]he indictment shall set forth the name and particulars of the suspect, and a concise statement of the facts of the case and of the crime with which the suspect is charged".

In the jurisprudence of the Tribunal and the ICTY, this translates into an obligation on the part of the Prosecution to state the material facts underpinning the charges in the Indictment, but not the evidence by which such material facts are to be proved at trial.[7] The determination of whether a particular fact is material and whether that fact has been pleaded with the requisite degree of specificity must be made on case-by-case basis.[8] The Appeals Chamber in Ntakirutimana reasoned that in cases where the Prosecution alleges personal physical commission of specific criminal acts, such as murder of a named individual, the indictment should set forth such material facts as "the identity of the victim, the time and place of the events and the means by which the acts were committed." On the other hand, such detail need not be pleaded where the sheer scale of the alleged crimes makes it impracticable to require the same degree of specificity in such matters.[9]

26. With regard to the pleading of superior responsibility, the Chamber recalls that the Indictment has to set forth (a) (i) that the accused is the superior of (ii) subordinates sufficiently identified, (iii) over whom he had effective control – in the sense of a material ability to prevent or punish criminal conduct – and (iv) for whose acts he is alleged to be responsible; (b) the conduct of the accused by which he may be found to (i) have known or had reason to know that the crimes were about to be committed or had been committed by his subordinates, and (ii) the related conduct of those others for whom he is alleged to be responsible; and (c) the conduct of the accused by which he may be found to have failed to take the necessary and reasonable measures to prevent such acts or to punish the persons who committed them.[10] Failure to plead these material facts renders the Indictment defective.[11]

27. The Chamber however recalls that defects in the Indictment may be cured where the Prosecution provides the Accused with timely, clear and consistent information underpinning the charges against him or her.[12] The Appeals Chamber has expressly found that certain defects in an Indictment may be cured through the Prosecution's Pre-trial Brief, during disclosure of evidence or through proceedings at trial.[13] Whether a defect in the Indictment has been cured by subsequent disclosure involves, inter alia, consideration of the period of notice given to the Accused and the importance of the information to the ability of the Accused to prepare his or her defence.[14] Mention of a material fact in a witness statement does not necessarily constitute adequate notice: the Prosecution must convey that the material allegation is part of the case against the Accused.[15] The essential question is whether the Defence has had reasonable notice of, and a reasonable opportunity to investigate and confront the Prosecution case.[16]

28. In the instant case, the Chamber notes that Prosecution Witness ANF's proposed testimony does not involve the direct participation of the Accused in the alleged events in Butare préfecture in 1994 but refers to his superior responsibility as set forth in paragraphs 61, 78, 109 and 118 and, to a certain extent, in Paragraph 53 of the Amended Indictment of 23 August 2004. The Chamber notes, however, that the events contained in Prosecution Witness ANF's statement are not specifically pleaded in the Indictment.

29. Although the scale of the alleged events mentioned in Witness ANF's proposed testimony makes it impractical to plead the facts with the same specificity required for acts involving the direct participation of an accused person, the Chamber considers it entirely possible for the Prosecution to have included the alleged events in the Indictment in at least a summarised form. The Chamber recalls that the Prosecution had been in possession of Witness ANF's statement for almost three years by the time the Indictment was amended. The Chamber is of the opinion that the Prosecution's argument that a member of its team "discovered" ANF's statement only in 2004 cannot serve as an excuse for the failure to plead the events in the Indictment. The Chamber finds the Indictment defective on this point.

30. With regard to the question whether the defect has been cured by subsequent disclosure, the Chamber recalls the summary of Prosecution Witness ANF's proposed testimony[17]:

> Witness will testify that following the death of President Habyarimana, gendarmes including their commanders Adjutant Biguma and 1st Sgt. Twagirayezu incited the local authorities and Hutu civilians to kill all Tutsis in Butare Prefecture and assisted them in killing the Tutsis and moderate Hutus including the bourgmestre of Ntyazo commune, Nyagasaza, the families of the President of the Community Court in Ntyazo, Rwabuhihi Jean Pierre and his brother Nzayinambaho, at various locations in Ntyazo commune especially at the Karama Hill in Karuyumba Cellule. Witness will also say that the attackers looted Tutsi's property.

31. The Chamber notes that, according to Annex IV of the Pre-Trial Brief, the summary is relevant to Count 2 and 3 (Genocide and Complicity in Genocide) and Count 4 and 5 (Murder and Extermination as Crimes against Humanity).[18] Furthermore the Chamber notes that paragraphs 92 and 97 of the Pre-Trial Brief specifically mention the alleged massacre of Tutsis on Karama hill "by a Gendarmerie detachment led by Sergeant Twagirayezu." Finally, the Chamber notes that the list of points of the Indictment to which Prosecution Witness ANF will testify includes, inter alia, paragraphs 53, 61, 78 and 109.[19]

32. The Chamber observes that the Pre-Trial Brief and its annexes were filed on 1 September 2004, more than 20 months prior to Prosecution Witness ANF's expected testimony. Prosecution Witness ANF's redacted statement was disclosed in March 2004, the unredacted version in November 2005. The Chamber considers that the summary of Prosecution Witness ANF's proposed testimony as annexed to the Pre-Trial Brief, the specific reference to Counts 2-5, the indications in paragraphs 92 and 97 of the Pre-Trial Brief itself and the list of points in the Indictment put the Accused on sufficient notice that the alleged events in Witness ANF's statement are part of the Prosecution case. The Chamber further considers that the Defence has had timely notice of, and reasonable opportunity to investigate, these allegations. The Chamber therefore finds that the defect in the Indictment has been cured by subsequent disclosure. Accordingly, the Prosecution is allowed to lead evidence through Prosecution Witness ANF on the alleged events in Butare préfecture in 1994.

THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL FOR RWANDA (the "Tribunal"),

SITTING as Trial Chamber II, composed of Judge Asoka de Silva, Presiding, Judge Taghrid Hikmet and Judge Seon Ki Park (the "Chamber");

NOTING that Judge Taghrid Hikmet, who is currently away from the seat of the Tribunal, has had the opportunity to read this Decision in draft, agrees with it, and has authorised the Presiding Judge to sign it on her behalf.

Introduction

The trial is proceeding on the basis of the amended Indictment of 23 August 2004. The Prosecution has already called 66 witnesses and is still continuing its case. Prior to the appearance of Prosecution Witness ANF (the Witness), the Defence for Ndindiliyimana filed a motion objecting to the admissibility of the anticipated evidence of the Witness on the basis that it related to material facts not pleaded in the Indictment.[1] In its Decision of 15 June 2006 (the "Impugned Decision"), the Chamber acknowledged that the Indictment was defective in respect of the facts contained in the Witness statement. Nonetheless, the Chamber found that the defects had been cured through subsequent disclosure, specifically the summary of the Witness proposed testimony as annexed to the Pre-Trial Brief and paragraphs 92 and 97 of the Pre-Trial Brief, which provided the necessary details to put the Accused on notice.[2] The Chamber further noted that such notice was given since 1 September 2004, more than 20 months prior to the expected testimony of the Witness, thus providing timely, clear and consistent information to enable the defence to fully prepare its case. The Chamber therefore denied the Defence Motion. On 22 June 2006, the Defence for Ndindiliyimana filed a Motion requesting for certification of appeal against the Impugned Decision.[3] On 26 June 2006, the Prosecution filed its response.[4]

Submission of the Parties

The Defence

1. The Defence submits that the Impugned Decision raises a question that affects the fairness, progress and outcome of the proceedings and that a resolution by the Appeals Chamber would materially advance the proceedings as per Rule 73 (B).

2. The Defence further submits that the Impugned Decision touches upon a fundamental problem since it allows the Prosecution to introduce into evidence material facts and massacre sites not contained in the Indictment, bearing in mind that the latter is the only accusatory instrument against which the Accused has to defend himself. The Defence further submits that by the Impugned Decision, the Chamber indirectly allowed an amendment and an extension of the Indictment without having followed the procedure provided to that effect, in flagrant violation of the Statute, the Rules and the jurisprudence developed by the two ad hoc Tribunals.

3. The Defence contends that a favourable decision by the Appeals Chamber would save the Chamber time in two ways. Firstly, the Chamber will not have to spend several hours or days listening to the Witness testimony; and secondly, it will not have to spend several hours at a later stage of the proceedings analyzing the transcripts relating to that testimony in order to draw any legal or factual conclusions.

4. Finally, the Defence submits that an immediate resolution by the Appeals Chamber would materially advance the proceedings as it would reduce the number of potential Defence witnesses and the Defence itself would not need to oppose the allegations contained in the Witness statement.

The Prosecution

5. In its response, the Prosecution did not address any of the relevant issues raised by the Defence.[5]

Deliberations

6. The Chamber recalls Rule 73 (B) which reads as follows:

> Decisions rendered on such motions are without interlocutory appeal save with certification by the Trial Chamber, which may grant such certification if the decision involves an issue that would significantly affect the fair and expeditious conduct of the proceedings or the outcome of the trial, and for which, in the opinion of the Trial Chamber, an immediate resolution by the Appeals Chamber may materially advance the proceedings.

7. The Chamber recalls its previous Decisions in which it discussed the criteria for certification under Rule 73 (B).[6] In particular, the Chamber stresses the principle that decisions under Rule 73 are "without interlocutory appeal" and that certification to appeal is an exception that the Chamber may grant, if the two criteria under Rule 73 (B) are satisfied.

8. The Chamber is of the view that the admissibility of material facts not pleaded in the Indictment is an issue which would significantly affect the fairness and expeditious conduct of the proceedings.

9. However, the Chamber considers that the Appeals Chamber has already provided ample and clear directions as to how to address the issue of defective indictments and the possible remedies to cure such defects.[7] In particular, the jurisprudence provides strong safeguards to ensure that an accused is not prejudiced by reliance on evidence adduced to sustain material facts for which he was not put on

[5] In its Response of 26 June 2006, the Prosecution submits that the French version of its Pre-Trial Brief was disclosed to the Defence on 17 June 2004 and that it was the translated English version that was disclosed on 1 September 2004. The Prosecution further submits that that before the end of its case, it intends to call four more witnesses, including ANF. After having done so, the Prosecution will have called a total 70 out of 116 factual witnesses initially listed.

HEREBY DECIDES the Motion on the basis of the written brief filed by the Parties pursuant to Rule 73 (A) of the Rules.

Submissions of the Parties

The Defence

1. The Defence for Nzuwonemeye prays the Chamber to order Dr. Alison des Forges to disclose to the Defence documents mentioned in the footnotes of her expert report.

2. The Defence submits that the material quoted in support of the expert's report can be divided in three categories: books and reports that are in the public domain and therefore accessible by the Defence ('first category'); documents in possession of the office of the Prosecutor ('second category') and finally, documents that appear to be only in the possession of Dr. Alison des Forges ('third category').

3. The Defence acknowledges possession of the documents falling in the first category, and that it has asked the Prosecution to disclose to it the documents of the second category. With respect to the documents of the third category, the Defence submits that those documents are crucial for the Defence to conduct a proper cross-examination.

4. Finally, the Defence submits that it should not be required to search for all the documents, which form the basis of the report of the proposed expert witness.

The Prosecution Response

5. The Prosecution submits that there is no Rule requiring an expert to disclose to the Defence, prior to his or her testimony, the text of publications that he or she read or documents that the expert has consulted in order to form his or her opinion.

6. The Prosecution further submits that there is nothing to indicate that the expert is in possession of all of the documents to which he or she refers in the report at the time she files the report.
